PREFACE

strictly adhered to. A transcription has been used to indicate pronunciation. The pronunciation given is that of Tehran. No attempt has been made to describe local variations of this. An English—Persian and Persian—English vocabulary for the convenience of the student will be published as a separate volume, but it is not intended that these vocabularies should enable him to dispense with the use of a dictionary. A full description of all words is not given: for this the student must refer to a dictionary. Further, the meanings given are those in current use, which, in many cases, differs from the classical usage.

PREFACE TO KEY

My Persian Grammar, first published in 1953, was designed as a teaching grammar. A key, therefore, seemed unnecessary. For students working on their own, however, the lack of a key has proved a disadvantage; and it is my hope that its inclusion in the present volume will be of assistance to such students.

Experience in teaching, using the Grammar as a textbook, has convinced me that the incorporation of some additional exercises would be beneficial to the student. Consequently, a number of exercises and some passages of continuous prose for translation into Persian have been added. Words not included in the Vocabulary, which are required for these translations have been added in footnotes at the end of the relevant passage, except in the case of the final passage. The Persian version of this has been taken from a published translation (with a few minor alterations) and has been included as an example of translation by one of the leading contemporary translators. In this case I have thought it best to give the new words, or new meanings for words already in the Vocabulary, in a list at the end of the Persian version. I have not included extra passages for translation from Persian into English on the grounds that such material in the form of readers, books and newspapers is readily available.

Alternative translations have been put in round brackets, but in general no attempt has been made to give more than one translation. Square brackets have been used for words not in the original, the addition of which is required by the sense.

INTRODUCTION

1. Persian is written in the Arabic script, which is read from right to left. The letters پ p, چ c, ژ z and گ g were added by the Persians to the Arabic alphabet. For the complete Persian alphabet see para. 5 below.

2. VOWELS:

i approximating to the vowel in the English word 'beat' and represented by ی in the Arabic script, e.g.

بید bid, willow-tree.

e approximating to the vowel in the English word 'bed' and not represented in the Arabic script, e.g.

به beh, better.

a intermediate between the vowels in the English words 'bed' and 'bad' and not represented in the Arabic script, e.g.

باد bad, bad.

α approximating to the vowel in the English word 'barred' and represented by ل in the Arabic script, e.g.

باد bad, wind.

o rather more rounded than the vowel in the English word 'book' and not represented in the Arabic script, e.g.

بردن bordan, to carry.

u approximating to the vowel in the English word 'booed' and represented by و in the Arabic script, e.g.

بود bud, he, she or it was.

i, e and a are front vowels; α, o and u back vowels. i, α and u are longer than e, a and o. The latter group, namely e, a and o, are slightly prolonged when followed by two consonants in the same syllable, but their articulation time, even when thus prolonged, is less than that of i, α or u.

A vowel approximating to the vowel in the English word 'bit' is heard in a few words, notably شش seš 'six' (except in the expression شش و بش seš o beš 'six and five' used in backgammon, when the vowel of شش approximates to the e of the English word 'bed'). This vowel belongs, as regards articulation time, to the group e, a and o. Its occurrence, however, is so rare that it has not been thought necessary to represent it in the transcription by a separate symbol, and it will accordingly be transcribed e.

In a few words ı followed by ı̇ represents a vowel intermediate between a and o. Its articulation time is also intermediate between that of a and o. Again, its occurrence is not so common that it has been thought necessary to represent it by a separate symbol (see Lessons v, para. 2 and xiv, para. 2).

See also Introduction to Part II.

3. The formation of the vowels is shown in the following diagram. In this diagram the tongue positions of the vowels are compared with those of the eight cardinal vowels.¹ The dots indicate the position of the highest point of the tongue.

4. DIPHTHONGS. These are ēi, āi, ūi, ōu and āi. The starting-point and direction of the diphthongs is shown in the following diagram. ēi and āi are represented in the Arabic script by یَـ; ūi by وی, āi by ای and ōu by وِـ. In the transcription the diphthongs are shown by a ligature mark; thus in گوی gūi 'ball' the ūi represents a diphthong whereas in گویی gui 'thou sayest' u and i are separate vowels.

¹ The cardinal vowels are fixed vowel sounds which have fixed tongue positions and known acoustic qualities. Their sounds are recorded in Linguaphone, No. DAJO 1/2 H.M.V. B 804.

5. THE ALPHABET. The majority of the letters of the alphabet have four forms, which are used according to the position of the letter in the word. These forms are initial, medial, final joined and final unjoined. The letters ا, د, ذ, ر, ز, ژ and و cannot join the following letter, hence the existence of two final forms, one joined and the other unjoined. The medial and final joined forms of ا, د, ذ, ر, ز, ژ and و are thus identical as also are their initial and final unjoined forms. The term 'initial' is used to cover the case not only of a letter in an initial position in a word, but also of a medial following one of the letters which cannot join the following letter. The table overleaf shows the various forms of the letters, and gives their Persian names, phonetic description and transcription. The system adopted is a 'transcription' and not a 'transliteration', one symbol being used for all letters having the same sound. Thus ث, س and ص are all transcribed by s.¹

6. The sign * is known as hamze. In Persian words it only occurs in a medial position and is written over a bearer, thus ؤ. It is a grammatical mark indicating that there is a junction of vowels and it will not be represented in the transcription, e.g.

پائیز paiz, autumn.

It performs this function in the following cases also:

(a) Between the Present Stem of a verb if this ends in a vowel and the personal endings of the 2nd pers. singular and plural and the 1st pers. plural, e.g.

میگویی	migui , thou sayest.	میایی	miai , thou comest.
میگوئید	miguid , you say.	میائید	miaid , you come.
میگوئیم	miguim , we say.	میائیم	miaim , we come.

(b) Between a word ending in ا a or و u and the Indefinite ی -i (see Lesson 1, para. 2 (c) below), e.g.

پاروی	parui , a spade.
دانایی	danai , a wise man.

(c) Between the final ا a or و u of a word and the suffixed Abstract ی -i (see Lesson x), e.g.

زناشویی	zanafui , matrimony.
توانایی	tavanai , power, strength.

¹ An exception is made in the case of غ and ق, which are transliterated as g and q respectively.

Name	Final unjoined	Final joined	Medial	Initial	Transcription	Phonetic description	Remarks
alef	ا	ا	ا	ا	—	alef , or alef hamze as it is properly known, represents at the beginning of a word a glottal plosive and may be vowelised e , a or o . In a medial or final position it represents the vowel a . E.g. emruq 'to-day', asb 'horse', ofiad 'he fell', bad 'wind', ma 'we'.	The vowel a in an initial position is written ا and known as alef madda , e.g. آب ab 'water'. alef is written before the vowels i and u at the beginning of a word, e.g. اين in 'this', او u 'he'.
be	ب	ب	ب	ب	b	Voiced bilabial plosive	See also ط below. ت (and ط) differ from the English t , which is alveolar. See also ص and ض below. = j in the English word 'John'. = ch in the English word 'church'.
pe	پ	پ	پ	پ	p	Voiceless aspirated bilabial plosive
te	ت	ت	ت	ت	t	Voiceless aspirated dental plosive
se	س	س	س	س	s	Voiceless alveolar fricative
jim	ج	ج	ج	ج	j	Voiced post-alveolar plosive
cim	ع	ع	ع	ع	c	Voiceless post-alveolar fricative

he hoti	ح	ح	خ	هـ	ا	h	Glottal fricative	English students should be careful to give h (whether this is ح or هـ below) its full value in a final position, e.g. صباح sabah 'morning', راه rah 'road', and also when followed immediately by another consonant, e.g. شهر شهر 'town',
xs	خ	خ	خ	هـ	هـ	x	Voiceless velar uvular with scrape	Approximating to the ch in the Scottish word 'loch', dal	د	د	د	د	د	d	Voiced dental plosive	د differs from the English d, which is alveolar
zal	ذ	ذ	ذ	ذ	ذ	z	Voiced alveolar fricative	See ز, ض and ظ below
re	ر	ر	ر	ر	ر	r	Voiced alveolar with weak roll or tap
ze	ز	ز	ز	ز	ز	z	Voiced alveolar fricative
ze	ز	ز	ز	ز	ز	z	Voiced post-alveolar fricative	See ذ above and ض and ظ below = j in the French word 'jour'
sin	س	س	س	س	س	s	Voiceless alveolar fricative
fin	ش	ش	ش	ش	ش	f	Voiceless post-alveolar fricative	See ث above and ص below = sh in the English word 'show' sad	ص	ص	ص	ص	ص	s	Voiceless alveolar fricative	See ث and ص above
rad	ض	ض	ض	ض	ض	z	Voiced alveolar fricative	See ذ and ز above and ظ below
as	ط	ط	ط	ط	ط	e	Voiceless aspirated dental plosive	See ت above
za	ظ	ظ	ظ	ظ	ظ	z	Voiced alveolar fricative	See ذ, ز and ض above

Name	Final unjoined	Final joined	Medial	Initial	Transcription	Phonetic description	Remarks
ān	ع	ع	ا	ا	ʔ	Glottal plosive	ع is a glottal plosive and is represented in the transcription by 'ʔ'. It corresponds to the check in the voice substituted for ʔ in Cockney and other dialects in such words as 'bottle', 'water', etc., e.g. baʔi 'some', vaʔ 'situation'. In an initial position when it is followed immediately by a vowel it is omitted from the transcription, e.g. omr 'life'. The combination of ع preceded by a and followed by i tends to become ai , e.g. sai 'effort'. See ق below
yān	غ	غ	ا	ا	ɣ	Voiced or voiceless uvular plosive according to phonetic context
fa	ف	ف	ا	ا	f	Voiceless labio-dental fricative
qaf	ق	ق	ا	ا	q	Voiced or voiceless uvular plosive according to phonetic context	ق and ق are not differentiated by most speakers. Both are pronounced as a voiceless uvular plosive (formed by the back of the tongue coming into contact with the rearmost part of the soft palate), unless between two back vowels when they tend to be pronounced as a voiced uvular plosive

Name	Final unjoined	Final joined	Medial	Initial	Transcription	Phonetic description	Remarks
he havaṭ	•	ا	ه	ه		Glottal fricative	In the words دو 'two', تو 'thou', and بوṭe 'bush' the و is pronounced o (see para. 2 above) In words derived from Turkish و is also sometimes pronounced o, thus دوشك (دوشك) doṣak 'mattress', تومان toṃan 'ten rials', توتون toṭun 'tobacco'. يورتمه yortme 'trotting, trot' See ح above. In a final position in certain words when preceded by the vowel e, • is not pronounced. This will be called the 'silent' h. This is the case when • represents a verbal, adjectival or nominal suffix, e.g. گشته goṣte 'said', نامه name 'letter', ماهه mahe 'monthly'. The • of نه 'no' and به bale 'yes' is not pronounced. See also Introduction to Part II, para. 11 In certain contexts ى represents the eṣafe and is pronounced ye (see Lesson II, para. 7)
ye	ى	ى	•	ي	y i ē, âi	Semi-vowel See para. 2 above See para. 4 above

(d) Between a word ending in ā or u and the Relative -i (see Lesson VIII), e.g.

... کتابهای که ketabhai ke, the books which...

... آدم پرونی که adame porrui ke, the bold (brazen) man who...

7. Over the 'silent' h a hamze represents:

(a) The Indefinite -i, e.g.

نامه namei, a letter.

(b) The 'Adjectival' -i, e.g.

سرمه sormei, dark blue.

(c) The personal ending of the 2nd pers. sing., e.g.

گفته goftei, Thou hast said.

(d) The ezāfe (see Lesson II, para. 6), in which case it is represented in the transcription as ye, e.g.

نامه من nameye man, my letter.

8. For the hamze in Arabic words see the Introduction to Part II, paras. 8 and 9.

9. The following orthographic signs exist, but are not in common use:

ـَ fathe = a.

ـُ zamme = o.

ـّ tafdid, used to mark a doubled consonant.

ـْ sokun or jazm, used to show a consonant is not vocalized.

These signs are placed above or below the letter to which they refer, e.g.

دَر dar, door.

کَشْت kešt, cultivation.

پُر por, full.

The student should note that although the sign tafdid is rarely used the doubling of a consonant should be strictly observed in pronunciation (except in a final position).

PART I

LESSON I

The Indefinite ی -i. The Personal Pronouns. The Demonstrative Pronouns.

1. There is no definite or indefinite article in Persian.¹ Broadly speaking, a noun becomes indefinite by the addition of ی -i, e.g.

کتاب ketab, (the) book.

کتابی ketabi, a book.

2. (a) If the noun ends in the 'silent' h preceded by e, the Indefinite ی -i is not written. The sign َ known as hamze is written over the 'silent' h,² e.g.

پنجره panjare, (the) window.

پنجره‌ panjarei, a window.

The sign َ is usually omitted in writing, the reader being expected to know from the context whether the word is definite or indefinite. (See also para. 15 (e) below.)

(b) The Indefinite ی -i is not added to a word ending in ی i; thus صندلی sandali is used to mean '(the) chair' or 'a chair'.

(c) If the noun ends in ا a or و u a hamze over a bearer is inserted between the final ا a or و u and the Indefinite ی -i to mark the transition between the final long vowel of the noun and the Indefinite ی -i. It will not be represented in the transcription, e.g.

پا pa, (the) foot.

پایی pai, a foot.

پارو paru, (the) wooden spade.

پارویی parui, a wooden spade.

² Words ending in ه h take the Indefinite ی in the usual way, e.g.

راه rah, (the) road.

راهی rahi, a road.

3. If two or more nouns are joined by و va 'and' and are indefinite, the Indefinite ی -i is added to the final one only, the group being regarded as a syntactical whole, e.g.

کتاب و مداد و قلمی بمن داد ketab va medad va qalami be man dad, He gave a book, a pencil and a pen to me.

4. A noun qualified by the Interrogative Adjective چه ce 'what' usually takes the Indefinite ی -i, e.g.

چه کتابی ce ketabi, what book?

5. The Indefinite ی -i never carries the stress.

6. Persian has no inflexions. When a definite noun is the direct object of the verb, this is marked by the addition of the suffix را -ra, e.g.

کتاب را بمن داد ketabra be man dad, He gave the book to me.

But

کتابی بمن داد ketabi be man dad, He gave a book to me.¹

7. If more than one definite noun forms the direct object of the verb, these are regarded as a syntactical whole, and the را -ra is placed after the final noun, e.g.

مداد و قلم را بمن داد medad va qalamra be man dad, He gave the pen and the pencil to me.

8. را -ra never carries the stress.

9. The Personal Pronouns are:

من man, I.

ما ma, we.

تو to,² thou.

شما soma, you.

او u, he, she.³

ایشان ifan, they.⁴

¹ There is a third possibility, namely:

کتاب بمن داد ketab be man dad, He gave a book to me.

Here there is no differentiation of number or particularization, whereas in the example above کتابی ketabi implies 'some book or other' or 'a particular book, from among the class of articles known as book'. See also Lesson XII, para. 1 (a) (iii) and para. 3.

² For the pronunciation of تو to see Alphabetical Table in Introduction.

³ There is no gender in Persian. Different words are used to differentiate between male and female animals, or the words نر nar or نر nare 'male' and ماده made 'female' are added before or after the name of the animal, which in the latter case takes the etafe.

⁴ See also Lesson XIV, para. 1 (a).

وی vēi is an alternative form to او u but is seldom used in Colloquial Persian.

The Demonstrative Pronoun آن an 'that' is used to mean 'it'. Its plurals آنها anha and آنان anan are used in Colloquial and Literary Persian respectively in place of ایشان ifan 'they'.

10. The Personal Pronouns are by their nature definite and consequently take را -ra when the direct object of a verb. من man 'I' followed by را -ra contracts into مرا mara 'me' and تو to 'thou' into ترا tora 'thee'.

11. If the grammatical subject of a sentence is a personal pronoun, this is implicit in the verb and is not usually expressed separately unless it is desired to lay special emphasis on the pronoun.

12. آن an 'that' and این in 'this' may be either Demonstrative Pronouns or Demonstrative Adjectives. As Demonstrative Pronouns they stand alone, e.g.

آن چیست an cist, What is that?

این چیست in cist, What is this?

آن an and این in when used as pronouns may mean 'the former' and 'the latter' respectively.

When used as Demonstrative Adjectives آن an and این in precede the noun they qualify, e.g.

آن کتاب an ketab, that book.

این میز in mix, this table.

13. آیا aya is a particle used to introduce a question which does not contain an interrogative word, e.g.

آیا این کتاب است aya in ketab ast, Is it this book?

In conversation questions which do not contain an interrogative word are usually indicated by a rising intonation at the end of the sentence (see Appendix VI) rather than by the use of آیا aya.

14. The normal word order in simple sentences is Subject (unless this is contained in the verb), Object, Indirect Object, Extension, Verb.

15. The following orthographical points should be noted:

(a) آن an 'that' is frequently joined to the following word, provided the initial letter of this is a consonant, e.g.

آنکتاب an ketab, that book.

(b) The preposition be 'to' is usually joined to the following word, the final e of be being omitted, e.g.

بمن be man, to me.

The following combinations should be noted:

باین be in, to this.

بان be an, to that.

باو be u, to him, to her.^a

(c) The initial alef of ast 'he, she or it is' can be omitted, the st being joined to the preceding word, provided the final letter of this is not the 'silent' h, e.g.

این کتابست in ketab ast, This is the book.

If the preceding word ends in a or u, the initial alef of ast is always omitted and the a of ast elided, e.g.

آنجااست anjast, He, she or it is there.

اوست ust, It is he, it is she.

Similarly, if ast follows the word to 'thou' the initial alef of ast is sometimes dropped and the a of ast elided, e.g.

توست tost, It is thou.

If ast follows a word ending in i, the initial alef of ast is usually dropped and the a of ast elided, e.g.

کتابست ketabist, It is a book.

(d) ce 'what' followed by ast is written čist and pronounced cist, e.g.

این چیست in cist, What is this?

(e) If a noun ending in the 'silent' h is made indefinite ai can be written after the word in place of the hamze over the 'silent' h (see para. 2(a) above), e.g.

پنجره‌ای panjarei, a window.

^a Some writers insert a d between the preposition be and an in, u, and ifan, e.g.

بدان bedan, to that.

بدین bedin, to this.

بدو bedu, to him, to her.

بدیشان bedifan, to them.

If such a noun is followed by است ast 'is' the alef of است ast is omitted, e.g.

پنجره ایست panjareist, It is a window.

16. Word stress falls on the final syllable of nouns and pronouns. Stress is marked in the transcription by an upright stroke preceding the syllable which carries the stress, e.g.

کتاب ke'tab, book.

صندلی sanda'li, chair.

شما fo'ma, you.

As stated above, neither the Indefinite -i nor -ra carries the stress, thus کتابی ke'tabi, a book.

کتاب را ke'tabra, the book (acc.).

VOCABULARY

این	in , this.	کاغذ	kayaz , paper.
آن	an , that; it.	پنجره	panjare , window.
جا	ja , place.	پا	pa , foot.
اینجا	inja , here.	پارو	paru , a kind of wooden spade.
آنجا	anja , there.	چیز	ciṡ , thing.
کجا	koja , where?	چه	ce , what?
من	man , I.	به (i)	be , to.
تو	to , thou.	و	va , and.
او	u , he, she.	یا	ya , or.
ما	ma , we.	است	ast , he, she or it is.
شما	fo'ma , you.	نیست	nist , he, she or it is not.
ایشان	ifan , they.	داد	dad , he, she or it gave.
آنها	anha , those; they.	دید	did , he, she or it saw.
میز	miṡ , table.	بله	bale , yes.
صندلی	sandali , chair.	نخیر	naxêr , no.
کتاب	ketab , book.	آیا	aya , an interrogative particle (see para. 13 above).
مداد	medad , pencil.
قلم	qalam , pen.

EXERCISE 1

کتاب اینجا است — مداد آنجا است — آن میز است و این صندلی است — این قلم است — کجاست — اینجا نیست — این چیست — این کتابی است — چه کتابی است — کتابی بمن داد — قلمرا بمن داد — شمارا کجا دهد — او را اینجا دهد — این مدادرا بمن داد — میز و صندلی و کتابرا دهد — مداد و قلمرا باو داد — میز و صندلی را بشما داد — مارا دهد — صندلی اینجا نیست

EXERCISE 2

1. This is the book. 2. He saw a book. 3. Where did he see the pen and the pencil? 4. He gave a book to me. 5. Here is the table. 6. What is this? 7. This is a pen. 8. He gave the pen and the pencil to you. 9. The book is here and the pencil is there. 10. What is that? 11. That is a chair. 12. Where did he see the book? 13. He saw it here. 14. He saw you.

LESSON II

The Plural of Nouns. The 'Possessive' ezafe. Possessive Adjectives and Pronouns. Interrogative Pronouns. The Verb 'to be'.

1. The plural of nouns is formed by the addition of -ha ها to the singular, e.g.

مداد medad, pencil.

مدادها medadha, pencils.

2. If a noun denotes a human being the plural can also be formed by adding -an ان to the singular, e.g.

زن zan, woman.

زنان zanan, women.

In Classical Persian the distinction between the plural in -ha ها for irrational beings and inanimate objects and the plural in -an ان for human beings is usually observed, but in Colloquial Persian there is a tendency to form the plural of all nouns in -ha ها.

3. (a) If a noun ends in the 'silent' h preceded by e, unless it represents the Arabic ه (see Part II, Introduction, para. 11), the 'silent' h is changed into g گ before the plural termination -an ان, e.g.

بچه bacce, child.

بچهگان baccegan, children.

(b) If a noun ends in a ا a y ی is inserted between the final a and the plural termination -an ان, e.g.

گدا gada, beggar.
گدایان gadayan, beggars.

(c) If a noun ends in u و a y ی is inserted between the final u and the plural termination -an ان, e.g.

راستگو rastgu, (the) truthful person.
راستگویان rastguyan, truthful persons.

or there is merely an off-glide from the final u و to the plural termination -an ان, e.g.

بازو bazu, forearm.
بازوان bazuan, forearms.¹

4. The plural terminations -ha ها and -an ان carry the stress, e.g.

کتابها ketab'ha, books.
زنان za'nan, women.

5. Possession is shown in Persian by the addition of e, known as the ezafe, to the thing possessed, which precedes the possessor. The ezafe was originally the Old Persian relative pronoun and was an independent word. In New Persian it is an enclitic. It is not represented in writing unless the word to which it is added ends in a ا or u و (see para. 7 below), e.g.

کتاب آن مرد ketabe an mard, that man's book.
باغ منزل baye manzel, the garden of the house.

If the direct object of a verb is definite and formed by two or more words connected by the 'possessive' ezafe, -ra را is added after the final word in the group, e.g.

پسر آن مرد را دید pesare an mardra did, He saw that man's son.

6. If the noun to which the ezafe is added ends in the 'silent' h or in i ی the semi-vowel y is inserted in pronunciation between the final e or i and the e of the ezafe but is not represented in writing. A hamze is sometimes written over the 'silent' h or the i ی to represent the ezafe, but is usually omitted, e.g.

بچه این زن bacceye in zan, this woman's child.
صندلی آن مرد sandaliye an mard, that man's chair.

7. If the noun to which the ezafe is added ends in a or u, the ezafe is written as ی and in pronunciation the semi-vowel y is inserted between the final a or u of the word and the e of the ezafe, e.g.

کتابهای آن مرد ketabhaye an mard, the books of that man.

بازوی این زن bazuye in zan, this woman's forearm.

8. The ezafe never carries the stress, e.g.

باغ منزل 'baye man'zel, the garden of the house.

9. The English Possessive Adjectives can be translated by placing the Personal Pronoun after the noun qualified by the English Possessive Adjective and adding the ezafe to the noun, e.g.

کتاب من ketabe man, my book (lit. the book of me).

اسب شما asbe شما, your horse.

10. The English Possessive Pronoun is translated by the Personal Pronoun preceded by the word مال mal,¹ to which the ezafe is added, e.g.

این کتاب مال من است in ketab male man ast, This book is mine.

But این کتاب من است in ketabe man ast, This is my book.

11. مال mal is also used to express the possessive case of nouns but only when this case is used pronominally, e.g.

این اسب مال آن مرد است in asb male an mard ast, This horse is that man's (belongs to that man).

باغ مال پسر اوست bay male pesare ust, The garden is his son's (belongs to his son).

12. که ke and کی ki are Interrogative Pronouns meaning 'who'. کی ki forms a plural کیها kiha. Both که ke and کی ki take را -ra; که ke followed by را -ra contracts into کرا kerā, e.g.

کرا دید kerā did, Whom did he see?

While کی ki is more frequently used in Colloquial Persian than که ke, the latter is more frequently written.

13. Before describing the Verb and the formation of tenses it will be convenient to introduce here certain tenses of the verb بودن budan 'to be' (Present Stem باش bas), which is used to conjugate the verb (for stress on verb forms see below Lesson III, para. 9 and Lesson IV, para. 8):

PRETERITE

1st pers. sing.	بودم	budam	} I was, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	بودی	budi
3rd pers. sing.	بود	bud
1st pers. pl.	بودیم	budim	} We were, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	بودید	budid
3rd pers. pl.	بودند	budand

PAST PARTICIPLE

بوده bude, been.

PRESENT

1st pers. sing.	میشم	mibasam	} I am, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	میشی	mibasi
3rd pers. sing.	میشد	mibasad
1st pers. pl.	میشیم	mibasim	} We are, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	میشید	mibasid
3rd pers. pl.	میشند	mibasand

SUBJUNCTIVE PRESENT

1st pers. sing.	باشم	basam	} I may be, etc. ¹
2nd pers. sing.	باشی	basfi
3rd pers. sing.	باشد	basfad
1st pers. pl.	باشیم	basim	} We may be, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	باشید	basid
3rd pers. pl.	باشند	basand

For the formation of the other tenses of بودن budan see Lessons III and IV.

1st pers. sing.	بوم	bovam	1st pers. pl.	بویم	bovim
2nd pers. sing.	بوی	bovi	2nd pers. pl.	بوید	bovid
3rd pers. sing.	بود	bovad	3rd pers. pl.	بوند	bovand

This is not used in Colloquial Persian. See also Lesson IV, 1 (d).

14. The Negative is formed by adding the prefix : na- to the positive, e.g.

نبودم nabudam, I was not.
 نمیباشم namibafam, I am not.
 نباشم nabafam, I may not be.

15. The Present of the verb 'to be' can also be formed:

(a) By the addition of the following personal endings to the preceding word, except in the 3rd pers. sing., for which است ast 'is' is used:

1st pers. sing.	م(ا)	-am, I am, etc.	1st pers. pl.	یم(ا)	-im.
2nd pers. sing.	ی(ا)	-i.	2nd pers. pl.	ید(ا)	-id.
3rd pers. sing.	ست(ا)	ast .]	3rd pers. pl.	ند(ا)	-and.

If the personal endings are added to a word ending in the 'silent' h, the alef is written, e.g. bacce am, I am a child.

In all other cases the alef of the personal ending is omitted, e.g.

mard id, You are a man.

The 2nd pers. sing. personal ending added to a word ending in the 'silent' h can also be represented by a hamze over the 'silent' h, e.g.

bacce i, Thou art a child.

If the personal endings other than the 1st pers. sing. and the 3rd pers. pl. are added to a word ending in a or u a hamze over a bearer is inserted between the final a or u and the personal ending, e.g.

foma id, it is you (lit. 'you are').

(b) By the following form which stands alone:

1st pers. sing.	هستم	hastam .	1st pers. pl.	هستیم	hastim .
2nd pers. sing.	هستی	hasti .	2nd pers. pl.	هستید	hastid .
3rd pers. sing.	هست	hast .	3rd pers. pl.	هستند	hastand .

16. The Negative of the forms in para. 15 above is formed as follows¹:

(a)	1st pers. sing.	نیم	nayam	} I am not, etc.
	2nd pers. sing.	ندی	nai
	3rd pers. sing.	نیست	nist
	1st pers. pl.	نئیم	naim	} We are not, etc.
	2nd pers. pl.	نئید	naid
	3rd pers. pl.	نیند	nayand

¹ They are not enclitic.

(b)	1st pers. sing.	نیستم	nistam	} I am not, etc.
	2nd pers. sing.	نیستی	nisti
	3rd pers. sing.	نیست	nist
	1st pers. pl.	نیستیم	nistim	} We are not, etc.
	2nd pers. pl.	نیستید	nistid
	3rd pers. pl.	نیستند	nistand

The forms in (a), with the exception of the 3rd pers. sing., are rare.

17. If که ke or کی ki 'who' is followed by the Present of the verb 'to be' given in para. 15 (b) above the following contractions may take place:

1st pers. sing.	کیستم	kistam	} Who am I? etc.
2nd pers. sing.	کستی	kisti
3rd pers. sing.	کست	kist
1st pers. pl.	کیستیم	kistim	} Who are we? etc.
2nd pers. pl.	کیستید	kistid
3rd pers. pl.	کیستند	kistand

18. The various forms of the Present of the verb 'to be' are, broadly speaking, interchangeable. هست hast, can be emphatic, and is used to mean 'there is' as well as 'he, she or it is'.

After a word ending in -i the forms هستی hasti, هستیم hastim and هستید hastid are used in preference to -i, -im and -id, e.g.

ایرانی هستید irani hastid, You are a Persian.

19. A plural subject, if it denotes rational beings, takes a plural verb. A plural subject denoting irrational beings or inanimate objects takes a singular verb, e.g.

پدر و مادر من اینجا هستند pedar va madare man inja hastand, My father and mother are here.

برادران شما آنجا بودند baradarane شما anja budand, Your brothers were there.

مداد و قلم کجاست medad va qalam kojast, Where are the pencil and pen?

کتابها آنجاست ketabha anjast, The books are there.

This distinction, however, is less carefully observed in Modern than in Classical Persian.

20. The word منزل manzel when used to mean 'home' or 'at home' does not usually take a preposition, e.g.

منزل بودم manzel budam, I was at home.

VOCABULARY

مرد	mard , man.	بیرون	birun , out, outside; when used as a preposition it takes the ezafe .
زن	zan , woman.	در	dar , in (prep.); door.
پسر	pesar , boy; son.	تو	tu , in; inner; inside; when used as a preposition it normally takes the ezafe , thus becoming توی tuye .
دختر	doxtar , girl; daughter.	رو	ru , on; outer; when used as a preposition meaning 'on' it precedes the noun it governs and takes the ezafe , thus becoming روی ruye .
پدر	pedar , father.	که	ke }
مادر	madar , mother.	کی	ki } who (interrog.).
برادر	baradar , brother.	کدام	kodam , which (of two or more; interrog.).
خواهر	xahar , sister.	ولی	vali , but.
بچه	bacce , bace , child.	دارد	darad , he, she or it has.
کار	kar , work.	آمد	amad , he, she or it came.
اتاق	otaq , room.	رفت	raft , he, she or it went.
منزل	manzel , house; home.
باغ	bay , garden.
گدا	gada , beggar.
شهر	fahr , city, town.
بازو	bazu , forearm.
راستگو	rastgu , truthful; a truthful person.
ایرانی	irani , Persian (adj.); a Persian.
اسب	asb , horse.
سگ	sag , dog.
گربه	gorbe , cat.
گاو	gav , ox. ¹

¹ گاو gav is also used for cow, though strictly speaking a cow is ماده گاو made gav.

EXERCISE 3

این منزل ماست — آن باغ مال کیست — آن باغ مال من است — پدر
 این بچه کجاست — این اطاق پنجره دارد — کتاب شما روی میز است — مردی
 بمنزل ما آمد — پسر او بیرون است — دختر من گربه دارد — آنها را در باغ
 دید — این زن کتابی بمن داد — کجا رفت — بشهر رفت — کتاب و مداد روی
 میز است — مادر شما بمنزل ما آمد — اسب او توی باغ است — این منزل مال ماست

EXERCISE 4

1. The room has a door and a window. 2. Whose is this garden?
 3. The garden is his. 4. He has a horse. 5. A woman came into our room. 6. The horse and the cow are in the garden. 7. The child is in your room. 8. The pen and the pencil are on the table. 9. He came to your house. 10. Your brother went to the town. 11. He saw the child in the garden. 12. He gave your book to me. 13. This is their house.

LESSON III

The Infinitive. Tenses formed from the Past Stem. Adjectives.

1. The Infinitive of the verb ends in tan, dan or idan, e.g.

کشتن kostan, to kill.

آوردن avardan (avordan), to bring.

خریدن xaridan, to buy.

2. The Short Infinitive is the Infinitive from which the ending -an has fallen away, e.g.

کشت kost. آورد avard (avord). خرید xarid.

The Past Stem is identical with the Short Infinitive and also with the 3rd pers. sing. of the Preterite.

3. The Present Stem of Regular Verbs is found by cutting off the final tan, dan or idan of the Infinitive, e.g.

کش kos. آور avar (avor). خر xar.

Irregular Verbs undergo certain other changes in the formation of the Present Stem. Their irregularity is confined to the changes made in the Present Stem.¹

4. The following are formed from the Past Stem:

(a) The Past Participle by the addition of the 'silent' k, preceded by e, e.g.

خریده xaride, bought.

(b) The Preterite by the addition of the personal endings, except in the 3rd pers. sing., which is identical with the Past Stem, e.g.

1st pers. sing.	خریدم	xaridam	} I bought, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	خریدی	xaridi
3rd pers. sing.	خرید	xarid
1st pers. pl.	خریدیم	xaridim	} We bought, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	خریدید	xaridid
3rd pers. pl.	خریدند	xaridand

(c) The Imperfect by the addition of the personal endings as in the Preterite and the prefix می mi-, e.g.

1st pers. sing.	میخریدم	mixaridam	} I was buying, used to buy, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	میخریدی	mixaridi
3rd pers. sing.	میخرید	mixarid
1st pers. pl.	میخریدیم	mixaridim	} We were buying, used to buy, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	میخریدید	mixaridid
3rd pers. pl.	میخریدند	mixaridand

If the verb has an initial alef with a short vowel, the initial alef drops out after the prefix می mi-, e.g.

میفتادم mioftadam, I was falling (from افتادن oftadan 'to fall'), or the می may be written separately, in which case the initial alef does not drop out, e.g.

می افتادم mioftadam, I was falling.

¹ A list of irregular verbs will be found in Appendix I. In the vocabularies to the lessons the present stem of irregular verbs is given in brackets, but the present stem of irregular compound verbs will not be given if the verbal part of the compound has already been given as a simple verb.

If the verb has an initial ā, the madde of the alef drops out after می mi-, e.g.

میامدم miamadam, I was coming (from آمدن amadan 'to come').

If the verb has an initial i, the می mi- must be written separately, e.g.

میایستادم miistadam, I was standing (from ایستادن istadan 'to stand').

(d) The Perfect by the Past Participle followed by the Present of the verb 'to be' (see Lesson II, para. 15 (a) above), e.g.

1st pers. sing.	خریده‌ام	xaride am	} I have bought, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	خریده‌ی	xaride i
3rd pers. sing.	خریده‌است	xaride ast
1st pers. pl.	خریده‌ایم	xaride im	} We have bought, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	خریده‌اید	xaride id
3rd pers. pl.	خریده‌اند	xaride and

The hamze in the 2nd pers. sing. is often omitted in writing.

(e) The Pluperfect by the Past Participle followed by the Preterite of the verb 'to be' (see Lesson II, para. 13), e.g.

1st pers. sing.	خریده بودم	xaride budam	} I had bought, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	خریده بودی	xaride budi
3rd pers. sing.	خریده بود	xaride bud
1st pers. pl.	خریده بودیم	xaride budim	} We had bought, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	خریده بودید	xaride budid
3rd pers. pl.	خریده بودند	xaride budand

(f) The Subjunctive Past by the Past Participle followed by the Subjunctive Present of the verb 'to be' (see Lesson II, para. 13), e.g.

1st pers. sing.	خریده باشم	xaride basam	} I may have bought, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	خریده باشی	xaride bafi
3rd pers. sing.	خریده باشد	xaride basad
1st pers. pl.	خریده باشیم	xaride basim	} We may have bought, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	خریده باشید	xaride basid
3rd pers. pl.	خریده باشند	xaride basand

(g) The Future by the Indicative Present¹ of خواستن xastan 'to desire' (Present Stem خواه xah) without the می mi-, followed by the Short Infinitive, e.g.

1st pers. sing.	خواهم خرید	xaham xarid	} I shall buy, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	خواهی خرید	xahi xarid
3rd pers. sing.	خواهد خرید	xahad xarid
1st pers. pl.	خواهیم خرید	xahim xarid	} We shall buy, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	خواهید خرید	xahid xarid
3rd pers. pl.	خواهند خرید	xahand xarid

5. The Negative of the verbal forms in para. 4 above is formed by adding the prefix na- to the main verb, except in the Future, when it is prefixed to the auxiliary verb, e.g.

نخریدم	naxaridam , I did not buy.
نمیخریدم	namixaridam , I was not buying.
نخریده‌ام	naxaride am , I have not bought.
نخریده بودم	naxaride budam , I had not bought.
نخریده باشم	naxaride basam , I may not have bought.
نخواهم خرید	naxaham xarid , I shall not buy.

6. If the verb has an initial ā, a y (ی) is inserted between the negative prefix and the ā of the verb, which loses its madde, e.g.

نیامد nayamad, He did not come (from آمدن amadan 'to come').

If the verb has an initial alef followed by i (ی), the alef is retained after the negative prefix, e.g.

نایستاد naistad, He did not stand (from ایستادن istadan 'to stand').

If the verb has an initial alef with a short vowel a (ا) y is inserted after the negative prefix and the initial alef drops out, e.g.

نیفتاد nayoftad, He did not fall (from افتادن oftadan 'to fall').

7. The verb داشتن daftan 'to have, possess' forms its Imperfect without the prefix می mi-. Its Imperfect is thus identical with its Preterite, e.g.

داشتم daftam, I had, or I was having.

Certain Compound Verbs formed with داشتن daftan (see Lesson IX) form their Imperfect in the usual way.

8. The verb بودن budan 'to be' also forms its Imperfect without the prefix می mi-. The Subjunctive Past of بودن budan is seldom used.

9. (a) Stress in the affirmative verbal forms in para. 4 above is carried on the final syllable of the main verb where there is no prefix, except in the Future, when the stress falls on the final syllable of the auxiliary verb. Where there is a prefixed می mi- this carries the stress. E.g.

خریدم	xari'dam , I bought.
میخریدم	'mixaridam , I was buying.
خریده‌ام	xari'de am , I have bought.
خریده بودم	xari'de budam , I had bought.
خریده باشم	xari'de basam , I may have bought.
خواهم خرید	xa'ham xarid , I shall buy.

(b) Stress in the negative verbal forms is carried on the negative prefix, e.g.

نخریدم	'naxaridam , I did not buy.
نمیخریدم	'namixaridam , I was not buying.
نخریده‌ام	'naxaride am , I have not bought.
نخریده بودم	'naxaride budam , I had not bought.
نخریده باشم	'naxaride basam , I may not have bought.
نخواهم خرید	'naxaham xarid , I shall not buy.

10. Adjectives normally follow the noun they qualify, an etafe being added to the noun, e.g.

کتاب بزرگ ketabe bozorg, the big book.

Adjectives do not take the plural ending,¹ e.g.

مردان خوب mardane xub, good men.

¹ Thus آن an 'that' and این in 'this' when used as demonstrative adjectives do not take the plural ending. When used as demonstrative pronouns they take the plural endings ها -ha or ان -an, e.g.

اینها in'ha, these.
آنها an'ha those.

11. The 'qualifying' ezāfe follows the same rules as those given in Lesson 11, paras. 6 and 7 for the 'possessive' ezāfe if the word to which it is added ends in the 'silent' h, ی i, ا a or و u, e.g.

کتابهای بزرگ ketabhaye bozorg, big books.

صندلی نو sandaliye nōu, the new chair.

بچه کوچک bacceye kucek, the small child.

پاروی نو pariye nōu, the new spade.

12. If more than one adjective qualifies a noun, the 'qualifying' ezāfe is added to each adjective except the final one, e.g.

کتاب بزرگ نو ketabe bozorge nōu, the big new book.

13. The noun and its attributes are regarded as a syntactical whole and, therefore, if the noun is indefinite, the Indefinite ی -i is added to the final adjective only. Similarly if the noun is definite and the direct object of the verb, the را -ra is added to the final adjective, e.g.

کتاب بزرگی ketabe bozorgi, a big book.

کتاب بزرگ نوی ketabe bozorge nōui, a big new book.

کتاب بزرگرا آورد ketabe bozorgra avard, He brought the big book.

کتاب بزرگ نوراً آورد ketabe bozorge nōura avard, He brought the big new book.

14. The comparative and superlative degrees are formed by the addition of تر -tar and ترین -tarin respectively to the positive, e.g.

بزرگ bozorg, big.

بزرگتر bozorgtar, bigger.

بزرگترین bozorgtarin, biggest.

Exceptions are:

خوب xub, good.

بهتر behtar, better.

بهترین behtarin, best.¹

¹ beht is also used to mean 'better' when it stands alone as the predicate of the verb 'to be'.

¹ xubtar and xubtarin are also occasionally used.

In the comparative degree of بد bad 'bad' the د d is sometimes assimilated to the ت t of the comparative ending, thus:

بتر battar.

The words کھتر kehtar 'smaller, younger' and مهتر mehtar 'greater, elder' are seldom used in the positive degree. The Superlative of these forms, کھین kehin and مھین mehin respectively, is rare also.

15. The comparative follows the noun it qualifies, the ezafe being added to the noun, e.g.

کتاب بزرگتر ketabe bozorgtar, the bigger book.

کتابهای بزرگتر ketabhaye bozorgtar, the bigger books.

16. The superlative precedes the noun it qualifies. It does not take the ezafe, e.g.

بهترین کتاب behtarin ketab, the best book.

17. Comparison is expressed by the word از az preceding the person or object used as a standard of comparison, e.g.

آن پسر از این دختر بزرگتر است an pesar az in doxtar bozorgtar ast,
That boy is bigger than this girl.

من از شما زودتر آمدم man az شما zudtar amadam, I came earlier than you.

Comparison can also be expressed by the word تا ta preceding the person or object used as a standard of comparison. This form is used if the person or object used as a standard of comparison is governed by a preposition, e.g.

کتابهای بهتر بمن داد تا باو ketabhaye behtar be man dad ta be u, he gave better books to me than to him.

18. بیشتر bishtar and بیش bis both mean 'more'. The former is used as a noun, adverb or adjective, e.g.

بیشتر باو دادید bishtar be u dadid, You gave him more.

اورا بیشتر دوست داشتند ura bishtar dust dashtand, They liked him better (more).

مردها بیشتر بودند تا زنها mardha bishtar budand ta zanha, There were more men than women.

When bishtar بیشتر qualifies a noun it precedes the noun, which is put in the singular, e.g.

bishtar ketabداشتید تا او bishtar ketabداشتید تا او, You had more books than he.

bif بیش is used as a noun, e.g.

bif az u خوردید بیش از او خوردید, You ate more than he.

It can also be used predicatively as an adjective, e.g.

ketabhaye u bif az ketabhaye man ast کتابهای او بیش از کتابهای من است, His books are more than mine.

bif az pif بیش از پیش means 'more than before', e.g.

ura bif az pif dust دارد او را بیش از پیش دوست دارد, He likes him better (more) than formerly.

bishtar بیشتر is also used as a noun meaning 'most', in which case it precedes the noun it qualifies and takes the ezafe, e.g.

bishtar mardha rafte budand بیشتر مردها رفته بودند, Most of the men had gone.

bishtar anha javan budand بیشتر آنها جوان بودند, Most of them were young.

'Most of all' is rendered by bishtar az hame بیشتر از همه or az hame bishtar, e.g.

ura az hame bishtar dust داشتیم او را از همه بیشتر دوست داشتیم, We liked him best (most) of all.

19. Adjectives are also used as adverbs, e.g.

anra geran xarid آنرا گران خرید, He bought it at a high price (expensively).

20. Adjectives can be strengthened by xēli خیلی or besyar بسیار 'very'. These words precede the adjective they qualify, e.g.

in miz xēli bozorg ast این میز خیلی بزرگ است, This table is very big.

baye besyar bozorgi دارد باغ بسیار بزرگی دارد, He has a very large garden.

The comparative degree can be similarly strengthened, e.g.

in xēli behtar ast این خیلی بهتر است, This is much better.

21. زیاد ziad is used as an adjective, noun or adverb meaning 'much, many, too', or 'too much'. With a negative verb it means 'not very', e.g.

کتابهای زیاد داشت ketabhaye ziad dast, He had many books.

بمن زیاد دادید be man ziad dadid, You gave me too much.

این کتاب زیاد گران است in ketab ziad geran ast, This book is too expensive.

این کتاب زیاد خوب نیست in ketab ziad xub nist, This book is not very good.

زیاد ziad may precede the noun it qualifies, in which case the latter is put in the singular, e.g.

زیاد کتاب دارد ziad ketab darad, He has many books.

22. Adjectives, like nouns, carry the stress on the final syllable, e.g.

بزرگ bo'zorg, big.

بزرگتر bozorg'tar, bigger.

بزرگترین bozorgta'rin, biggest.

yesterday. 9. He was writing a letter to me. 10. We were walking in the garden. 11. Where were you yesterday? 12. I was at home. 13. The woman is older than the man. 14. You had more horses than he. 15. He came early. 16. We were late.

LESSON IV

Tenses formed from the Present Stem. The Pronominal Suffixes.

خود xod, خویش xif and خویشان xistan. همین hamin and همان haman. چون cun. چنین conin and چنان conan. چندان candin and چندان candan. کسی kasi and شخصی saxsi. هیچ hic. طور tour.

1. The following forms are derived from the Present Stem of the verb:

(a) The Present Participle by the addition of ان -an, e.g.

خواهان xahan, desiring (from خواستن xastan 'to desire, wish', Present Stem خواه xah).

This form is not found in all verbs.

(b) The Noun of the Agent by adding نده -ande, e.g.

فروشنده forufande, seller (from فروختن foruxtan 'to sell', Present Stem فروش foruf).

This form is not found in all verbs.

(c) The Present by the addition of the personal endings and the prefix می mi-, e.g.

1st pers. sing.	میخرم	mixaram	} I am buying, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	میخری	mixari
3rd pers. sing.	میخرد	mixarad
1st pers. pl.	میخریم	mixarim	} We are buying, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	میخرید	mixarid
3rd pers. pl.	میخرند	mixarand

A General Present is formed by the addition of the personal endings, but without the prefix می mi-, and is used in Classical Persian for general statements which contain no element of doubt. In Modern Persian the General Present has been confused with the Subjunctive Present (see (d) below). The latter, properly speaking, has a prefixed be-. Modern writers often omit the be- of the Subjunctive, especially in the case of Compound Verbs, and at times even prefix be- to what is properly speaking a General Present. No attempt will be made in the following pages to distinguish between the two tenses; indeed, they have become so confused in modern usage that it would be difficult to do so in all cases.

(d) The Subjunctive Present by the addition of the personal endings with or without the prefix be- (see above), e.g.

1st pers. sing.	بخرم	bexaram	} I may buy, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	بخری	bexari
3rd pers. sing.	بخرد	bexarad
1st pers. pl.	بخریم	bexarim	} We may buy, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	بخرید	bexarid
3rd pers. pl.	بخرند	bexarand

The verb بودن budan 'to be' does not take be-.

The 1st and 3rd pers. sing. and plural of the Subjunctive Present may be used as a Jussive, e.g.

بخرد bexarad, Let him buy.

(e) The Imperative Singular is formed by the addition of the prefix be- to the Present Stem. The plural takes the personal ending -id, e.g.

بخر bexar, Buy (sing.).

بخرید bexarid, Buy (pl.).

In compound verbs the prefix be- is often omitted, in which case the Imperative Singular is identical with the Present Stem.

The verb بودن budan 'to be' does not take be-.

2. If the verb has an initial ā, alef followed by y, or alef with a short vowel, it follows in the Present the rules given in Lesson III, para. 4 (c) concerning the prefixed mi- of the Imperfect, e.g.

میآورم miavaram, I am bringing (from آوردن avardan 'to bring').

میایستم miistam, I am standing (from ایستادن istadan 'to stand', Present Stem ایست ist).

میافتم mioftam, I am falling (from افتادن oftadan 'to fall', Present Stem افت oft).

If the verb has an initial ā, a y is inserted after the prefix be- and the alef loses its madde, e.g.

بیا beya, Come (from آمدن amadan 'to come', Present Stem آ ā)

If the verb has an initial alef with a short vowel, a ی y is inserted after the prefix be- and the initial alef is dropped, e.g.

بیفتم beyofstam, I may fall.

If the verb has an initial alef followed by ی i, the initial alef is retained after the prefix be-, e.g.

بایستم beistam, I may stand.

3. If the Present Stem ends in a or u, a ی y is inserted after the final vowel of the Present Stem before the endings of the Present Participle and Noun of the Agent and the personal endings of the 1st pers. sing. and the 3rd pers. sing. and pl. A hamze is inserted before the personal ending in the 2nd pers. sing. and pl. and the 1st pers. pl. and marks the transition from the final long vowel of the stem to the long vowel of the personal ending. It will not be represented in the transcription. E.g.

شایان sayan, brilliant, fitting, proper (from the defective verb شایستن sayestan 'to be fitting').

گوینده guyande, speaker (from گفتن goftan 'to say').

1st pers. sing.	میگویم	miguyam	} I am saying, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	میکونی	migui
3rd pers. sing.	میکوید	miguyad
1st pers. pl.	میگوئیم	miguim	} We are saying, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	میگوئید	miguid
3rd pers. pl.	میگویند	miguyand
1st pers. sing.	میایم	miayam	} I am coming, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	میایی	miyai
3rd pers. sing.	میاید	miayad
1st pers. pl.	میائیم	miaim	} We are coming, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	میائید	miaid
3rd pers. pl.	میایند	miayand

4. If the Present Stem ends in و (av), this becomes ōu in the Imperative Singular, e.g.

شنو befenōu, hear (from شنیدن senidan 'to hear', Present Stem شنو senav).

5. If the Imperative Singular ends in o ou its prefix in some cases becomes bo, e.g.

رو borou, Go (from رفتن raftan).

بدو bodou, Run (from دویدن davidan).

But

بشنو beshnou, Hear (from شنیدن senidan).

بشو beshou, Become (from شدن sodan).

Note also

بگو bogu or begu, Say (from گفتن goftan).

بگذار bogozar or begozar, Place, put (from گذاشتن gozashtan).

6. The negative of the forms in para. 1 (c), (d) and (e) above is formed by the addition of the prefix na-. The prefix be- drops out if the verb is negative, e.g.

نمیخرم namixaram, I am not buying.

نخرم naxaram, I may not buy.

نخر naxar, Do not buy.

The negative of the Imperative can also be formed by the prefix ma-, e.g.

مخر maxar, Do not buy.

This form is literary.

If the verb has an initial ā, alef followed by i, or alef with a short vowel, it follows the same rules when the negative prefix is added as those set out in Lesson III, para. 6.

7. The verb داشتن daftan 'to have, possess' forms its Present without the prefix mi-. In Colloquial Persian داشته باش dashte bas and داشته باشید dashte basid are used in place of the Imperative دار dar and دارید darid.

Certain compounds of داشتن daftan form their Present and Imperative in the usual way.

8. Stress in the verbal forms given above is carried:

(a) On the final syllable in the affirmative except where there is a prefixed mi- or be-. These prefixes always carry the stress, e.g.

خواهان xa'han, desiring.

فروشنده forušan'de, seller.

میخرم 'mixaram, I am buying.
 بخرم 'bexaram } I may buy.
 خرم xa'ram }
 بخر 'bexar, Buy.

(b) On the negative prefix in the negative, e.g.

نمیخرم 'namixaram, I am not buying.
 نمیخرم 'naxaram, I may not buy.
 نخر 'naxar } Do not buy.
 مخر 'maxar }

9. The Possessive Adjectives can be translated by Pronominal Suffixes as well as by the method described in Lesson II, para. 9:

م- -am, my.
 ت- -at, thy.
 ش- -af, -ef, his, her, its.
 مان- -eman, our.
 تان- -etan, your.
 شان- -efan, their.

These may be added to Nouns and Adjectives, e.g.

کتابم ketabam, my book.
 اسبتان asbetan, your horse.

If a Pronominal Suffix is added to a word which is the direct object of the verb را -ra is added after the Pronominal Suffix, e.g.

کتابتانرا بمن بدهید ketabetanra be man bedehid, Give your book to me.

If the Noun qualified by a possessive adjective is also qualified by an adjective or adjectives, the Pronominal Suffix is added to the final adjective, e.g.

دختر کوچکتان doxtare kuceketan, your small (younger) daughter.

If the Pronominal Suffix refers to more than one noun and these are joined by a conjunction, the Suffix is added to the final noun only, e.g.

پدر و مادرتان pedar va madaretan, your father and mother.

10. The Pronominal Suffixes are also added to the simple tenses of the verb and prepositions to denote the personal pronouns in the oblique cases,¹ e.g.

زدمش zadamaš, I hit him.

من همراهش رفتم man hamraheš raftam, I went with him.

کجا دیدیدش koja دیدیدش, Where did you see him.

The Pronominal Suffixes are never emphatic, whereas the Personal Pronouns may be.

11. If the word to which a Pronominal Suffix is added ends in a (except in the case of ba 'with') or u, a y is inserted between the final vowel and the Pronominal Suffix, e.g.

کتابهایم ketabhayam, my books.

زانویتان zanuyetan, your knee.

In Colloquial Persian this y is frequently omitted, especially before -aš, -eš, in which case the vowel of the Pronominal Suffix is elided, e.g.

زانوت zanut, thy knee.

کتابهایشان ketabhāšan, their books.

If the word to which a Pronominal Suffix is added ends in e, an alef is written between the final e and the singular Pronominal Suffixes, e.g.

بچه‌اش bacceāš, his child.

When a plural Pronominal Suffix is added to a word ending in e, the e of the Pronominal Suffix is elided, e.g.

بچه‌تان baccetan, your child.

12. The Pronominal Suffixes never carry the stress.

13. If the possessive adjective or personal pronoun refers to the subject of the sentence, the word خود xod, خویش *xīš*² or خویشان xīšan must be used in the 3rd pers. sing. in place of او *u*³; these can also be used in place of من man, and تو to. E.g.

کتاب خود را بمن داد ketabe xodra be man dad, He gave his book to me.

¹ If the 3rd pers. sing. Pronominal Suffix is added to the preposition به be 'to', the e of به is written and the word is pronounced beš or more vulgarly beheš.

² خویش xīš also means 'relation, relative'.

³ This rule is not always observed in Colloquial Persian.

('His' refers to the subject of the sentence, 'he', and therefore xod must be used and not u: ketabe ura be man dad would mean 'he gave somebody else's book to me'.)

ketabe xodra be u dadam, I gave my book to him.

xod and xif are interchangeable when used in place of the Possessive Adjectives, but xif is seldom used in Colloquial Persian.

xiflan can only refer to rational beings. (See also Lesson VIII, para. 16.)

14. xod is also used as an emphatic particle meaning 'self'. It precedes the word it emphasizes and takes the etafe, e.g.

xode u bud, It was he himself.

xode an and xode in mean 'that very' and 'this very' respectively, e.g.

xode an mard bud, It was that very man.

xod can also follow the word it emphasizes standing in apposition to it without the etafe, if this word is the subject of the sentence, e.g.

man xod goftam, I myself said (so).

This latter construction is less common than the former.

The Pronominal Suffixes can be added to xod when it is used as an emphatic particle, e.g.

xodat borou, Go thyself.

xodesan amadand, They came themselves.

xodam kardam, I did (it) myself.

15. xod is also used with the Pronominal Suffixes and -ra to form a kind of reflexive, e.g.

xodetanra gul zadid, You deceived yourselves.

In the 3rd. pers. sing. the Pronominal Suffix can be omitted, e.g.

xodra gul zad, He deceived himself.

16. xod, xif and xiflan carry the stress; it falls on the final syllable of xiflan.

17. The Demonstrative این in 'this' and آن an 'that' can be strengthened by هم ham,¹ e.g.

همین هفته hamin hafte, this very week.

همان روز haman ruz, that very day.

Note also the use of همین in the following:

همین یکی ماند hamin yaki mand, Only this one remained.

18. چون cun 'like' can be contracted and prefixed to the demonstratives این in 'this' and آن an 'that', e.g.

چنین conin } such, such a one.
چنان conan }

چنین conin and چنان conan are also used to mean 'thus', 'in such a manner', e.g.

چنین گفت conin goft, He spoke thus.

چنین conin and چنان conan can be strengthened by the addition of هم ham, e.g.

همچنین آمد و گفت hamconin amad va goft, He came in this way and spoke (thus).

19. چند cand can also be prefixed to the demonstratives این in 'this' and آن an 'that', e.g.

چندین candin, several; so much, so many.

چندان candan, so much, so many.

چندین candin is used adjectivally and adverbially; when it is used as an adjective the noun follows and is put in the singular, e.g.

چندین کتاب بمن داد candin ketab beman dad, He gave several books to me.

چندان candan if used with a negative verb means 'not very', 'not much', e.g.

چندان خوب نبود candan xub nabud, It was not very good.

20. In those of the forms in paras. 17-19 above of which هم ham is one of the component parts, stress can be carried on هم ham or on the final syllable, e.g.

همان 'haman or ha'man, that very.

همچنین 'hamconin or hamco'nin, just such as this, just like this.

¹ هم ham can also stand alone as an emphatic particle. As an adverb it means 'also'.

The other forms in paras. 18 and 19 above carry the stress on the final syllable, e.g.

چندان can'dan, so much, so many.

چنین co'nin, such, such a one.

21. کسی kasi, formed from کس kas 'person'¹ by the addition of the Indefinite ی -i, and شخصی faxsi, formed in the same way from شخص faxs 'person'², are used to mean 'someone, somebody'. With a negative verb they mean 'no one, nobody'. E.g.

کسی هست kasi hast, Is any one there?

کسی نیست kasi nist, No one is there.

22. هیچ hic is an adjective meaning 'any'. It precedes the Noun it qualifies. With a negative verb it means 'none, not any'. E.g.

هیچ نان دارید hic nan darid, Have you any bread?

هیچ نان ندارم hic nan nadaram, I have no bread.

In Colloquial Persian هیچ hic 'any' tends to be omitted in the affirmative unless it is emphatic, thus نان دارید nan darid 'have you any bread', whereas هیچ نان دارید hic nan darid would rather mean 'have you any bread whatsoever?'

A noun qualified by هیچ hic 'not any' with a negative verb is always put in the singular, e.g.

هیچ بچه ندارد hic bacce nadarad, He has no children.

هیچ کس hic kas means 'anyone'. With a negative verb or in answer to a question it means 'no one'. E.g.

هیچ کس آمد hic kas amad, Has any one come?³

هیچ کس hic kas, No one.

هیچ کس آنجا نبود hic kas anja nabud, No one was there.

¹ The phrase کس و کار kas o kar is also used to mean 'household, retainers', e.g.

از کس و کار او بودند az kas o kar u budand, They were some of his retainers (household).

Note also یکی از کسان او yaki az kasane u, one of his people.

² شخصی faxs is also used as an emphatic particle. It precedes the word it emphasizes and takes the etafe, e.g.

شخص او بود faxse u bud, It was he himself.

³ For the use of the Preterite where the Perfect is used in English, see Lesson XIII, para. 5 (4).

hic yak means 'any' referring to more than one. With a negative verb it means 'none'. It is usually followed by az از, e.g.

hic yak az in ketabhara nadaram, I have none of these books.

hic kodam is an interrogative pronoun meaning 'any' referring to more than one. With a negative verb it means 'none'. It is usually followed by az از, or takes the ezafe, e.g.

hic kodam az anhara didid, Did you see any of them?

hic kodame anha narafte and, Have none of them gone?

In Colloquial Persian hic kodam is also used as a pronoun (not as an Interrogative), e.g.

hic kodam az in asbha male u nist, None of these horses are his.

hic is also used as a noun meaning 'anything'. With a negative verb or in answer to a question it means 'nothing'. E.g.

az u hic gereftid, Did you take anything from him?

hic nagereftam, I took nothing.

hic is sometimes used with an affirmative verb to mean 'nothing', e.g.

in hame hic ast, All this is nothing.

hic is also used as an adverb to mean 'ever, at all'. With a negative verb it means 'never', e.g.

anja hic rafte id, Have you ever gone there?

hic narafte am, I have never gone there.

hic vaqt means 'ever'. With a negative verb or in answer to a question it means 'never', e.g.

hic vaqt ura dide id, Have you ever seen him?

hic vaqt ura nadide am, I have never seen him.

hic 'anything' and with a negative verb 'nothing' can be strengthened colloquially by the addition of the Indefinite -i, e.g.

hici naxord, He ate (absolutely) nothing.

23. کسی kasi, شخصی saxsi and هیچی hici carry the stress on the first syllable, since the Indefinite -i never carries the stress.

In compounds formed with هیچ hic, the stress falls on هیچ hic, e.g.

هیچ کس 'hic kas, no one.

24. The word طور tour meaning 'way, manner' is used in the following compounds:

چطور	ce tour , how (interrog.).
اینطور	in tour , in this way, thus.
آنطور	an tour , in that way, thus.
همینطور	hamin tour , in this very way.
همانطور	haman tour , in that very way.

Stress is carried on the first part of the compound, e.g.

چطور 'ce tour, how.

اینطور 'in tour, in this way.

طور tour takes the Indefinite -i in the following expressions:

طوری نمیشود touri namisavad, It will not matter.

طوری نیست touri nist, It does not matter.

He never told me that.

LESSON V

Numerals. خیلی xēli. بسیار besyar. يك yak. يکي yaki. دیگر digar. دیگری digari. چند cand. چندی candi. How to express time. How to express age.

1. The numerals are given in the following table. The ordinals are formed from the cardinals by the addition of م -om.¹ Figures are read from left to right.

CARDINAL	ORDINAL
يك yak, yek ²	يکم yakom, yekom ²	۱	1
دو do	دوم dorvom ; دوم doyyom ²	۲	2
سه se	سوم servom ; سیم seyyom ²	۳	3
چهار cahar	چهارم caharom	۴ (۴)	4
پنج panj	پنجم panjom	۵	5
شش seš	ششم sešom	۶	6
هفت haft	هفتم haftom	۷	7
هشت hašt	هشتم haštom	۸	8
نه noh	نهم nohom	۹	9
ده dah	دهم dahom	۱۰	10
یازده yazdah	یازدهم yazdahom	۱۱	11

¹ The ending م -om is also added to چند cand 'how many', e.g.

چندم ماه است candome mah ast, What day of the month is it?

CARDINAL	ORDINAL
دوازده davazdah	دوازدهم davazdahom	۱۲	12
سیزده sizdah	سیزدهم sizdahom	۱۳	13
چهارده cahardah	چهاردهم cahardahom	۱۴	14
پانزده ^۱ panzdah	پانزدهم ^۱ panzdahom	۱۵	15
شانزده ^۱ sanzdah	شانزدهم ^۱ sanzdahom	۱۶	16
هفده hevdah	هفدهم hevdahom	۱۷	17
هیجده ^۱ hijdah	هیجدهم ^۱ hijdahom	۱۸	18
نوزده nuzdah	نوزدهم nuzdahom	۱۹	19
بیست bist	بیستم bistom	۲۰	20
بیست و یک ^۲ bist o yak	بیست و یکم bist o yakom	۲۱	21
بیست و دو bist o do	بیست و دوم bist o dovvom	۲۲	22
بیست و سه bist o se	بیست و سوم bist o servvom	۲۳	23
بیست و چهار bist o cahar	بیست و چهارم bist o caharom	۲۴	24
بیست و پنج bist o panj	بیست و پنجم bist o panjom	۲۵	25
بیست و شش bist o sef	بیست و ششم bist o sefom	۲۶	26
بیست و هفت bist o haft	بیست و هفتم bist o haftom	۲۷	27
بیست و هشت bist o haft	بیست و هشتم bist o haftom	۲۸	28
بیست و نه bist o noh	بیست و نهم bist o nohom	۲۹	29
سی si	سیام siom	۳۰	30
چهل cehel	چهلوم cehelom	۴۰	40
پنجاه panjah	پنجاهم panjahom	۵۰	50
شصت fast	شصتم fastom	۶۰	60
هفتاد haftad	هفتادم haftadom	۷۰	70
هشتاد haftad	هشتادم haftadom	۸۰	80
نود navad	نودم navadom	۹۰	90
صد sad	صدم sadom	۱۰۰	100
صد و یک sad o yak	صد و یکم sad o yakom	۱۰۱	101
صد و بیست sad o bist	صد و بیستم sad o bist	۱۲۱	121
و یک o yak	و یکم o yakom
دویست devist	دویستم devistom	۲۰۰	200

^۲ This o 'and' is a survival from the Middle Persian uð and is not the Arabic wa 'and'. It survives in certain other positions, notably in compounds (see Lesson x). In pronunciation it approximates to o (see Introduction, para. 2); in articulation time it approximates to the group e, a, o rather than to the group i, e, u (see Introduction, para. 2).

CARDINAL	ORDINAL
سیصد si sad	سیصدم si sadom	۳۰۰	300
چهار صد cahar sad	چهار صدم cahar sadom	۴۰۰	400
پانصد pansad ¹	پانصدم pansadom ¹	۵۰۰	500
شش صد seš sad	شش صدم seš sadom	۶۰۰	600
هفت صد haft sad	هفت صدم haft sadom	۷۰۰	700
هشت صد hašt sad	هشت صدم hašt sadom	۸۰۰	800
نه صد noh sad	نه صدم noh sadom	۹۰۰	900
هزار haẓar	هزارم haẓarom	۱۰۰۰	1,000
هزار و یک haẓar o yak	هزار و یکم haẓar o yakom	۱۰۰۱	1,001
هزار و بیست haẓar o bist	هزار و بیست و یکم haẓar o bist o yakom	۱۰۲۱	1,021
و یک o yak	یکم yakom
هزار و صد haẓar o sad	هزار و صد و یکم haẓar o sad o bist o yakom	۱۱۲۱	1,121
و بیست و یک o bist o yak	بیست و یکم bist o yakom
دو هزار do haẓar	دو هزارم do haẓarom	۲۰۰۰	2,000
ملیون meliun			1,000,000
صفر sefr			۰

2. The Arabic word اول avval is usually substituted for the Persian ordinal یکم yakom, when this stands alone, e.g.

شب اول šabe avval, the first night.

دو do 'two' and سه se 'three' form their ordinals irregularly, as follows: دوم dovvom and سوم servvom respectively. دویم doyyom and سیم seyyom are alternative forms.

For the pronunciation of دو do 'two' and شش seš 'six' see Introduction, alphabetical table and para. 2 (b).

yek and yekom tend to be used rather than yak and yakom, and yeki rather than yaki (see below, paras. 6, 19 and 20).

چهار cahar, both standing alone and in compounds, is often contracted into car.

The first vowel of پانزده 'fifteen' and شانزده 'sixteen' and پانصد 'five hundred' is pronounced u or as a nasalized vowel intermediate between a and o.

هجده hijdah 'eighteen' is usually pronounced hejdah or hezdah.

The f of هفده is assimilated to the following d and becomes v, thus hevdaḥ; it is also pronounced hivdaḥ.

3. 'Once', 'twice', etc., are translated by the cardinal numbers followed by بار bar, دفعه daf'e or مرتبه martabe, 'time', e.g.

يك دفعه yak daf'e, once.

صد بار sad bar, a hundred times.

دو مرتبه do martabe, twice.

'Twice as much', 'twice as many', etc., are translated by the cardinal number followed by برابر barabar 'equal', e.g.

دو برابر do barabar, twice as much.

عدد ما چهار برابر شد eddeye ma cahar barabar sod, Our number became four times as many.

4. Multiplicatives are formed by the addition of گانه -gane to the cardinal, e.g.

دوگانه dogane, double. سه گانه segane, triple.

5. لا la is used to express '-fold', e.g.

دو لا do la, double (= two-fold).

سه لا se la, triple (= three-fold).

6. Distributives are formed by repeating the cardinal with or without به be in between, e.g.

سه به سه se be se, three by three.

يك yak 'one' takes the Indefinite ی -i when used as a distributive, e.g.

يك يک yaki yaki, one by one.

The forms يکايک yakayak and يگان يگان yagan yagan 'one by one' are obsolete.

7. Recurring numerals are expressed as follows:

يك روز در میان yak ruḡ dar mian, (on) alternate days.

شش روز بشش روز seš ruḡ be seš ruḡ, every six days.

هفت روز يك بار haft ruḡ yak bar, once in seven days.

8. Approximate numbers are expressed as follows:

دو سه do se, two or three.

چهار پنج cahar panj, four or five.

هفت هشت haft hašt seven or eight.

ده دوازده dah davarḡdah, ten or twelve.

9. The Arabic forms are often used to express fractions (see Part II, Lesson XXI, para. 7). Fractions are also expressed by the cardinal numbers in apposition, the denominator preceding the numerator, e.g.

سه يك se yak, $\frac{1}{3}$; چهار يك cahar yak, $\frac{1}{4}$;

پنج يك panj yak, $\frac{1}{5}$; or by the cardinal of the numerator preceding the ordinal of the denominator, e.g.

سه پنجم se panjom, $\frac{3}{5}$.

nim means 'half'. In combinations such as 'one and a half', etc., nim 'half' follows the noun qualified by the numeral, e.g.

يك ساعت و نیم yak sa'at o nim, one hour and a half.

شش صفحه و نیم fes safhe o nim, six pages and a half.

rob 'quarter' takes a similar construction, e.g.

پنج صفحه و ربع panj safhe o rob, five pages and a quarter.

10. Percentage is expressed as follows:

صدی ده sadi dah, 10%.

ده در صد dah dar sad, 10%.

11. and is used to express 'odd' with numbers above nineteen, e.g.

بیست و اند bist o and, twenty odd.

12. Arithmetical operations are performed as follows:

Multiplication:

دو دو تا میشود چهار تا do do ta misavad cahar ta, $2 \times 2 = 4$

Division:

دوازده تقسیم بر سه میشود چهار davazdah taqsim bar se misavad cahar, $12 \div 3 = 4$.

Addition:

شش باضافه شش مساوی است با دوازده fes be ezafeye fes mosavist ba davazdah, $6 + 6 = 12$.

Subtraction:

نه منهای پنج مساوی است با چهار noh menhaye¹ panj mosavist ba cahar, $9 - 5 = 4$.

¹ menha is compounded of the Arabic preposition من man 'from' and the 3rd pers. sing. Pronominal Suffix ها -ha. For its pronunciation see Introduction, Part II, para. 12.

13. The cardinal numbers precede the noun they qualify, which is put in the singular, e.g.

دو راس اسب do ra's¹ asb, two horses.

صد نفر sad nafar, a hundred persons.

A Noun qualified by a cardinal does not take را -ra when it is the direct object of the verb, unless it is qualified by some such word as این in 'this' or آن an 'that', e.g.

دو جلد کتاب خرید do jeld¹ ketab xarid, He bought two books.

آن دو کتاب را خرید an do ketabra xarid, He bought those two books.

14. The ordinals are used as adjectives and follow the noun they qualify, e.g.

کتاب سوم را بمن بدهید ketabe sevvomra be man bedehid, Give me the third book.

نخست naxost and نخستین naxostin are also used as the ordinal of 'one', but cannot be used to form the ordinals of compound numerals. They precede the noun they qualify, e.g.

نخستین بار naxostin bar, the first time.

An adjectival form of the ordinal ending in -ین -in, which also precedes the noun it qualifies without the ezafe, is sometimes found, e.g.

یک صد و هشتمین روز yak sad o haftomin ruz, the hundred and eighth day.

15. صد sad 'hundred' and هزار hazar 'thousand' when used indefinitely can take the plural ending ها ha-. They precede the noun they qualify, which is put in the singular, e.g.

صدها کتاب sadha ketab, hundreds of books.

هزارها گل hazarha gol, thousands of flowers.

هزاران hazaran is also used referring to rational beings. هزاران هزار hazaran hazar means 'thousands upon thousands' (referring to rational beings).

Similar constructions are:

سالهای سال salhaye sal, many long years.

قرنهای قرن qarnhaye qarn, many long centuries.

16. Certain words are used with cardinals as classifiers, except when referring to units of time. These words are placed between the cardinal and the word qualified by the cardinal. Among them are:

(a) نفر nafar (= person) used for persons,¹ e.g.

سه نفر زن آمدند se nafar zan amadand, Three women came.

یک نفر yak nafar means 'a certain person, someone'.

(b) رأس ra's (= head in Arabic) for horses and cattle, e.g.

صد رأس گاو دارد sad ra's gav darad, He has a hundred head of oxen.

(c) عدد adad (= number) for small articles, e.g.

پنج عدد مداد بمن داد panj adad medad be man dad, He gave me five pencils.

(d) جلد jeld (= volume) for books, e.g.

چهار جلد کتاب خرید cahar jeld ketab xarid, He bought four books.

(e) دست dast (= hand) for clothes, furniture, etc., e.g.

یک دست لباس خرید yak dast لباس xarid, He bought a suit of clothes.

(f) باب bab (= door in Arabic) for houses, e.g.

دو باب خانه دارد do bab xane darad, He has two houses.

(g) دانه dane (= grain) for eggs and small articles, e.g.

ده دانه تخم مرغ آورد dah dane toxme mory avard, He brought ten (hen's) eggs.

(h) تا ta is used in Colloquial Persian for almost anything but is seldom written (although it has the sanction of early classical usage).

¹ نفر nafar is also used for camels.

(i) The following are also used:

دستگاه dastgah for clocks, furniture and machinery, etc.

قبضه qabẓe for swords and rifles, etc.

عراده arrade for guns, cannons, etc.

فروند farvand and قطعه qat'e for ships.

زنجیر zanjir for elephants.

قطار qetar and مهار mehar for camels.

پارچه parce for villages.

تن tan for persons.

In certain cases where some sort of classifier is contained in the phrase qualified by a numeral an additional classifying word is not added after yak 'one' and is optional after other numerals,¹ e.g.

یک فنجان چای yak fenjan cai, a (one) cup of tea.

یک لیوان آب yak livan ab, a (one) glass of water.

17. Real estate is divided into six units known as *dang*², e.g.

شش دانگ خانه مال اوست seš dange xane male ust, Six dangs of the house belong to him (i.e. he is the sole owner of the house).

دو دانگ ده مال اوست do dange deh male ust, Two dangs of the village belong to him (i.e. one-third of the village is his).

18. xēili and besyar mean 'very' (see Lesson III, para. 20) and also 'many'. They precede the noun they qualify, which is put in the singular, e.g.

خیلی اسب دارد xēili asb darad, He has many horses.

besyar can also follow the noun it qualifies, in which case the latter is put in the plural, e.g.

اسبهای بسیار دارد asbhaye besyar darad, He has many horses.

¹ See also Lesson XII, para. 2 (f).

² dang can be applied to certain other objects as well, e.g. آواز شش دانگ avaz seš dang, a good (and loud) voice; شش دانگ جهان seš dange jahān, the whole world. See also Lesson XIV, para. 2 (d).

19. يك yak 'one' is sometimes used with a noun to which the Indefinite -i has been added. Its addition does not materially alter the meaning, e.g.

مردی mardi or يك مردی yak mardī, a man, but يك مرد yak mard, one man.

20. The Indefinite -i can be added to يك yak to mean 'one', e.g.

یکی بمن بدهید yaki be man bedehid, Give me one.

'One of' is rendered by یکی از yaki az, e.g.

یکی از آن کتابهارا بمن بدهید yaki az an ketabhara be man bedehid,
Give me one of those books.

21. دیگر digar 'other' is used as an adjective, e.g.

اسب دیگر asbe digar, the other horse.

اسب دیگری asbe digari, another horse.

With the Indefinite -i added to it, it is used as an Indefinite Pronoun meaning 'another', e.g.

دیگری آمد digari amad, another came.

یکی دیگر yaki digar also means 'another', e.g.

یکی دیگر بمن بدهید yaki digar be man bedehid, Give me another.

هم دیگر ham digar and يك دیگر yak digar both mean 'each other', e.g.

از يك دیگر جدا شدند az yak digar joda sodand, They separated from each other.

از هم دیگر خدا حافظی کردند az ham digar xoda hafexi kardand,
They said good-bye to each other.

دیگر digar also means 'next',¹ e.g.

دفعه دیگر daf'eye digar, next time.

روز دیگر ruze digar, the next day.

Used as an adverb دیگر digar means 'further, in addition, again', e.g.

دیگر چه میخواهید digar ce mixahid, What further do you want,
What else do you want?

دیگر نیامد digar nayamad, He did not come again.

(See also Lesson XIV, para. 3.)

¹ In Classical Persian دیگر digar also means 'second', e.g. بار دیگر bare digar, the second time; نماز دیگر namaze digar means 'the afternoon prayer'.

22. چند cand 'some, several, a few' usually precedes the noun it qualifies, which is put in the singular, e.g.

چند نفر آمدند cand nafar amadand, A few persons came.

If it follows the noun, the Indefinite -i must be added to the Noun, e.g.

سالی چند گذشت sali cand gozast, A few years passed.

چند cand is also used as an interrogative meaning 'how much, how many, how long', e.g.

چند نفر بودند cand nafar budand, How many people were there?

آنرا چند خریدید anra cand xaridid, How much did you buy that for?

تا چند صبر کنم ta cand sabr konam, (Until) how long shall I wait?'

چند cand used as a noun with the Indefinite -i means 'some time, a little while', e.g.

چندی ماند و رفت candi mand o raft, He stayed a little while and (then) went.

چند cand and چندی candi 'a little while' can be preceded by يك yak, e.g.

يك چندی آنجا بودم yak candi anja budam, I was there for a little while.

يك چند صبر کنید yak cand sabr konid, Wait just a little longer.

23. Time of day is expressed by the cardinal number following the word ساعت sa'at 'hour', which takes the erafe, e.g.

ده ساعت sa'ate dah, ten o'clock.

'Half an hour' is نیم ساعت nim sa'at.

'Quarter of an hour' is ربع ساعت rob' sa'at.

Half hours are expressed as follows:

ده و نیم	dah o nim	} 10.30.
نیم ساعت از ده گذشته	nim sa'at az dah gozaste
نیم ساعت یازده مانده	nim sa'at be yazdah mande

Quarter hours are expressed as follows:

ده و ربع	dah o rob'	} 10.15.
يك ربع از ده گذشته	yak rob' az dah gozaste
ده ربع بالا	dah rob' bala

' See Lesson XIII, para. 11 (j), for this use of the Subjunctive.

یازده ربع کم yazdah rob' kam
 يك ربع بیازده مانده yak rob' be yazdah mande } 10.45

'Minute' is دقیقه daqiqe. Minutes are expressed as follows:

پنج دقیقه از ده گذشته panj daqiqe az dah gozaste
 ده و پنج دقیقه dah o panj daqiqe } 10.5.

پنج دقیقه بیازده مانده panj daqiqe be yazdah mande
 یازده پنج دقیقه کم yazdah panj daqiqe kam } 10.55.

24. 'Midday' and 'midnight' are ظهر zohr and نصف شب nesfe sab respectively, and are used in place of دوازده davazdah 'twelve'. The construction with و o 'and' to express half hours and quarters is not used with ظهر zohr or نصف شب nesfe sab; one of the other forms must be used, e.g.

نیم ساعت از ظهر گذشته nim sa'at az zohr gozaste, 12.30 p.m.

يك ربع بظهر مانده yak rob' be zohr mande, 11.45 a.m.

سه ربع از نصف شب گذشته se rob' az nesfe sab gozaste, 12.45 a.m.

نیم ساعت بنصف شب مانده nim sa'at be nesfe sab mande, 11.30 p.m.

a.m. is پیش از ظهر pis az zohr.

p.m. is بعد از ظهر ba'd az zohr.

sobh means 'morning', عصر asr 'afternoon' and شب sab 'evening' or 'night'; سحر sahar is the period from midnight to dawn and is used especially for the period just before dawn; آفتاب نژده aftab nazade means 'before sunrise'; سفیده صبح sefideye sobh 'the early dawn'.

25. In country districts time is sometimes reckoned with reference to three points, sunrise, sunset and midday, e.g.

چند از روز بالا آمده cand az ruq bala amade, How long (is) it after daybreak?

چند بظهر مانده cand be zohr mande, How long remains till midday?

چند بغروب مانده cand be yorub mande, How long remains till sunset?

دو ساعت از غروب گذشته do sa'at az yorub gozaste, two hours after sunset.

26. The week is reckoned from Saturday. The days of the week are as follows:

شنبه	sambe , Saturday.
یکشنبه	yak sambe , Sunday.
دو شنبه	do sambe , Monday.
سه شنبه	se sambe , Tuesday.
چهار شنبه	cahar sambe , Wednesday.
پنج شنبه	panj sambe , Thursday.
جمعه	jom'e , Friday.

The following forms generally refer to the latter part of the day:

شب یکشنبه	sabe yak sambe , Saturday.
شب دو شنبه	sabe do sambe , Sunday.
شب سه شنبه	sabe se sambe , Monday.
شب چهار شنبه	sabe cahar sambe , Tuesday.
شب پنج شنبه	sabe panj sambe , Wednesday.
شب جمعه	sabe jom'e , Thursday.
شب شنبه	sabe sambe , Friday.

To express the morning, etc., of a certain day, the time of day is put in apposition to the day, e.g.

دو شنبه صبح	do sambe sobh , Monday morning.
چهار شنبه شب	cahar sambe sab , Wednesday evening.
جمعه شب	jom'e sab , Friday evening.

sobh 'morning' and asr 'afternoon' can instead precede the day of the week, in which case they take an ezafe, e.g.

صبح چهار شنبه	sobhe cahar sambe , Wednesday morning.
عصر شب جمعه	asre sabe jom'e , Thursday afternoon.

27. Expressions of 'time at' or 'time in' do not require a preposition, e.g.

صبح آمد	sobh amad , He came in the morning.
ساعت ده رفت	sa'ate dah raft , He went at ten o'clock.
جمعه آمد	jom'e amad , He came on Friday.

روزی ruzi and يك روزی yak ruzi mean 'one day'. عصری arri may mean 'in the afternoon' (if a single occurrence) or 'in the afternoons' (habitually); similarly ظهري zohri 'at midday' may be used for a single or for a habitual action. صبحی sobhi, شبی fabi and غروبى yorubi 'in the morning', 'in the evening' and 'at sunset' respectively usually signify habitual actions.

28. سال sal 'year' and ماه mah 'month' can form plurals سالیان salian and ماهیان mahian respectively when used indefinitely, e.g.

سالیان دراز saliane daraz, (for) long years.

These forms are rare.

29. 'Ago' is expressed by پیش pif following the noun, which takes the etafe, e.g.

يك هفته پیش شهر رفت yak hafteye pif be shahr raft, He went to the town a week ago.

Note also

بعد از يك هفته خواهد آمد ba'd az yak hafte xahad amad, He will come in a week's time.

تا يك شنبه بر میگردد ta yak sambe bar migardad, He will return by Sunday.

30. Age is expressed by the verb داشتن daflan 'to have' together with the number of years or by the verb بودن budan 'to be' with سن senn 'age' and the number, e.g.

چند سال دارد	cand sal darad	} How old is he?
سن او چقدر است	senne u ce qadr ast
بیست سال دارد	bist sal darad	} He is twenty years old.
سن او بیست سال است	senne u bist sal ast

The following expressions should also be noted:

سال بیستش تمام شد sale bifest tamam fod, His twentieth year is completed, i.e. he is twenty years old.

تو بیست میرود tu' bist miravad, He is entering his twentieth year, i.e. he is nineteen years old.

جوان بیست و چند ساله بود javane bist o cand salei bud, He was a young man of twenty odd years.

* In this phrase تو tu is usually used without the etafe.

We got up early yesterday.

LESSON VI

The Passive Voice. گذاشتن xastan. خواستن tavanestan. توانستن gozastan. بایستن bayestan. شایستن sayestan. Impersonal Verbs. The Use of the Subjunctive after تا ta and که ke.

1. The Passive Voice is formed with the Auxiliary Verb شدن sodan 'to become' (Present Stem شو šav-, šou) and the Past Participle of the main verb:

Infinitive	کشته شدن	košte sodan , to be killed.
Past Participle	کشته شده	košte sode .
Preterite	کشته شدم	košte sodam , etc.
Imperfect	کشته میشدم	košte misodam , etc.
Perfect	کشته شده‌ام	košte sode am , etc.
Pluperfect	کشته شده بودم	košte sode budam , etc.
Future	کشته خواهم شد	košte xaham sod , etc.
Present	کشته میشوم	košte misavam , etc.
Imperative	کشته شو	košte šou , ¹ etc.
Subjunctive Present	کشته بشوم	košte besavam , ¹ etc.
Subjunctive Past	کشته شده باشم	košte sode basam , etc.

2. The negative is formed by adding na- to the auxiliary شدن sodan in the usual way, e.g.

کشته نشدم	košte nasodam , I was not killed.
کشته نشده‌ام	košte nasode am , I have not been killed.
کشته نخواهم شد	košte naxaham sod , I shall not be killed.

3. Stress in the affirmative is carried on the final syllable of the main verb, e.g.

کشته شدم	koš'te sodam , I was killed.
کشته خواهم شد	koš'te xaham sod , I shall be killed.

In the negative it is carried on the negative prefix, e.g.

کشته نمیشوم	košte 'namisavam , I shall not be killed.
کشته نشدم	košte 'nasodam , I was not killed.

¹ There is a tendency to omit the prefix be- in the Imperative and the Subjunctive Present of the Passive Voice.

4. The Verbs گشتن gaflan (Present Stem گرد gard)¹ and گردیدن *gardidan*² 'to become' can be used in place of شدن sodan to form the Passive Voice.

5. The Passive Voice is not used in Persian if the Active Voice can be used. Thus 'I was hit by him' must be translated as 'he hit me'.

6. The Passive Voice can in some cases be expressed by the 3rd pers. pl. of the Active Voice. Certain verbs take this construction in preference to the Passive construction with شدن sodan, e.g.

اورا زدند ura zadand, He was hit (they hit him).

گفتند goftand, It was said (they said).

7. In addition to the auxiliary verbs بودن budan 'to be' and شدن sodan 'to become', the following auxiliaries are in common use:

توانستن tavanestan (Present Stem توان tavan) to be able.³

خواستن xastan (Present Stem خواه xah), to want.⁴

Both are normally followed by the Subjunctive Present,⁵ e.g.

میتوانم بروم mitavanam beravam, I can go.

نتوانستم بروم natavanestam beravam, I could not go.

خواهم توانست بروم xaham tavanest beravam, I shall be able to go.

میخواهم بروم mixaham beravam, I want to go.

میخواستم بروم mixastam beravam, I wanted to go.

8. خواستن xastan is sometimes used to mean 'to be on the point of doing something', e.g.

میخواست بمیرد mixast bemirad, He was about to die.

¹ گشتن gaflan is also used standing alone to mean 'to go for a walk', 'to search (for)', e.g.

توی شهر گشتیم tuye fahr gaflim, We walked about in the town.

عقب او گشتم aqabe u gaflam, I went to look for him.

² گردیدن gardidan standing alone means 'to go round', 'revolve'.

³ The obsolete verb یارستن yarastan 'to be able' was used in Classical Persian in the same way as توانستن tavanestan.

⁴ خواستن xastan as a transitive verb means 'to send for, summon, desire'.

⁵ Note, however, نمیتواند رفته باشد namitavanad rafte basad, he cannot have gone.

9. گذاشتن gozāstan (Present Stem گذار gozar) meaning 'to allow' is followed by the Subjunctive Present with or without که ke, e.g.

نگذاشت که بروم nagozāst ke beravam, He did not allow me to go.

10. The defective verb بایستن bayestan is used as an auxiliary and is followed by the Subjunctive. The only forms in common use are the 3rd pers. sing. باید bayad 'ought, must', بایست bayest and میبایست mibayest, 'ought to have'. A form میباید mibayad 'must' is occasionally found in place of باید bayad.

1st pers. sing.	باید بروم	bayad beravam	} I must go, ought to go, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	باید بروی	bayad beravi
3rd pers. sing.	باید برود	bayad beravad

1st pers. pl.	باید برویم	bayad beravim	} We must go, ought to go, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	باید بروید	bayad beravid
3rd pers. pl.	باید بروند	bayad beravand

1st pers. sing.	بایست رفته باشم	bayest rafte basam	} I must have gone, ought to have gone, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	بایست رفته باشی	bayest rafte bafi
3rd pers. sing.	بایست رفته باشد	bayest rafte basad

1st pers. pl.	بایست رفته باشیم	bayest rafte basim	} We must have gone, ought to have gone, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	بایست رفته باشید	bayest rafte basid
3rd pers. pl.	بایست رفته باشند	bayest rafte basand

bayad is also used with the Subjunctive Past and has the same meaning as bayest followed by the Subjunctive Past. mibayest is sometimes used in place of bayest.¹

11. The only forms of the defective verb شایستن sayestan in use are the Participles شایان sayan 'fitting, splendid, brilliant', شایسته sayeste 'fitting, proper' and شاید sayad. The latter means 'perhaps'. When referring to the present it is followed by the Indicative Present, but when referring to the future or past by the Subjunctive:²

1st pers. sing.	شاید بروم	sayad beravam	} Perhaps I shall go, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	شاید بروی	sayad beravi
3rd pers. sing.	شاید برود	sayad beravad

¹ See also Lesson XII, paras. 1 (b), and 3, and Lesson XIII, paras. 1 (e), 5 (h), 11 (g), and 12 (d and f).

² See also Lesson VII, para. 5 (b), Lesson XII, para. 3, and Lesson XIII, para. 6 (a).

1st pers. pl.	شاید برویم	sayad beravim	} Perhaps we shall go, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	شاید بروید	sayad beravid
3rd pers. pl.	شاید بروند	sayad beravand

1st pers. sing.	شاید رفته باشم	sayad rafte basam	} Perhaps I have gone, etc.
2nd pers. sing.	شاید رفته باشی	sayad rafte bafi
3rd pers. sing.	شاید رفته باشد	sayad rafte basad

1st pers. pl.	شاید رفته باشیم	sayad rafte basim	} Perhaps we have gone, etc.
2nd pers. pl.	شاید رفته باشید	sayad rafte basid
3rd pers. pl.	شاید رفته باشند	sayad rafte basand

In the case of بودن budan 'to be', the Preterite is used after شاید referring to past time, e.g.

شاید آنجا بود sayad anja bud, perhaps he was there.

12. The 3rd pers. sing. of بایستن bayestan and شدن sodan, and of the Subjunctive and Indicative Present of توانستن tavanestan can be used impersonally, in which case they are followed by the Short Infinitive.

If توانستن tavanestan is used impersonally the forms بتوان betavan and میتواند mitavan are used in the Subjunctive Present and the Indicative Present respectively, e.g.

اینرا میتواند کرد inra mitavan kard, One can do this.

باید رفت bayad raft, One must go.

شدن sodan used impersonally means 'to be possible', e.g.

میشود رفت misavad raft, It is possible to go.

13. The 3rd pers. sing. pres. of the obsolete verb مانستن manestan 'to resemble' is used in Colloquial Persian to mean 'it seems', e.g.

اینطور میماند in tōur mīmanad, It seems (to be) thus.

14. The negative prefix na- is added to the auxiliaries خواستن xastan, بایستن bayestan, and توانستن tavanestan (and not to the main verb) if the proposition is negative, e.g.

نباید بروید nabayad beravid, You must not go.

نمیتواند بماند namitavanad bemanad, He cannot stay.

نمیخواست بگوید namixast beguyad, He did not want to say.

A similar construction is used with توانستن tavanestan, بایستن bayestan and شدن sodan when these are used impersonally, e.g.

- نباید رفت nabayad raft, One must not go.
 نمیشود کرد namisavad kard, It is impossible to do (this).
 نمیتوان کرد namitavan kard, One cannot do (this).

15. In the case of شاید sayad the negative prefix is added to the main Verb, e.g.

شاید نروم sayad naravam, Perhaps I shall not go.

16. In Classical Persian the 2nd pers. sing. is sometimes used impersonally, e.g.

تو گفتی to gofti = One would have said.

گوئی gui = One would say.

17. The Subjunctive Present is used after certain conjunctions. Among them are:

(a) که ke and تا ta introducing a final clause, e.g.

اینرا باو دادم که بمنزل ببرد inra be u dadam ke be manzel bebarad,
 I gave him this to take to the house.

کتابرا بمن داد تا مرا کمک کند ketabra be man dad ta mara komak konad,
 He gave me the book to help me.

اینرا باو گفتم تا زودتر برود inra be u goftam ta zudtar beravad,
 I told him this in order that he should go earlier.

اورا بشهر فرستادند که نان بخرد ura be fahr ferestadand ke nan bexarad,
 They sent him to the town to buy (some) bread.

In the above examples تا ta and که ke are interchangeable.

تا ta is used in Persian to express consequence where 'and' is used in English, e.g.

اینرا بکن تا پولت بدم inra bekon ta pulat bedeham, Do this and I will give you (some) money.

(b) تا ta 'by the time that' referring to future time, e.g.

تا بشهر برسید خسته میشوید ta be fahr berasid xaste misavid, You will be tired by the time you reach the town.

تا شما بیائید رفته ام ta soma beyaid rafte am, By the time you come I shall have gone.

(c) تا ta 'until' referring to future time, usually with نه na, e.g.

تا اینرا نخواهم باور نمیکم ta intra naxanam bavar namikonam, I shall not believe this until I read it.

Note however that the نه na is by usage omitted in such sentences as the following:

تا شما بیائید صبر میکنم ta soma beyaid sabr mikonam, I will wait until you come.

(See also Lesson XIII, paras. 11 and 18.)

Temporal Clauses introduced by تا ta usually precede the principal sentence.

18. The Subjunctive is also used in substantive clauses implying intention or determination, with or without که ke, e.g.

مصمم شد که برادر خود بنویسد mosammam fod ke be baradare xod benevisad, He determined to write to his brother.

LESSON VII

Adverbs.¹ Conditional Sentences. The Causative.

1. There are no formally distinct adverbs in Persian but certain words correspond in use to the English adverb. These are mainly nouns, or words which were formerly used as nouns, and nouns combined with prepositions. Many adjectives are also used as adverbs.

آری ari, yes (this is often pronounced are).²

نه na, no (not normally used alone in polite speech).

نخیر naxêr, no.

چرا cera, why; yes.

هم ham, also (used also as an emphatic particle, see note to Lesson IV, para. 17).

با هم ba ham, together.

نیز niz, also.

خیلی xêli }
بسیار besyar } very.³

تنها tanha, alone.

چند cand, how much.

چندین candin }
چندان candan } so much; (with negative verb) not very.

زیاد ziad, much, too; (with negative verb) not very, not much.

اکنون aknun, now.

هرگز hargez, ever; (with negative verb) never.

¹ See also Part II, Lesson XXI, paras. 16-18.

² بآه bale is more frequently used for 'yes' in polite conversation.

³ See also Lesson V, para. 18.

همیشه hamife } always.
همواره hamvare }

فرو foru } down.
فرود forud }

بس bas, very (used to intensify Adjectives), e.g.

مقامی بس ارجمند دارد maqami bas arjmand darad, He has a very exalted position.

و بس va bas means 'nothing more, only', e.g.

این کار را کردم و بس in karra kardam va bas, I did this and nothing more.¹

هنوز hanuz, still, yet; (with negative verb) not yet.

چه ce, how, e.g.

چه خوش گفت فردوسی ce xof goft ferdōusi, How well spoke Ferdousi.

بارها barha, often (from بار bar 'time').

اینجا inja, here.

آنجا anja, there.

کجا koja, where (interrog.).

اینطور in tōur, thus, in this way.

آنطور an tōur, thus, in that way.

چطور ce tōur, how.

اینگونه ingune, thus, in this way.

آنگونه angune, thus, in that way.

چگونه cegune, how.

آنگاه angah, then.

گاهی gahi, sometimes.

گاه گاهی gah gahi, sometimes, from time to time.

گاه بگاه gah be gah, from time to time.

ناگاه nagah, suddenly.

بخودی خود be xodiye xod, involuntarily.

¹ بس bas used as a noun means 'enough', e.g.

باو بس دادید be u bas dadid, You gave him enough.

- کامابیش kamabif, کم و بیش kam o bif, more or less.
 هر آینه (آئینه) har ayene (aine), in any case; assuredly.
 روی هم رفته ruye ham rafte, altogether, on the whole.
 دست کم daste kam, at least.
 گویا guya,¹ apparently, perhaps, e.g.
 گویا این مال شماست guya in male somast, It seems this is yours.
 بالا bala, above.²
 پایین pain, below.³
 کم kam, seldom.
 دور dur, far.
 تند tond, quickly.
 خوب xub, well.
 سخت saxt, strictly, severely; very (used to intensify an adjective), e.g.
 سخت مریض است saxt mariq ast, He is very ill.
 پر por, very (used to intensify an adjective), e.g.
 این پر گران است in por geran ast, This is very expensive.
 پیوسته pēivaste, continually.⁴

Adjectives formed by the suffixes -e, -ine and -ane are frequently used as adverbs, e.g.

- هر ساله har sale, annually (every year).
 پنجروزه panjruze, in or for five days.
 روزینه ruzine, daily.⁵
 عاقلانه aqelane, intelligently, wisely.

² Used as an adjective بالا bala means 'upper', e.g.

طبقه بالا tabaqeye bala, the upper storey.

³ Used as an adjective پایین pain means 'lower', e.g.

طبقه پایین tabaqeye pain, the lower storey.

⁴ پیوسته pēivaste is the past participle of پیوستن pēivastan 'to join'.

⁵ The modern usage is روزانه ruzane.

Many abstract nouns (see Lesson x, para. 1) are combined with the preposition be and used as adverbs, e.g.

آسانی be asani, easily (from آسانی asani, ease).

بخوبی be xubi, well (from خوبی xubi, goodness).

2. 'As (in the capacity of)' is expressed by بعنوان be envan with the ezafe, e.g.

بعنوان نماینده دولت آمد be envane namayandeye dōulat amad, He came as the government's representative.

'As...as possible' is rendered by هر چه har ce with the comparative adjective, e.g.

هر چه زودتر har ce zudtar, as quickly as possible.

هر چه تمامتر har ce tamamtar, as completely as possible.

هر چه تمامتر har ce tamamtar is also used as follows:

با خوشحالی هر چه تمامتر ba xoshaliye har ce tamamtar, with the greatest possible happiness.

3. Stress in the forms given in para. 1 above is carried on the final syllable in the majority of cases.

The following carry the stress on the initial syllable:

آره are, yes.

چرا cera, why?

گاهی gahi, sometimes.

هر آینه (آئینه) har ayene (aine), in any case.

In compounds formed with طور tōur and گونه gune the stress is carried on the first component, e.g.

چطور 'ce tōur, how.

آنگونه 'angune, thus.

The following carry the stress on the initial or final syllable:

نخیر naxēir, no.

خیلی xēili, very.

کجا koja, where?

4. Adverbs or adverbial phrases denoting time normally precede other adverbs or adverbial phrases. Adverbs or adverbial phrases of manner usually precede those of place, e.g.

دیروز ساعت ده با اسب به شهر آمد diruz sa'ate dah ba asb be fahr amad, Yesterday at ten o'clock he came on horseback to the town.

5. Conditional Sentences are introduced by اگر agar 'if'. The protasis normally precedes the apodosis.

(a) Possible Conditions. (i) Possible Conditions which refer to the future take the present or future in the apodosis and the Subjunctive Present in the protasis, e.g.

اگر بروید من هم میروم agar beravid man ham miravam, If you go, I shall go also.

If the action in the 'if clause' is a single action and precedes the action in the main clause, the preterite can be used in the 'if clause', e.g.

اگر آمد باو بگوئید agar amad be u beguid, If he comes tell him.

See also Lesson XIII, paras. 5 (c), 5 (e) and 9 (e).

(ii) Possible conditions which refer to the present in the protasis, i.e. to an action which may be actually taking place, or to a state which may be actually in existence, take the Indicative Present in the protasis and the Indicative Present or Future in the apodosis, e.g.

اگر کتاب خود را میخواند چیزی باو نخواهم گفت agar ketabe xodra mixanad cizi be u naxaham goft, If he is reading his book I shall not say anything to him.

If, however, the verb بودن budan is used in the protasis of a conditional sentence of this type, it is usual to use the Subjunctive Present, e.g.

اگر مریض باشد نخواهد آمد agar mariṣ basad naxahad amad,
If he is ill he will not come.

(iii) Possible Conditions referring to past time in the protasis and present or future in the apodosis take the Subjunctive Past in the protasis and the present or future in the apodosis, e.g.

اگر نرفته باشد باو میگویم agar naraṣte basad be u miguyam,
If he has not gone I will tell him.

- اگر اورا دیده باشید کافی است agar ura dide basid kafist, If you have seen him it is enough.
- اگر کتاب را گم کرده باشید یکی دیگر میخرم agar ketabra gom karde basid yaki digar mixaram, If you have lost the book I will buy another.

(b) Impossible Conditions, whether relating to the past or present, take the Imperfect in both parts, e.g.

- اگر میتوانستم میآمدم agar mitavanestam miamadam, I would have come if I could; if I could come I would (but I cannot).
- اگر زودتر میرفتید میرسیدید agar zudtar miraftid mirasidid, If you had gone earlier you would have arrived (in time).
- اگر جوان بودم^۱ میرفتم agar javan budam miraftam, If I had been young I would have gone; I would go if I was young (but I am not).

The Pluperfect can be used in either or both parts instead of the Imperfect in Impossible Conditions relating to the past, e.g.

- اگر تفنگ داشت^۲ مرا کشته بود agar tofang dast mara kofte bud, If he had had a gun he would have killed me.
- اگر ارزان بود^۱ خریده بودم agar arzan bud xaride budam, If it had been cheap I would have bought it.
- اگر پائیز میآمدید هنوز نرفته بودیم agar paiṣ miamadid hanuṣ naraṣte budim, If you had come in the autumn we would still have been there (we should not yet have gone).

If šayad 'perhaps' is introduced into the main sentence, the tense is not affected, e.g.

- اگر آنجا میرفتید شاید اورا میدیدید agar anja miraftid šayad ura mididid, If you had gone there, perhaps you would have seen him.

See also Lesson XIII, para. 27.

^۱ بودن budan does not take mi- in the Imperfect, see Lesson III, para. 8.

^۲ داشتن dastan does not take mi- in the Imperfect, see Lesson III, para. 7.

6. 'But if not', 'or else', 'otherwise' are rendered by va agar na or va ella, e.g.

اگر ممکن باشد میروم و اگر نه اینجا میمانم agar momken basad miravam va agar na inja mimanam,
 If it is possible I shall go, but if not I shall stay here.
 باید اینرا بخورید و الا گرسنه میمانید bayad inra bexorid va ella gorosne mimanid,
 You must eat this or else you will be (remain) hungry.

7. چنانچه conance is also used as a conditional conjunction, e.g.

چنانچه مایل باشید میتوانید بیایید conance mayel basid mitavanid beyaid, If you care (to come) you can come.

چنانچه جویای حال ما باشید بد نیستیم conance juyaye hale ma basid bad nistim, If you want to know how we are (are inquiring of our state), we are well.

چنانچه کاری ندارید با ما بیایید conance kari nadarid ba ma beyaid, If you have no work, come with us.

hargah 'whenever' is also used as a conditional conjunction = 'if', e.g.

هرگاه او را دیدید سلام مرا برسانید hargah ura didid salame mara berasanid, If (whenever) you see him remember me (to him).

هرگاه مسافرت کنید یادی از ما بکنید hargah mosafarat konid yadi az ma bekonid, If (whenever) you go on a journey, think of us.

ke is also used occasionally to mean 'if' when referring to the future and is followed by the Indicative Present, e.g.

این پولرا که باو میدهم از دستان میرود in pulra ke be u midehim az dasteman miravad, If we give him this money it will be lost to us.

8. The infinitive of the Causative is formed by the addition of انیدن -anidan or اندن -andan to the present stem of the verb, e.g.

رسانیدن rasanidan, رساندن rasandan, to cause to arrive, transmit (from رسیدن rasidan 'to arrive').

جوشانیدن jufanidan, جوشاندن jufandan to boil (trans.) (from جوشیدن jufidan to boil (intrans.)).

In Colloquial Persian the causative in اندن -andan tends to be used rather than the form in انیدن -anidan. نشستن nefastan 'to sit down' forms its causative irregularly thus: نشاندن nefandan 'to cause to sit down, to seat'.

Verbs the Present Stem of which ends in ان an, such as ماندن mandan 'to remain', cannot form a Causative.

9. Possibility is expressed by such expressions as ممکن است momken ast 'it is possible', or احتمال دارد ehtemal darad 'it is probable'. 'May' is normally translated by ممکن است momken ast followed by the Subjunctive Present with or without که ke.

LESSON VIII

Conjunctions.¹ Relative Clauses. هر har. چنانکه conanké and چنانکه coninké. چنانچه conance and چنانچه conince. Indefinite Nouns and Pronouns.

1. Conjunctions can be divided into two main classes: co-ordinating conjunctions and subordinating conjunctions.

(a) Co-ordinating Conjunctions, e.g.

یا . . . یا	aya . . . ya , whether . . . or (interrog.).	} whether . . . or.
چه . . . چه	ce . . . ce
خواه . . . خواه	xah . . . xah

¹ See also Part II, Lesson XXI, paras. 19-21.

هم... (و) هم ham... (va) ham, both... and.

نه... (و) نه na... (va) na, neither... nor.

مگر^۱ magar, but (used with a negative question expecting the answer 'yes' or with an affirmative question expecting the answer 'no'), e.g.

مگر اینطور نیست magar in tōur nist, But is it not so?

مگر نرفتید magar naraftid, But did you not go?

مگر آنجا بودید magar anja budid, But were you there?

(b) Subordinating Conjunctions. These can be subdivided into

(i) Adversative, e.g.

مبادا (که) mabada (ke), lest.

(ii) Conditional, e.g.

اگر agar, if.

هرگاه hargah, if.

که ke, if.

چنانچه conance, if.

مگر (اینکه) magar (inke), unless.

بدون اینکه bedune inke, unless (without this that)

تا ta, unless.

(iii) Concessive, e.g.

با اینکه (آنکه) ba inke (anke), in spite of the fact that, notwithstanding that.

هرچند (که) har cand (ke), even if, however much, although.

چنانچه conance, as, lest.

چندانکه candanke, notwithstanding that.

اگرچه agarce, although, even if.

If a concessive clause is introduced by اگرچه agarce the main clause is sometimes introduced by some such word as ولی vali 'but' or باز baz 'still', or with a negative verb by هنوز hanuz, e.g.

^۱ In Classical Persian مگر magar is also used in story-telling = 'now, now it happened that'.

اگرچه مدتی با او زندگی کرده‌ام هنوز او را نمی‌شناسم agarce moddati ba u zendegi karde am hanuz ura namifenasam,

Although I lived with him for a (long) time, I do not know him.

اگرچه دیر وقت بود باز بمنزل برگشتیم agarce dir vaqt bud bar be manzel bar gashim,

Although it was late we returned home.

(iv) Causal, e.g.

چون (که)	cun (ke)	} because.
چه	ce
زیرا (که)	zira (ke)
از اینکه	az inke
که	ke

(v) Final, e.g.

که	ke , that, in order that.	} in order that.
تا	ta
تا اینکه	ta inke

(vi) Consecutive, e.g.

آنقدر... که	an qadr... ke	} so... that, e.g.
چنان... که	conan... ke

اوقاتش چنان تلخ شد که نتوانست حرف بزند

ouqatef conan talx sod ke natavanest harf bezanad,

He was so angry he could not speak.

از بس که az bas ke, so long, so much... that, e.g.

از بس که گفتم خسته شدم az bas ke goftam xaste sodam, I have said (it) so much that I am tired.

از بس که نشستم خوابم می‌برد az bas ke nefastam xabam mibarad, I have sat so long I am sleepy.

(vii) Temporal, e.g.

تا ta, as long as, until, by the time that, since, as soon as.

تا اینکه (آنکه) ta inke (anke), as long as, by the time that; until.

چون cun, when.

از موقعیکه az mouqe'ike, since (from the time that).

پس از آنکه (اینکه)	pas az anke (inke) , after.
پیش از آنکه (اینکه)	pis az anke (inke) , before.
هرگاه	hargah , whenever.
همینکه	haminke , as soon as.
که	ke , when.
وقتیکه	vaqtike , when.
موقعیکه	mouqe'ike , when, as.

The subject of the temporal clause precedes که ke 'when', e.g.

زمستان که میشود میرویم zamestan ke misavad miravim, When it is winter we will go.

(viii) Comparative, e.g.

که ke, than, e.g.

بقدریکه be qadrike, as much as, e.g.

بقدریکه شما خوانده‌اید من نخوانده‌ام be qadrike soma xande id man naxande am, I have not read as much as you.

اینقدر (آنقدر) ... که in qadr (an qadr) ... ke, as much ... as, e.g.

هیچ وقت اینقدر حرف نمیزد که امشب حرف زد

hic vaqt in qadr harf namizad ke emsab harf zad,

He never used to speak as much as he spoke to-night.

2. Final Conjunctions take the Subjunctive Present (see Lesson VI, para. 17 (a)). تا ta 'by the time that' and تا ta 'until' referring to future time also take the Subjunctive Present (see Lesson VI, para. 17 (b) and (c)).

مبادا mabada (ke) 'lest' takes the subjunctive, e.g.

ترسیدم مبادا فراموش کرده باشید tarsidam mabada faramus karde basid, I feared (lest) you had forgotten.

میترسم مبادا فراموش بکند mitarsam mabada faramus bekonad, I fear (lest) he may forget.

مگر اینکه magar inke 'unless' and بدون اینکه bedune inke 'unless' also take the Subjunctive except in impossible conditions when they are followed by the Imperfect or Pluperfect.

نمیایم مگر اینکه namiyam magar inke be man benevisid, I shall not come unless you write to me.

piş aṣ anke (inke) 'before' takes the Subjunctive Present even when referring to time past, e.g.

piş aṣ anke ura bebinam kayaxra nevestam, I wrote the letter before I saw him.

bejaye inke 'instead of (this that)', its synonym dar avaze inke, and joṣ inke and γēir aṣ inke 'except' are also followed by Present Subjunctive.

Other conjunctions, except Conditional Conjunctions,¹ are followed by the Indicative or Subjunctive according to whether the statement is one of fact or contains an element of doubt. Thus xah... xah 'whether...or' referring to the future takes the Subjunctive, e.g.

xah beyayad xah nayayad miravam, Whether he comes or not I shall go.

Clauses introduced by Conditional, Concessive, Consecutive or Temporal Conjunctions normally precede the principal sentence. Clauses introduced by Adversative, Causal (except aṣ inke) and Final Conjunctions follow the principal sentence.

3. Stress falls on the initial syllable of the following conjunctions:

مگر	magar , but, unless.
هرچند (که)	har cand (ke) , even if.
مبادا (که)	mabada (ke) , lest.
هرگاه	hargah , whenever.
اگرچه	agarce , although.
چون (که)	cun (ke) }
زیرا (که)	zira (ke) } because.
چرا (که)	cera (ke) }
همینکه	haminke , as soon as.
چندانکه	candanke , notwithstanding that.

In the case of agar 'if' it falls on the initial or final syllable.

In the following it falls on the initial syllable or on in or an:

ba inke (anke), notwithstanding.

ta inke (anke), until, etc.

پیش از آنکه (اینکه) piš az anke (inke), before.

پس از آنکه (اینکه) pas az anke (inke), after.

In az bas ke 'so long' stress falls on bas.

4. ta is also used to mean 'let us see, behold, beware, namely' and is usually followed by the Subjunctive Present. This use of ta is common in Classical Persian especially in poetry, e.g.

بین تا چه بازی کند روزگار

bebin ta ce bazi konad ruzgar,

See (let us see) what tricks time will play.

هر گرانمایه در این صرف شد * تا چه خورم صیف و چه پوشم شتا

omre geranmaye dar in sarf sod ta ce xoram seif o ce pufam seta,

(My) precious life was spent in this, namely (in thinking) what shall I eat in summer and what shall I wear in winter.

ای که شخص منت حقیر نمود * تا درشتی هنر نپنداری ei ke faxse manat haqir namud ta dorofli honar napandari,

O thou to whom my person appeared contemptible, beware lest thou consider size (largeness) virtue.

5. Relative Clauses are introduced by the Relative Pronoun ke 'who, which'. -i is added to the antecedent if definite unless this is a proper noun, a personal pronoun, a singular demonstrative pronoun,¹ a word doing duty for a pronoun,² a word to which a pronominal suffix has been added, a plural which is not particularized, or a noun used generically (see para. 12 below), e.g.

مردی که آنجا بود کتاب را بمن داد mardi ke anja bud ketabra beman dad,
The man who was there gave me the book.

If the antecedent is qualified by an adjective or adjectives these with the antecedent are regarded as a syntactical whole and the Relative -i is added to the final qualifying word, e.g.

دختر کوچکی که پیش شما بود کی بود doxtare kuceki ke piše šoma bud ki bud, Who was the small girl who was with you?

² E.g. bande 'slave', which is used for the Personal Pronoun 1st pers. sing. (see Lesson XIV, para. 1 (a) below).

If the word to which the Relative -i is added ends in a, u, or e it follows the same rules when the Relative -i is added as when the Indefinite -i is added, see Lesson 1, para. 2.

6. If the antecedent is definite and the direct object of the verb of the principal sentence, and the relative pronoun is the subject of the relative clause, the use of -ra is optional. The Demonstrative Pronoun آن an frequently qualifies the antecedent, e.g.

آن زنیرا که دیروز آمد دیدم an zanira ke diruz amad didam, I saw the woman who came yesterday, or آن زنیکه دیروز آمد دیدم an zani ke diruz amad didam.

7. If the antecedent is definite and the subject of the principal sentence and the relative pronoun is the direct object in the relative clause, the antecedent can take -ra; this, again, is optional, e.g.

زنیرا که دیدید اینجا است zanira ke didid injast, The woman whom you saw is here, or زنی که دیدید اینجا است zani ke didid injast.

کتابیرا که بمن دادید گم شده است ketabira ke be man dadid gom sode ast, The book which you gave me is lost, or کتابی که بمن دادید گم شده است ketabi ke be man dadid gom sode ast.

8. If the relative pronoun is the indirect object of the relative clause or governed by a preposition, a pronoun or pronominal suffix must be used in the relative clause in addition to the Relative که ke, e.g.

مردهائیکه کتابهارا بآنها داده بودید رفتند mardhai ke ketabhara be anha dade budid raftand, The men to whom you gave the books went.

این همان مردیست که اسبی از او خریدم in haman mardist ke asbi az u xaridam, This is the (same) man from whom I bought a horse.

این همان شخصی است که دیروز برادر شما با
او بود in haman shaxsist ke diruz baradare soma ba u bud, This is the same person with whom your brother was yesterday.

9. If the antecedent is the predicate of the principal sentence, the verb of the principal sentence precedes the Relative که ke (see the last two examples in para. 8 above).

10. Since ی -i is added to the antecedent where this is definite, it follows that there will be a confusion between a definite antecedent followed by the Relative که ke and an indefinite antecedent to which the Indefinite ی -i has been already added, and that therefore پسریکه pesari ke... may mean 'the boy who' or 'a boy who'.

11. A distinction is made between 'descriptive' and 'restrictive' relative clauses. The latter type is closely linked to the antecedent in thought, whereas the former, while in a formal sense a dependent clause, does not limit the application of the antecedent, so that it is logically an independent proposition. In a 'descriptive' relative clause the relative pronoun که ke only is used, e.g.

مؤلف که نویسنده خوبی است این سبک را اختیار کرده است

mo'allef ke nevisandeye xubist in sabkra exteyar karde ast,

The author, who is a good writer, has chosen this style.

12. If the antecedent is a plural which refers to a class or group as a whole, the Relative ی -i is not added to the antecedent, e.g.

با اعتماد حسن ظن سیاستمداران جهان که در حل اینگونه مسائل تجربه زیاد

دارند موضوع را مطرح میکنیم be e'temade hosne zanne siyasatmadarane jahan ke dar halle ingune masa'el tajrebeye ziyad darand mōūzu'ra matrah mikonim.

Trusting in the good-will of the statesmen of the world, who have (had) much experience in solving such problems, we are bringing up the matter.

If the Relative ی -i were added to the antecedent in the above example, the meaning would be '...to those of the statesmen of the world who have...'.
 Similarly if the antecedent is an abstract noun used generically, it does not take the Relative ی -i, e.g.

عقل که انسان بدان بر حیوان برتری دارد نعمت بزرگ است aql ke ensan bedan bar hēivan bartari darad ne'mate bozorgist.

Reason, by which man has superiority over animals, is a great gift.

When not used generically abstract nouns take the Relative -i unless they end in -i, in which case the Relative -i is not added, e.g.

عقلی که دارید ناقص است aghi ke darid naqes ast,
Your reason (the reason which you have) is defective.

مهربانیرا که بمن نشان دادید فراموش نمیکنم mehrabanira ke be man neshan dadid faramush namikonam, I shall not forget the kindness which you showed me.

13. The Relative -i is sometimes added to the Demonstrative Pronouns آنها anha 'those' and اینجا insha 'these', e.g.

آنهائیکه آنجا بودند رفتند anhai ke anja budand raftand, Those who were there went.

Other Pronouns do not take the Relative -i, e.g.

شما که آنجا بودید بما بگوئید چه دیدید soma ke anja budid be ma beguid ce didid, You, who were there, tell us what you saw.

In Colloquial Persian the Relative -i can be added to the personal pronouns; thus in the preceding example it would be possible to say شمائی که somai ke . . . instead of شما که soma ke.

In Colloquial Persian, also, the plural termination ها -ha can be added to the 1st and 2nd pers. pl. of the personal pronouns with the Relative -i to single out a group, e.g.

شماهایی که آنجا بودید چه دیدید somahai ke anja budid ce didid, Those of you who were there, what did you see?

14. After آن an 'that' and این in 'this' چه ce is used as a Relative Pronoun, e.g.

از آنچه گفته شد معلوم میشود az ance gofte sod ma'lum misavad, It is (will be) evident from what has been said.

15. The Relative -i and the Relative Pronouns که ke and چه ce do not carry the stress.

16. xod, xif and xiflan used in a relative clause refer to the subject of that clause and not to the subject of the principal sentence, e.g.

حسین نامہای بمن داد کہ علی پیدر خود نوشته بود hosēin namei be man dad ke ali be pedare xod neveste bud.

Hosein gave me a letter which Ali had written to his (Ali's) father.

حسین نامہای بمن داد کہ علی پیدرش نوشته بود hosēin namei be man dad ke ali be pedaraf neveste bud.

Hosein gave me a letter which Ali had written to his (Hosein's) father.

17. har 'every' is a distributive adjective which precedes the noun it qualifies. Prefixed to ce, ke and kodam, it means 'whatever', 'whoever' and 'whichever' respectively, e.g.

هر کہ میخواست بیاید زود بیاید har ke mixahad beyayad zud beyayad,
Whoever wants to come must be quick (let him be quick).

هر کدام از شما حاضر است برود har kodam az soma hazer ast beravad,
Whichever of you is ready can go (let him go).

هر چه کرد نتوانست در را باز کند har ce kard natavanest darra bax konad,
Whatever he did he could not open the door.

har ce also means 'however much', e.g.

هر چه گشتم او را پیدا نکردم har ce gaslam ura pēida nakardam, However much I looked I did not find him.

har kas means 'anyone', e.g.

هر کسی که بیاید او را بنشانید har kasi ke beyayad ura benesānid, Make whoever comes sit down.

هر کسی که اینرا میداند بگوید har kasi ke inra midanad beguyad, Let anyone who knows this speak.

har do means 'both', e.g.

هر دو شان رفتند har došan raftand, They both went.

har se, har cahar, etc., mean 'all three', 'all four', etc.

18. The Relative Pronoun ke is suffixed to the Demonstratives conan and conin to mean 'just as, in the same way that, in this way that'.

19. چه ce is suffixed to چنان conan to mean 'just as, in the same way that, in case'.

20. There are a number of indefinite nouns, pronouns and adjectives in use. Among them are the following:

(a) همه hame 'all', e.g.

همه رفتند hame raftand, All went.

همه شما بیایید hameye soma beyaid, All of you come.

همه کس hame kas means 'everyone'.

If the Pronominal Suffix for the 3rd pers. sing. is added to همه hame the e of hame is elided, e.g.

باغ همه اش سبز بود baḡ hameš sabz bud, The whole garden was green (the garden, the whole of it, was green).

(b) تمام tamam 'the whole, whole, complete', e.g.

تمام روز در شهر بود tamame ruz dar šahr bud, He was the whole day in the town.

آنها تمام خورد anra tamam xord, He ate it all (wholly).

با خوشی تمام بیرون رفت ba xošīye tamam birun raft, He went out completely happy (with complete happiness).

(c) سائر sa'er (also written سایر and pronounced sayer) 'the rest', e.g.

سائر کتابها را فروخت sa'ere ketabhara foruxt, He sold the rest of the books.

(d) فلان folan means 'such a one, such and such, so-and-so' and is used as a noun or adjective, e.g.

فلان کس آمد folan kas amad, Such and such a person came.

The Indefinite ی -i can be added to فلان folan when it is used as a noun, e.g.

فلانی آمد folani amad, So-and-so came.

(e) بعضی ba'zi means 'some'. It precedes the noun it qualifies, which is put in the plural, and does not take the ezafe, e.g.

بعضی کتابها ba'zi ketabha, some books.

در بعضی جاها dar ba'zi jaha, in some places.

It is also used as a noun, e.g.

بعضی رفتند بعضی ماندند ba'zi raftand ba'zi mandand, Some went (and) some remained.

When used as a noun ba'zi takes az rather than the azafe, e.g.

بعضی از شما ba'zi az شما, some of you.

بعضی از آنها ba'zi az آنها, some of them.

بعضی از برادران او ba'zi az baradarane u, some of his brothers.

In Colloquial Persian the plural termination ها -ha is often added to ba'zi when it is used as a noun, e.g.

بعضیها آنجا هستند ba'ziha anja hastand, Some are there.

(f) barxi 'some' is used in the same way as ba'zi above, but it does not take the plural termination ها -ha.

(g) andak means 'a little, few'. It usually precedes the word it qualifies, e.g.

اندک فرصت بمن بدهید andak forsat be man bedehid, Give me a little (short) respite.

It can be strengthened by the addition of the Indefinite ی -i, e.g.

اندکی فکر کرد andaki fekr kard, He thought a little.

(h) bas means 'many a'. It precedes the noun it qualifies, which is put in the singular, e.g.

بس جان بلب آمد bas jan be lab amad, Many a soul has passed away.

The Indefinite ی -i is added to bas to mean 'many a'. The following noun is put in the plural, e.g.

بسی مردم	basi mardom	} many people.
بسی اشخاص	basi asxas

basi is also used to mean 'a long while'.

(i) The Indefinite ی -i is added to besyar to mean 'many'. It is used as a noun and followed by از az, e.g.

بسیاری از مردم میگویند besyari az mardom miguyand, Many people say.

(j) yak xorde means 'a little', e.g.

یک خرده آب بمن بدهید yak xorde ab be man bedehid, Give me a little water.

(k) joz'i (from joz 'part, portion') also means 'a little', e.g.

جزئی کسالت دارد joz'i kesalat darad, He is slightly indisposed.

If he has not gone I will tell him. 12. He forgot to tell you. 13. I should like to come with you to Persia, because I have never been there. 14. In my opinion, it would be better if we discussed the matter now. 15. Whether you go or not makes no difference. 16. This book will be useful to you.

LESSON IX

Compound Verbs

1. Compound verbs are formed by a simple verb combined with a noun, adjective, adverb or prepositional phrase. The following simple verbs are commonly used to form compounds: کردن (کن) kardan (kon) 'to do, make', نمودن (نما) namudan (nama) 'to show', داشتن (دار) daftan (dar) 'to have, possess', دادن (ده) dadan (deh) 'to give', زدن (زن) zadan (zan) 'to strike', شدن (شو) sodan (sav-, fou) 'to become', گشتن (گرد) gaftan (gard) 'to become', خوردن xordan 'to eat', آمدن (آ) amadan (a) 'to come', کشیدن kashidan 'to pull, draw', افتادن (افت) oftadan (oft) 'to fall', گرفتن (گیر) gereftan (gir) 'to take', یافتن (یاب) yافتan (yab) 'to find' and بردن (بر) bordan (bar) 'to take, carry'.

sodan and gaftan, while interchangeable when used to form the Passive Voice (see Lesson VI, para. 4), are not in all cases interchangeable when used to form compound verbs. namudan can usually be substituted for کردن kardan.

(a) Compound verbs formed by a simple verb¹ and a noun, e.g. گوش کردن (دادن) gush kardan (dadan), to listen.

گردش کردن	gardef kardan , to go for a walk.
دست دادن	dast dadan , to shake hands.
چانه زدن	cane zadan , to bargain (over a price, etc.).
آتش زدن	atef zadan , to set fire to.

نام گذاشتن	nam gozastan , to give a name to (someone).
نماز گذاشتن	namaz gozastan , to perform one's prayers, to pray.

Many verbs are formed with a Verbal Noun and a simple verb such as کردن kardan. The tendency in Modern Persian is to use such compounds rather than the simple verb, e.g.

وادر کردن vadar k. 'to persuade, oblige' rather than داشتن va daftan.

کوشش کردن kusef kardan, 'to try, strive' rather than کوشیدن kufidan.

(b) Compound verbs formed by a simple verb and an adjective, e.g.

باز کردن baz kardan, to open.

پیدا کردن peida kardan, to find.

- جوش آمدن juf amadan, to boil (intrans.).
 پسند آمدن pasand amadan, to be agreeable.
 دور افتادن dur oftadan, to be separated.
 بلند کردن boland kardan, to raise, lift; to steal (colloq.).

(c) Compound verbs formed by a simple verb and a preposition or adverb equivalent:

باز baṣ, again, back, e.g.

باز آمدن baṣ amadan, to come again.

باز داشتن baṣ daftan, to restrain, intern, detain.

وا va (used only in compounds), back, again, e.g.

وا داشتن va daftan, to restrain; persuade, oblige (someone to do something).

وا زدن va ṣadan, to reject, refuse.

وا گذاشتن va goṣaftan, to leave, abandon; cede, make over.

بر bar, on, up, off, e.g.

بر آمدن bar amadan, to be accomplished; to rise, swell.

بر آوردن bar avardan, to fulfil, accomplish, estimate.

بر آشفتن bar afoftan, to disturb, agitate.

بر افراشتن bar afraftan, to raise up.

بر گزیدن bar goṣidan, to choose, select.

بر گشتن bar gaftan, to return.

ور var, away, off, up (used only in compounds), e.g.

ور آمدن var amadan, to rise (bread, etc.).

ور رفتن var raftan, to fiddle, fidget.

پیش piš, before, forward, e.g.

پیش آمدن piš amadan, to occur, happen.

پیش افتادن piš oftadan, to come to the fore, take the lead.

پیش کشیدن piš kasidan, to bring forward.

پیش بردن piš bordan, to win, gain the upper hand.

در dar, in; also conveys a sense of completion. E.g.

در آمدن dar amadan, to come out (in Modern Persian); to go in, to come out (in Classical Persian).

در آموختن dar amuxtan, to learn thoroughly.

در آوردن dar avardan, to bring in, out, take out; to learn.

در رسیدن dar rasidan, to overtake, come upon.

در رفتن dar raftan, to flee, slip away; to go off (a gun, etc.).

در گذشتن dar gozastan, to die; to pass over, forgive.

در گرفتن dar gereftan, to catch (a fire, etc.); to 'catch on'.

در ماندن dar mandan, to become helpless, distressed, destitute; to be tired out.

در کردن dar kardan, to let off (a gun, etc.).

فرا fara, behind, back, again; the addition of فرا fara makes the verb emphatic.¹ E.g.

فرا آمدن fara amadan, to come.

فرا رفتن fara raftan, to go.

فرا افکندن fara afkandan, to throw.

فرا گرفتن fara gereftan, to learn (well).

فرو foru, فرود forud down; فرو foru is also used to make the verb emphatic. E.g.

فرو آمدن forud amadan, to alight, come down.

فرو بردن foru bordan, to swallow; to immerse.

¹ فرا fara is used to form compound verbs in Classical rather than Modern Persian. فراز faraṣ, up, again, under, back, is similarly used in Classical Persian to emphasize the verb, e.g.

فراز آمدن faraṣ amadan, to approach, enter.

فراز دادن faraṣ dadan, to give back.

فراز آوردن faraṣ avardan, to obtain.

- فرو رفتن foru raftan } to sink, go under.
 فرو شدن foru sodan }
 فرو نشستن foru nefastan, to subside (a rebellion, etc.); to sit down.
 فرو ایستادن foru istadan, to stop (rain, etc.).

(d) Compound verbs formed by a simple verb and a prepositional phrase, e.g.

- بجا آوردن be ja avardan, to perform, accomplish.
 در صدد بر آمدن dar sadad bar amadan, to intend (to do something).
 بکار بردن be kar bordan, to make use of.
 بسر بردن be sar bordan, to spend, pass (time).
 بسر آمدن be sar amadan, to fall due.
 از دست دادن az dast dadan, to give up, lose.
 از بین رفتن az bein raftan, to disappear, be lost.
 سر بسر گذاشتن sar be sar gozastan, to tease.
 بشمار رفتن be somar raftan, to be considered, reckoned as.
 در بر گرفتن dar bar gereftan, to embrace.
 در میان نهادن dar mian nehadan, to lay before (someone, something), discuss.

(e) Compound verbs formed by a simple verb and the present stem or some part of another verb, e.g.

- گیر کردن gir kardan, to get stuck.
 گیر آوردن gir avardan, to get, obtain (possession of something).
 نیست و نابود کردن nist o nabud kardan, to destroy utterly.

2. Compound verbs are also formed by a simple verb combined with an Arabic participle, noun or adjective:¹

(a) With an Arabic Noun, e.g.

- فکر کردن fekr kardan, to think.
 حرکت کردن harakat kardan, to set out, start.
 صبر کردن sabr kardan, to wait, have patience.

قناعت کردن	qana'at kardan , to be contented, satisfied (with), make do (with).
تعلیم کردن	ta'lim kardan , to teach.
مطالعه کردن	motale'e kardan , to study, read.

تغافل ورزیدن	taẓafol varzidan , to show neglect.
وفات یافتن	vafat yaftan , to die.

تأسف خوردن ta'asof xordan, to regret.

مفره انداختن sofre andaxtan, to lay the table.

ادامه پیدا کردن edame peida kardan, to continue (intrans.).

(b) With an Arabic Participle, e.g.

منکوب کردن mankub kardan, to conquer.

مغلوب کردن maylub kardan, to defeat.

منصرف کردن monsaref kardan, to dissuade.

متحیر کردن motahāiyer kardan, to surprise, astonish.

غالب آمدن (بر) γaleb amadan (bar), to conquer.

(c) With an Arabic Adjective, e.g.

اسیر گرفتن (کردن) asir gereftan (kardan), to take prisoner.

مریض شدن marix sodan, to be, become ill.

سوار کردن savar kardan, to take on board, to put on a horse, etc.

(d) With an Arabic Noun combined with a preposition, e.g.

باتمام رساندن be etmam rasandan, to finish, bring to an end.

بوجود آوردن be vojūd avardan, to bring into existence.

بخاطر آوردن be xater avardan, to bring to mind, recall.

بغارت بردن be γarat bordan, to carry off as plunder.

بهدر رفتن be hadar raftan, to be wasted, go to waste.

3. Compound verbs, with certain exceptions, form their passive in the usual way with شدن sodan, e.g.

بر انداخته شدن bar andaxte sodan, to be overthrown.

بر گزیده شدن bar gozide sodan, to be chosen.

(a) If a compound verb formed with کردن kardan is transitive شدن sodan replaces کردن in the Passive Voice, e.g.

اعلام کردن e'lam kardan, to announce.

اعلام شدن e'lam sodan, to be announced.

راضی کردن razi kardan, to satisfy, secure the agreement of (someone).

راضی شدن razi sodan, to be satisfied.

اسیر کردن asir kardan, to take prisoner.

اسیر شدن asir sodan, to be taken prisoner.

(b) Some compound verbs formed with زدن zadan change this into خوردن xordan in the Passive Voice, e.g.

گول زدن gul zadan, to deceive.

گول خوردن gul xordan, to be deceived.

بهم زدن be ham zadan, to disturb, break up, dissolve (a meeting, etc.).

بهم خوردن be ham xordan, to be broken up, dissolved.

مجلس بهم خورد majles be ham xord, The meeting (assembly) broke up.

Note also the colloquial phrase (used only of persons)

میانسان بهم خورد mianesan be ham xord, Relations between them were broken off, they quarrelled.

(c) Some compound verbs formed with دادن dadan also change this into خوردن xordan in the Passive Voice, e.g.

شکست دادن sekast dadan, to defeat.

شکست خوردن sekast xordan, to be defeated.

(d) Some compound verbs formed with دادن dadan change this into یافتن yafstan in the Passive Voice, e.g.

پرورش دادن parvaref dadan, to educate, bring up.

پرورش یافتن parvaref yafstan, to be educated.

انجام دادن anjam dadan, to accomplish.

انجام یافتن anjam yafstan, to be accomplished.

(e) ارسال داشتن ersal داشتن 'to send' becomes ارسال شدن ersal sodan in the Passive Voice.

4. The verbal prefixes are affixed in the normal way to the verbal part of a compound, e.g.

بر میگردم bar migardam, I will return.

فکر نمیکنم fekr namikonam, I do not think.

Compound verbs formed with بر bar, باز baz, وا va, ور var or در dar and a simple verb omit the verbal prefix به, e.g.

بر گرد bar gard, Return.

5. The Pronominal Suffixes are added to the non-verbal part of the verb, e.g.

- بیرونش کردم birunef kardam, I turned him out.
 بهمش زد be hamef zad, He broke it up.
 خبرشان کرد xabarefan kard, He informed them.
 برش گرداندم baref gardandam, I caused him to return, turned him back.

Not only are the Pronominal Suffixes interposed between the verbal and the non-verbal parts of the compound, but, if the compound is formed by a simple verb and a noun or participle, other words and phrases can be so interposed with the ezafe, e.g.

جرات این کار را نداشت jor'ate in karra nadaft, He did not dare do this (work).

سوار کشتی شد savare kasli fod, He went on board the ship.

6. Stress in compound verbs falls:

(a) In the affirmative on the final syllable of the non-verbal part of the compound, e.g.

- پرورش یافت parva'ref yaft, He was educated.
 پیدا میکند pêi'da mikonad, He will find.
 بر میگردیم 'bar migardim, We shall return.
 به کار خواهد برد be 'kar xahad bord, He will use (it).
 حرکت کرده است hara'kat karde ast, He has set out.
 راضی شد ra'zi fod, He was satisfied.
 بوجود آورد be vo'jud avard, He created.

(b) In the negative on the negative prefix. A secondary stress may also be carried on the final syllable of the non-verbal part of the compound, e.g.

بر نمیگردیم bar 'namigardim or 'bar 'namigardim, We shall not return.

حرکت نکرده است harakat 'nakarde ast or hara'kat 'nakarde ast, He has not set out.

7. Secondary verbs are in some cases formed from the Present Stem of irregular verbs, e.g.

- کوبیدن kubidan 'to pound' from کوفتن kufstan (کوب kub).
 تابیدن tabidan 'to twist, shine' from تافتن taftan (تاب tab).

LESSON X

Word Formation. Abstract Nouns. Verbal Nouns. Nominal Suffixes. Diminutives. Adjectival Suffixes. Compound Nouns. Compound Adjectives.

1. Abstract Nouns are formed by the suffix -i, e.g.

خوبی xubi, goodness (from خوب xub 'good').

مردی mardi, manliness, generosity (from مرد mard 'man').

درشتی dorosti, thickness (from درشت dorost 'thick').

If the Abstract -i is added to a word ending in a or u, a hamze over a bearer is prefixed to it. This marks the transition from one vowel to another and is not represented in the transcription, e.g.

دانائی danai, wisdom (from دانا dana 'wise').

خوشروئی xosfrui, beauty (from خوشرو xosfru 'beautiful').

If the Abstract -i is added to a word ending in -e, the latter is changed into g, e.g.

خستگی xastegi, fatigue (from خسته xaste 'tired').

شایستگی sayestegi, fitness, worthiness (from شایسته sayeste 'worthy fitting').

زندگی zendegi, life (from زنده zende 'alive').

بچگی baccegi, childhood (from بچه bacce 'child').

2. The Abstract -i carries the stress, which distinguishes it from the Indefinite -i and the Relative -i.

3. Verbal Nouns are formed by the addition of -esh, -ak, or -e to the Present Stem, e.g.

فرمایش farmayesh, command (from فرمودن farmudan 'to command').

سوزش suzesh, burning (from سوختن suxtan 'to burn').

* If the present Stem of the verb to which -esh is added ends in a or u, a ri is inserted between the final vowel and the suffix -esh.

گردش gardef, a walk, turn, excursion (from گشتن gaflan 'to go for a walk').

کوشش kusef, effort (from کوشیدن kufidan 'to strive').

پوشاک pufak, clothing (from پوشیدن pufidan 'to wear').

خوراک xorak, food (from خوردن xordan 'to eat').

شماره somare, number (from شمردن somordan 'to count').

خنده xande, laugh (from خندیدن xandidan 'to laugh').

شپره fappare, bat (= شب fab 'night' and پریدن paridan 'to fly, jump, flit').

نالہ nale, whine, wail, complaint (from نالیدن nalidan 'to whine', etc.).

A Verbal Noun is also formed, but less commonly, in ن -n, e.g.

فرمان farman, order (from فرمودن farmudan 'to order').

پیمان pēiman, measure (from پیمودن pēimudan 'to measure').

A form in ار -ar which originally expressed 'the agent', is used as a Verbal Noun, e.g.

رفتار raftar, conduct (from رفتن raftan 'to go').

گفتار goftar, speech, talk (from گفتن goftan 'to say').

گرفتار gereftar (used as an adj.), being overtaken by, suffering from (from گرفتن gereftan 'to take').

کردار kerdar, action (from کردن kardan 'to do' with modification of the stem vowel).

خریدار xaridar, purchaser, buyer (from خریدن xaridan 'to buy').

In the last example the original force of the suffix has been retained. Some verbs do not form verbal nouns.

4. The following suffixes are used to form nouns:

(a) -a and -na added to adjectives, e.g.

گرما garma, warmth (from گرم garm 'warm').

پهنا pahna, width, breadth (from پهن pahn 'wide').

تنگنا tangna, ravine (from تنگ tang 'narrow').

(b) -e added to nouns and numerals, e.g.

نیمه nime, half (from نیم nim 'half').

کینه kine, vengeance (from کین kin 'vengeance').

- چشمه casme, spring, river-source (from چشم casim 'eye').
 پنجه panje, claw (from پنج panj 'five').
 دسته daste, handle (from دست dast 'hand').
 دهکده dehkade, small village (from ده deh 'village' and کد kad 'house, household', the latter used only in compounds).
 آتشکده atefskade, fire-temple (from آتش atef 'fire' and کد kad, see above).

(c) بان -ban, وان -van 'keeper', e.g.

- باغبان bayban, gardener (from باغ bay 'garden').
 دربان darban, gate-keeper, door-keeper (from در dar 'door').
 پاسبان pasban, policeman, watchman (from پاس pas 'watch').
 شتربان fotorban (fotorvan), camel-driver (from شتر fotor 'camel').

وان -van is seldom used in Colloquial Persian.

(d) بد -bod 'lord, master', e.g.

- سپهبد sepahbod, lieutenant-general (from سپه sepah 'army').

(e) کار -kar, گار -gar, گر -gar 'agent' or 'worker in', e.g.

- گناهکار gonahkar, sinner (from گناه gonah 'sin').
 خدمتکار xedmatkar, servant (from خدمت xedmat 'service').
 آفریدگار afaridegar, the Creator (from آفریدن afaridan 'to create').
 یادگار yadgar, memorial (from یاد yad 'memory').
 روزگار ruzgar, time (from روز ruz 'day').
 آموزگار amuzgar, teacher (from آموختن amuxtan 'to teach').
 زرگر zargar, goldsmith (from زر zar 'gold').
 آهنگر ahangar, ironsmith (from آهن ahan 'iron').
 توانگر tavangar, a powerful person (from توانستن tavanestan 'to be able').
 دادگر dadgar, a just person (from داد dad 'justice').

(f) دان -dan 'receptacle', e.g.

- قلمدان qalamdan, pen-case (from قلم qalam 'pen').
 قنددان qanddan, sugar-bowl (from قند qand 'lump sugar').

(g) -estan, -stan 'place of', e.g.

هندوستان hendustan, India (from هندو hendu 'Hindu').

گلستان golestan, rose-garden (from گل gol 'rose, flower').

(h) -lax, -sar, -zar, -bar, -fan 'place abounding in', e.g.

سنگلاخ sanglax
سنگسار sangsar } stony place (from سنگ sang 'stone').

گلزار golzar
گلشن golshan } flower-bed (from گل gol 'flower, rose').

رودبار rudbar, place abounding in rivers or streams (from رود rud 'river, stream').

کارزار karzar, battle, battlefield (from کار kar in its obsolete meaning of 'army' or 'group of people moving about').

مرغزار maryzar, water-meadow (from مرغ mary 'a kind of grass').

چمنزار camanzar, meadow (from چمن caman 'turf').

(i) *-an*¹

(1) names of places, e.g.

توران turan, Turania (from تور Tur).

بیابان biaban, desert (from بی آب bi ab 'without water').

(2) patronymics, e.g.

بابکان babakan, son of Babak.

(j) -gan 'origin, relation, similarity', e.g.

گروگان gerougan, hostage (from گرو gerou 'pledge').

(k) -ci, -ji 'agent', e.g.

درشکهچی dorofkeci, cabman (from درشکه dorofke 'cab').

This suffix is derived from Turkish.

(l) -abad 'place of abode', used in place-names, e.g.

خرمآباد xorramabad, Khorramabad (from خرم xorram 'happiness, gladness').

اسدآباد asadabad, Asadabad (from اسد asad 'lion').

¹ If the word to which -an is added ends in ا a or و u a ی y is inserted between the final vowel and the suffix.

5. Diminutives are formed by the addition of one of the following suffixes: ك -ak, ة -e, كه -eke, چه -ce, بچه -ice or و -u.

The diminutive suffixes when applied to rational beings denote also affection or contempt, e.g.

دخترک	doxtarak	} little girl.
دختره	doxtare
مردک	mardeke , little man, manikin.
پسر	pesaru , little boy.
یار	yaru , fellow (used in a derogatory sense from یار yar 'helper, friend').
باغچه	bayce , little garden.
دریچه	darice , little door.

Less commonly used are the diminutive suffixes بچه -ije, یزه -ize, and یژه -ize.

6. There are a variety of adjectival suffixes. Among them are:

(a) ا -a, added to the Present Stem of verbs, used to form verbal adjectives, e.g.

دانا dana, wise (from دانستن danestan 'to know').

توانا tavana, powerful (from توانستن tavanestan 'to be able').

زیبا ziba, comely (from the obsolete verb زبیدن zibidan 'to be comely').

(b) مند -mand, 'possessed of', e.g.

خردمند xeradmand, wise (from خرد xerad 'wisdom').

ثروتمند servatmand, rich (from ثروت servat 'wealth').

گله‌مند gelemand, complaining (from گله gele 'complaint').

(c) ور -var, اور -avar 'characterized by', e.g.

شعله‌ور fo'levar, blazing, flaming (from شعله fo'le 'flame').

نامور namvar, famous, illustrious (from نام nam 'name').

دلاور delavar, courageous (from دل del 'heart, stomach').

The form جانور janevar, originally adjectival meaning 'having a soul' (جان jan), is now used as a noun meaning 'animal'.

(d) -var, وار, 'fit for, characterized by', e.g.

شاہوار sahvar, fit for a king (from شاه sah 'king').

دیوانه وار divanevar, like a madman (from دیوانه divane 'mad').

بزرگوار bozorgvar, great, worthy of a great man (from بزرگ bozorg 'great').

(e) -sar -سان, -asa -اسا, -sa -سا, -man -مان, -vaf -وش 'like', e.g.

ماهوش mahvaf, like the moon (from ما mah 'moon').

پریوش parivaś, like a fairy (from پری, pari 'fairy').

شادمان sadman, happy (from شاد sad 'happy').

فيلسا filṣa } like an elephant (from فيل fil 'elephant').
فيل آسا filasa }

شرمسار farmsar, ashamed (from شرم farm 'shame').

گرکسان gorgsan, like a wolf (from گرک gorg 'wolf').

يَكْسَان yaksan, equal, like (from يَك yak 'one').

(ف) بن -in, بنه -ine, added to a 'material' to express the meaning 'made of' the substance, e.g.

زَرِّین zarrin,¹ made of gold (from زر zar 'gold').

پشمینه pasmīne, woollen (from پشم pasm 'wool').

دیرینه dirine, ancient (from دیر dir 'late').

(g) in -in, added to certain numerals and prepositions to form adjectives denoting time or place, e.g.

بَرِيْن barin, upper (from y, bar 'on').

پاسین pasin, posterior (of time; from پس pas 'after').

اولین avvalin, first (from اول avval 'first').

نخستین naxostin, first (from نخست naxost 'first').

آخرين axerin, last (from آخر axer 'last').

(h) گین -gin, ناک -nak 'full of', e.g.

غمگین yamgin, sorrowful (from غم yam 'grief').

سہمگین sahmgīn, dreadful (from سہم sahm 'terror, dread').

دردناك dardnak, painful (from درد dard 'pain').

* The doubling of the r would appear to be irregular.

² پشمی pafmi is more commonly used to mean 'woollen'.

(i) یار -yar, e.g.

هوشیار hufyar, intelligent (from هوش huf 'intelligence').

بختیار baxtyar, fortunate (from بخت baxt 'fortune, luck').

(j) ی -i 'belonging to', e.g.

دهاتی dehati, belonging to the country, a countryman (from دهات dehat 'country').

شهری fahri, belonging to the town, townsman (from شهر fahr 'town').

شیرازی firazi, belonging to Shiraz, a native of Shiraz.

If this ی -i is added to certain Persian words ending in the 'silent' h, the latter is changed into گ, e.g.

خانگی xanegi, belonging to the house (from خانه xane 'house').

But

سرمه sormei, dark blue (from سرمه sorme 'collyrium').

The adjectival ی -i carries the stress like the Abstract ی -i (see para. 2 above) and is thereby distinguished from the Indefinite ی -i and the Relative ی -i.

The Arabic termination ^ی -iyon, which forms Relative Adjectives (see Part II, Lesson XVI, para. 18), becomes ی -i in Persian, e.g.

مصری mesri, Egyptian, an Egyptian (from مصر mesr 'Egypt').

(k) ـه -e, added to compounds, e.g.

چکاره ce kare, belonging to what profession.

7. Compound nouns are formed in a variety of ways, e.g.

(a) By a qualifying noun with a noun, e.g.

مهمانخانه mehmanxane, hotel (مهمان mehman 'guest'; خانه xane 'house').

سربازخانه sarbazxane, barracks (سرباز sarbaz 'soldier'; خانه xane 'house').

پالایشگاه palayefgah, refinery (پالایش palayef 'refining'; گاه gah 'place').

(b) By two nouns placed in apposition, e.g.

پدرزن pedarzan, father-in-law (of the husband) (پدر pedar 'father'; زن zan 'woman, wife').

دختر عمو doxtaramu, cousin (daughter of a paternal uncle) (doxtar 'girl, daughter'; amu 'paternal uncle').

صاحب خانه sahebxane, landlord, owner or master of the house
(saheb 'master, owner'; xane 'house').

میراب mirab, an official in charge of the distribution of water (mir a title; ab 'water').

(c) By two nouns with the etafe, e.g.

تخت خواب taxte xab, bed (taxt 'wooden platform or seat' xab, 'sleep').

(d) By two nouns joined by و 'and',¹ e.g.

آب و هوا ab o hava, climate (ab 'water'; hava 'air').

(e) By a noun and an adjective, e.g.

نوروز nōuruṣ, New Year (nōu new; ruṣ 'day').

(f) By a noun and the Present Stem of a verb, e.g.

سرباز sarbaṣ soldier (sar 'head'; baxtan 'to lose').

پیغامبر pēiyambar, messenger (pēiyam 'message'; brdan bordan 'to carry').

(g) By the Short Infinitive of two verbs united by و 'and',¹ e.g.

آمد و شد amado šod, traffic, coming and going (amadan
'to come'; šodan in its obsolete meaning
'to go').

(h) By the Present Stem and Short Infinitive of a verb with or without و 'and', e.g.

گفتگو goftoḡu, gofteḡu, or گفت و گو goftoḡu, conversation, discussion (from گفتن gofstan 'to say').

جستجو jostoju, josteju, or جست و جو jostoju, search, seeking (from jostan 'to seek').

(i) By the Present Stem of two verbs united by و 'and', e.g.

گیرودار girodar, struggle (gereftan 'to take'; داشتن daftan 'to have, hold').

(j) By a noun and a Past Participle, e.g.

شاهزاده šahzade, prince (شاه šah 'king'; زائیدن zaidan 'to give birth to'; زاده being a contracted form of زائیده).

(k) By a word used as an adverb and the Present Stem of a verb, e.g.

پیشکش piškaf, present (from an inferior to a superior) (پیش piš 'forward'; کشیدن kafidan 'to pull, draw').

پس انداز pasandaz, savings (پس pas 'behind'; انداختن andaxtan 'to throw').

(l) By an adjective and the Present Stem of a verb, e.g.

نو آموز nouamuz, beginner (نو nou 'new'; آموختن amuxtan 'to learn, teach').

(m) By two nouns united by a preposition, e.g.

اعتماد بنفس e'temad be nafs, self-reliance (اعتماد e'temad 'reliance'; نفس nafs 'self').

The plural of compound nouns is formed by adding the plural termination to the last part of the compound, e.g.

مهمانخانه‌ها mehmanxaneha, hotels.

8. Compound adjectives are formed by

(a) Two nouns in juxtaposition, e.g.

سنگدل sangdel, stony-hearted (سنگ sang 'stone'; دل del, 'heart, stomach').

(b) An adjective and a noun, e.g.

خوش اخلاق xoşaxlaq, good-natured (خوش xoş 'pleasant, happy'; اخلاق axlaq 'morals, ethics, character').

بزرگمنش bozorgmanef, magnanimous (بزرگ bozorg 'big'; the obsolete word منش manef 'thinking').

(c) A noun and the Present Stem of a verb, e.g.

سرافراز sarafrāz, exalted, honoured (سر sar 'head'; افراشتن afraştan 'to raise, exalt').

کامیاب kamyab, successful, prosperous (کام kam 'desire'; یافتن yafstan 'to obtain').

(d) A noun and a Past Participle, e.g.

جهان دیده jahandide, experienced, widely travelled (جهان jahan 'world'; دیدن didan 'to see').

(e) An adjective and the Present Stem of a verb, e.g.

تیزرو tizrou, fleet (of foot), speedy (تیز tiz 'sharp, quick'; رفتن raftan 'to go').

(f) A noun and a preposition, e.g.

با صفا basafa, pleasant, agreeable (با ba 'with'; صفا safa 'purity').

بی صفا bisafa, unpleasant, disagreeable (بی bi 'without').

با فهم bafahm, intelligent (فهم fahm 'understanding').

بی فهم bifahm, unintelligent, stupid.

بی کس bikas, friendless, forlorn (کس kas 'person'; بی bi 'without').

زبردست zabardast, skilful, quick, able (دست dast 'hand'; زبر zabar 'above').

برقرار bar qarar, settled, fixed, established (بر bar 'on'; قرار qarar 'settling, establishing').

خانه بدوش xane be duf, nomadic (خانه xane 'house'; دوش duf 'shoulder, back').

(g) Two nouns united by a, e.g.

برابر barabar, equal, opposite (بر bar 'breast').

9. Compound Adjectives form their comparative by the addition of -tar or with بیشتر bishtar, e.g.

The superlative is formed in the usual way by the addition of ترین -tarin, e.g.

با صفا ترین basafatarin, pleasantest.

Forms compounded with بی bi- do not logically admit of a comparative or superlative.

10. The particle هم ham 'like' is used to form compound nouns and adjectives, e.g.

همشهری hamfahri, fellow-townsmen.

هماهنگ hamahang, harmonious (آهنگ ahang 'melody').

همعقیده hamaqide, having the same opinion (عقیده aqide 'opinion, belief').

11. Adjectival compounds are formed with کم kam 'little, less', e.g.

کم بضاعت kambazat, of little wealth (بضاعت bazat 'merchandise, goods').

کم زور kamzur, weak (زور zur 'power, strength').

12. The negative particle نا -na is used to form compound adjectives and nouns, e.g.

نادان nadan, ignorant } (دانستن danestan 'to know').
نادانی nadani, ignorance }

ناهموار nahamvar, uneven (هموار hamvar 'even').

حق ناشناس haqqnafenas, ungrateful (حق haqq 'right'; شناختن senaxtan 'to know, recognize').

ناکس nakas, an ignoble, mean person (کس kas 'person').

نامرد namard, an ignoble, mean person (مرد mard 'man').

تغییر ناپذیر tayyirnapazir, unchangeable (تغییر tayyir 'change'; پذیرفتن paziroftan 'to accept').

نارو narou, treacherous (of a person) (رفتن raftan 'to go').

The Imperative affirmative followed by the imperative negative is also used to form compounds, e.g.

کشمکش kesmakef, struggle (کشیدن kasidan 'to pull').

13. The particle غیر yeir 'other' ('un-') is used to form compounds. It takes the ezafe, e.g.

غیر رسمی yeire rasmi, unofficial (رسمی rasmi 'official').

غیر قابل تحمل yeire qabele tahammol, insupportable (قابل qabel 'worthy, able'; تحمل tahammol 'patience, endurance').

14. خود xod 'self' is also used to form compounds, e.g.

خودداری xoddari, restraint, self-control (داشتن daftan 'to have, hold').

خودپسند xodpasand, conceited (پسند pasand 'pleasant, agreeable').

از خود گذشتگی az xod gozastegi, self-sacrifice (گذشتن gozastan 'to pass by').

بی خود bixod, in vain (بی bi 'without').

15. A rhyming compound is formed, the second part of which is a meaningless word beginning with م m- or occasionally with پ p and rhyming with the first part of the compound. Such compounds are frequently used in Colloquial Persian, e.g.

بچه بچه bacce macce or بچه ها bacce macceha, children.

پول پول pul mul, money.

قاطی قاطی qati pati, mixed.

This type of compound sometimes gives a plural sense as in the first example above. It is also occasionally found in the literary language, e.g.

تار و مار tar o mar, destroyed, scattered.

16. Stress on compound nouns and adjectives is carried on the final syllable, e.g.

اعتماد بنفس e'temad be 'nafs, self-reliance.

سرافراز saraf'raz, exalted, honoured.

خانه بدوش xane be 'dus, nomadic.

پیغامبر peiyam'bar, messenger.

سربازخانه sarbazxa'ne, barracks.

اینرا برای شما خریدم inra baraye soma xaridam, I bought this for you.

(e) be (to, in, into, at, with, on, upon, of, for, from, as) is used in a wide variety of contexts. It covers motion towards in a figurative sense or otherwise. It shows the relation of an action or state to the limits of space, time or condition. It expresses result, degree, amount and possession. It is also used to form adverbs and in oaths.

اینرا بمن داد inra be man dad, He gave this to me.

بما خوش گذشت be ma xof gozast, We enjoyed ourselves.

¹ It will be seen that many verbs admit of a choice between γ. bar and به be.

² The ی of برای baraye was probably originally an exafe.

تا شهر رفتیم ta fahr raftim, We went to (as far as) the town.

از زمین تا آسمان فرق دارد az zamin ta asman farq darad, It is as different as chalk from cheese (from the earth to the sky).

تا يك ساعت دیگر برمیگردیم ta yak sa'ate digar bar migardim, We will return in an hour's time.

(h) جز joz and its compound bejoz, except.

(i) در ¹ dar (in, into, at, as, by), shows the relation of an action or state to the limits of space or time in a figurative sense or otherwise. It is also used to express area.

در اطاق نشسته بودیم dar otaq nefaste budim, We were sitting in the room.

در این فکر بودم dar in fekr budam, I was thinking of this.

در عین حال dar ēine hal, at the same time.

در نتیجه dar natije, as a result.

شش گز در چهار seš gaṣ dar caḥar, six gaṣ by four.

(j) مگر magar, except.

¹ In Classical Persian andar 'in, into' is used as a preposition and also as a post-position, e.g. be fahr andar in (into) the town.

3. Prepositions taking the ezafe, which are derived from primitive adverbs (originally nouns) and nouns, include the following:

بدون bedun, without.

برابر barabar, opposite.

بهر bahr and its compound از بهر az bahr, for.

بیرون birun, outside.

پائین pain, below.

پس pas and its compound در پس dar pas, behind.

پشت post and its compounds در پشت dar post, behind and از پشت az post, from behind.

پیش pis and its compound در پیش dar pis (in front of, before, with) are used to denote position and association with, e.g.

پیش او درس میخوانم pise u dars mixanam, I have lessons with him (i.e. from him).

کتاب پیش شماست ketab pise somast, The book is with you.

اورا پیش وزیر بردند ura pise vazir bordand, They took him before the minister.

جلو jelou, in front of.

پهلوی pahlu (with the ezafe پهلوی pahluye), beside, by the side of.

پی pēi (with the ezafe پی pēiye), after, in pursuit of, and its compounds:

در پی dar pēi, after; in continuation of.

از پی az pēi, after.

تو tu (with the ezafe توی tuye), in, into.

جا ja (with the ezafe جای jaye) and its compound:

بجا beja, instead of, in place of.

رو ru (with the ezafe روی ruye), on; and its compounds:

از رو az ru, from upon, off.

رو برو ru be ru, opposite.

سو su (with the ezafe سوی surye), towards; and its compounds:

از سو az su, from the direction of.

بسو be su, towards.

در باره dar bare (with the ezafe, dar bareye), about, concerning.

LESSON XII

The various uses of -i. The use of the ezafe. The omission of the ezafe. The use of -ra. The use of the plural in -an. The agreement of nouns of multitude and collective nouns with the verb. Nouns used generically. The Vocative. The use of the comparative degree of adjectives. Repetition. و 'and'.

1. It will be useful here to recapitulate the various uses of -i and to add some remarks concerning them.

(a) Nominal.

(i) The Adjectival -i = belonging to,¹ e.g.

یزدی yazdi, a native of Yazd, belonging to Yazd.

وطنی vatani, native, home-made (= made in Persia; from vatan 'homeland').

The following relative adjectives should be noted:

ساوَجی saveji, a man of ساو Save.

رازی razi, a man of ری Rei.

مروزی marvazi, a man of مرو Marv.

اوجی avaji, a man of آو Ave.

دهلوی dehlavi, a man of دهلی Delhi.

سگزی sagzi, a man of Sistan (Segestan).

The Adjectival -i is not usually added to the name of the tribes, e.g.

نادر شاه افشار *nader shah affshar*², Nader Shah, the Afshar, but it is added to the names of dynasties, e.g.

يعقوب بن ليث صفاري ya'qub ebne leise saffari, Ya'qub son of Leis, the Saffarid.

The Adjectival -i when added to the Infinitive gives the meaning 'fit for, worthy of', e.g.

خوردنی xordani, fit to eat, edible.

خواندنی xandani, readable, interesting (to read).

دیدنی didani, worth seeing.

² For the omission of the ezafe see para. 2 (f) below.

This -i ی is also added to the Infinitive to form a kind of present participle referring to future time, e.g.

در تهران ماندنی نیستم dar tehran mandani nistam, I am not staying in Tehran.

رفتنی هستم raftani hastam, I am going.

The Adjectival -i ی is capable of wide extension and can be added to almost any word or combination of words, e.g.

اتوموبیل چهار نفری otomobile cahar nafari, a four-seater car.

خانه دو طبقه xaneyi do tabaqei, a two storeyed-house.

(ii) The Abstract -i ی,¹ e.g.

مهربانی mehrabani, kindness (from mehraban 'kind').

تاریکی tariki, darkness (from tarik 'dark').

(iii) The Indefinite -i (=one),² e.g.

مردی mardi, a (one) man.

The Indefinite -i ی is also capable of extension:

It is used to form adverb equivalents, e.g.

هفته چند haftei cand, a few weeks.

سالی دو sali do, (for) about two years.³

Added to sad 'hundred' it is used to express percentages, e.g.

صدی سه sadi se, 3%.

The Indefinite -i ی is also used to emphasize the noun or the quality expressed by the noun or the adjective qualifying the noun, e.g.

بلائی است balaist, It is a (great) calamity.

مردی است mardist, He is a (fine) man.

مرد خوبی است marde xubist, He is a (very) good man.

چنین ملت بزرگی conin mellate bozorgi, such a great people.

² -The Middle Persian ē, ēv <Old Persian aiva.

³ A more usual way to express 'about' is to use dar hodud(e) or تقریباً dar hodude do sal, or تقریباً دو سال taqriban do sal, about two years.

Used in this way the Indefinite -i can be added to a plural noun or adjective qualifying a plural noun, e.g.

تلفات بسیاری دادند talafate besyari dadand, They suffered (very) many losses.

خانمهای خوبی هستند xanomhaye xubi hastand, They are (very) good women.

The -i added to قدر qadr, اندک andak, کم kam and چند cand emphasizes the idea of indefiniteness, e.g.

قدری	qadri	} (just) a little.
کی	kami
اندکی	andaki

The Indefinite -i is sometimes added to a plural noun to particularize it, e.g.

ملاحظاتى راجع بادیات در دوره مشروطیت molahezati¹ raje' be adabiyat dar dōureye masfrutiyyat, some (a few) observations on literature during the period of the Constitution.

With a negative verb the Indefinite -i conveys the idea of 'none whatever, no special, not very', e.g.

چندان دوام و ثباتى ندارد candan davam va sabati nadarad, It is not very firmly established (it has not much permanence or stability).

تعصبى ندارد ta'assobi nadarad, He has no fanaticism (whatever).

کارى ندارم kari nadaram, I have no (special) work.

The Indefinite -i used in this way can be further strengthened by the addition of هیچ hic 'none' which precedes the noun it governs, e.g.

هیچ عیبى ندارد hic eibi nadarad, It has no fault (whatever).

The Indefinite -i is added to plural nouns qualified by چه ce 'what sort of', e.g.

چه کسانی هستند ce kasani hastand, What sort of people are they?

¹ Sound feminine plural of ملاحظه molaheze (see Part II, Lesson XIX, para. 7).

The Indefinite -i is also used to convey the idea of 'totality', e.g.

بهم بر مکن تا توانی دلی * که آهی جهانی بهم بر کند beham bar makon ta tavani deli ke ahi jahani beham bar konad.

Do not disturb a (single) heart as long as you can (avoid it), because a (single) sigh (to God) destroys a (whole) world.

In Lesson III, para. 13, it was stated that the noun and its attributes were regarded as a syntactical whole and the Indefinite -i was added to the final qualifying word. For the sake of variety, the Indefinite -i is sometimes added to the noun instead of to the adjective, in which case the ezafe is omitted, e.g.

مردی خوب mardi xub, a good man.

تنی چند tani cand, a few persons.

If two nouns, both indefinite, are united by a preposition, only the first takes the Indefinite -i, e.g.

سربازی با پاسبان در خیابان ایستاده بود sarbaži ba pasban dar xiaban istade bud, A soldier was standing in the street with a policeman.

مردی با بچه در باغ نشسته بود mardi ba bacce dar bay nefaste bud, A man was sitting in the garden with a child.

If the intention is to refer to an article in general terms, rather than to differentiate or to particularize it, the Indefinite -i is not used, e.g.

کاغذ مینویسد kayaz minevisad, He is writing a letter.¹

کتاب میخواند ketab mixanad, He is reading a book.

مداد خرید medad xarid, He bought a pencil.

اتاق پنجره دارد otag panjare darad, The room has a window (windows).

سیب میخورد sib mixorad, He is eating an apple.

¹ = 'he is "letter-writing"', or 'he is writing letters'; kayazi minevisad would mean 'he is writing some letter or other' and kayaza minevisad 'he is writing the letter'.

Similarly, if a noun is used generically it does not take the Indefinite -i, e.g.

هنوز وزیر نشده است hanuṣ vaṣir naṣode ast, He has not yet become a minister.

هنوز مرد نشده است hanuṣ mard naṣode ast, He has not yet reached his majority (become a man).

Compare the above with the following:

مردی مثل شما این کار را نمیکند mardī mesle šoma in karra namikonad,
A man like you would not do this.

(iv) The Relative -i,¹ e.g.

مردیکه mardike, the (this) man who . . .

(i) and (ii) carry the stress; (iii) and (iv) are unstressed. Formerly (iii) and (iv) were pronounced e.

(b) Verbal.

(i) The Personal Ending for the 2nd pers. sing., e.g.

میکنی mikoni, Thou dost.

(ii) The Conditional or Continuous -i which is added to the Preterite, except in the 2nd pers. sing., to form a Conditional Past and an Imperfect, e.g.

گفتی gofti, He would have said, used to say, was saying.

کردمی kardami, I would have done, used to do, was doing.

The Conditional or Continuous -i is not used in Modern Persian apart from the form بایستی bayesti, which is occasionally found, e.g.

سلطان احمد شبی که صبح آن بایستی بجانب کرمان حرکت کند گفت . . .
soltan ahmad šabi ke sobhe an bayesti be janche kerman harakat konad goft . . .

Soltan Ahmad on the evening before he was to have set out for Kerman said . . .

2. The principal uses of the eṣafe have already been given. These are recapitulated below together with certain other uses of the eṣafe.²

² Persian grammarians enumerate several different kinds of eṣafe. These are covered by, although they do not coincide exactly with, the uses of the eṣafe in para. 2 above.

(a) The 'possessive' ezafe (to express the genitive), e.g.

کتاب پسر ketabe pesar, the boy's book.

در باغ dare bay, the door of the garden.

(b) The 'qualifying' or 'adjectival' ezafe, e.g.

مرد خوب marde xub, the good man.

بچه کوچک bacceye kucek, the small child.

(c) The 'prepositional' ezafe, e.g.

سر میز sare miṣ, at table.

پشت خانه posle xane, behind the house.

(d) The ezafe of 'sonship', e.g.

رستم زال rostame ṣal, Rustam son of Zal.

(e) The ezafe used to express distance from, e.g.

ده فرسخی اصفهان dah farsaxiye esfahan, ten farsaxs distant from Isfahan (being a distance of ten farsaxs from Isfahan).

(f) The ezafe is used in many cases in Persian where in English two nouns are used in apposition, e.g.

يعقوب پيغمبر ya'qube peyṣambar, Jacob, the prophet.

رود نیل rude nil, the River Nile.

محمد خان تاجر mohammad xane tajer, Mohammad Khan, the merchant.

Various words meaning 'kind, sort' do not take the ezafe. Among them are: نوع nōu, طور tōur, جور jur, and قبیل qabil, e.g.

این نوع خانه in nōu' xane, this kind of house.

این قبیل اشخاص^۱ in qabil asṣas, people of this kind.

این طور رفتار in tōur raftar, this kind of conduct.

The Personal Pronouns, with the exception of من man 'I', do not take the ezafe and must be used in apposition, e.g.

بیمچاره شما باید بمانید bicare soma bayad bemanid, You, unfortunate one, must remain.

من بدبخت نرفتم mane badbaxt naraftam, I, unfortunate one, did not go.

^۱ Plural of اشخاص asṣas.

همه hame 'all' when it means an aggregate without regard to the component parts is used without the ezafe, e.g.

همه راه در این فکر بود hame rah dar in fekr bud, He was thinking of this the whole way.

همه شب بیدار بود hame sab bidar bud, He was awake the whole night.

مایل نیستم این همه زحمت بکشید mayel nistam in hame zahmat bekashid, I do not want you to take all this trouble.

There is no ezafe after weights and measures, e.g.

دو متر گودی do metr goudi, two metres deep.

سه سنگ آب se sang ab, three sangs of water.

یک چارک گوشت yak carak gush, one carak of meat.

Similarly

یک لیوان آب yak livan ab, a glass of water.

یک فنجان چای yak fenjan cai, a cup of tea.

The ezafe is not used between a proper name and the titles following it, the two being placed in apposition to each other, e.g.

جناب آقای بهمن نخست وزیر janabe aqaye bahman naxost vazir, H. E. Bahman, the Prime Minister.

It has been seen above that when the Indefinite -i is added to the noun instead of the following qualifying word the ezafe falls out. This also happens if the word order is inverted and the adjective precedes the noun it qualifies, e.g.

خوب خانه خرید xub xanei xarid, He bought a good house.

Inversion takes place with the words عجب ajab 'strange, wonderful' and مرحوم marhum 'late, deceased'. The former does not take the ezafe whereas the latter does, e.g.

عجب کتابی است ajab ketabist, It is a strange book.

این شهر عجب هوای خوبی دارد in fahr ajab havaye xubi darad, This town has a wonderful climate.

مرحوم پدرم marhume pedaram, my late father.

3. In Lesson 1, para. 6, the use of -ra to mark the definite direct object was described. -ra is also used to express the dative, e.g.

اورا دو پسر بود ura do pesar bud, He had two sons (to him were two sons).

شاه وزیر را خلعت داد šah vaẓirra xel'at dad, The Shah gave the minister a robe of honour.

-ra cannot be used to mark both the definite direct object and the indirect object in the same sentence: either the latter must be preceded by به be 'to' or the -ra must be omitted after the definite direct object.

The use of -ra to express the dative is a classical rather than a modern usage.

A similar construction is found with certain intransitive verbs in both Classical and Modern Persian, e.g.

این کتاب مرا پسند آمد in ketab mara pasand amad, I liked this book (this book came pleasantly to me).

بایستن bayestan and شایستن šayestan are used impersonally with -ra to mean 'it behoves, it is fitting', etc.¹ This construction is classical rather than modern, e.g.

پادشاه را باید padešahra bayad, It behoves the king to...

شمارا شاید šomara šayad..., It befits you to....

If an adjective or participle used as an adjective is placed in apposition to a noun which is indefinite, the latter, if the object of the verb, takes -ra, e.g.

ظالم را خفته دیدم ẓalemira xofte didam, I saw a (certain) tyrant asleep.

سرباز را در راه کشته دیدم sarbaẓira dar rah košte didam, I saw on the road a soldier [who had been] killed.²

In Colloquial Persian a certain latitude prevails in the use of -ra, e.g.

کدام کتاب را میخواهید kodam ketabra mixahid, Which book do you want?

رفت کتاب را بخرد raft ketabira bexarad, He went to buy a book.

¹ When used thus شاید šayad takes the negative prefix whereas شاید šayad 'perhaps' does not, e.g.

نشاید این کار را کرد našayad in karra kard, It is not fitting to do such a work.

² سربازی کشته در راه دیدم sarbaẓi košte dar rah didam would be a more usual construction.

The use of -ra in such a construction gives the force of 'a certain' to the Indefinite -i and sometimes implies that the sentence is incomplete, some phrase such as که لازم داشت ke lazem dast being perhaps in the speaker's mind in the second of the above examples.

Compare also:

یکی بمن بدهید yaki beman bedehid, Give me one.

And یکی را بمن بدهید yakira beman bedehid, Give me (one of them).

In certain cases -ra is added to an indefinite noun for the sake of clarity, e.g.

شنیدم گوسفند را بزرگ رهانید sonidam gusfandira bozorgi rahanid, I have heard that a certain great man set free a sheep.

The words فلان folan 'a certain', فلانی folani 'so-and-so', همه hame 'all', سائر sa'er 'other, the rest', تمام tamam 'all, the whole', هر یکی har yaki 'each one', هر دو har do 'both', etc., are considered definite and take -ra.

-ra is also used in Classical Persian, though not commonly, to form combinations corresponding to an adverbial phrase in English, e.g.

قضا را qazara, by chance.

خدا را xodara, for God's sake.

The expression ترا بخدا tora bexoda is used between intimate friends to express surprise or to emphasize something.

In Classical Persian the particle مر mar is sometimes found preceding a noun or pronoun followed by -ra, e.g.

پادشاه مر عامه را بار دادی padesah mar ammera bar dadi, The king used to hold a court for the common people.

4. Two nouns are frequently used in Persian where an adjective and a noun or an adverb and an adjective are used in English, e.g.

کمال امتنان را دارم kamale emtenanra daram, I am extremely grateful (have the perfection of gratitude).

در نهایت سختی زندگی میکند dar nehayate saxti zendegi mikonad, He lives in great hardship (in the extremity of difficulty).

با نهایت خوشحالی ba nehayate xoshali, with great (the limit of) happiness.

* See above, para. 1 (b) (ii) for the Continuous Past in -i.

5. Adjectives used as nouns denoting rational beings take the plural in -an, e.g.

بزرگان bozorgan, the great.
 حسودان hasudan, the envious.

Relative Adjectives ending in -i, however, normally form a plural in -ha.

Certain words denoting irrational beings or inanimate objects also sometimes form a plural in -an. Among them are:

لب lab , lip.	بازو bazu , forearm.
چشم cašm , eye.	گناه gonah , sin.
درخت daraxt , tree.	سخن soxan , word.
آهو ahu , gazelle.	ستاره setare , star.*

sarha means 'heads'; saran means 'leaders', e.g.

sarane laškar, army leaders.

nia 'ancestor' and pelle 'stair' form their plurals niakan and pellekan respectively.

Words of foreign origin, even if they denote rational beings, do not usually take the plural in -an, thus xanomha, ladies, انگلیسها englisha, the English, but faransavian, فرانسویان, the French.

6. Nouns of Multitude denoting rational beings are followed by the singular or the plural according to whether the idea of unity or plurality is uppermost in the speaker's mind, e.g.

قشون حمله کرد qošun hamle kard, The army attacked.
 جمعیتی بزرگ در میدان جمع شد jam'iyati bozorg dar meidan jam' šod,
 A large crowd assembled in the square.

عده متفرق شدند و عده ماندند eddei motafarriq šodand va eddei mandand, A number dispersed and a number remained (behind).

جمعیت ما از صد نفر تشکیل میشود jam'iyate ma az sad nafar taškil mišavad, Our group (society) is composed of one hundred persons.

mardom 'people' always takes a plural verb, e.g.

مردم جمع شدند mardom jam' šodand, The people assembled.

* Plural ستارگان setaregan.

7. Certain collective nouns take a plural termination when it is intended to signify diversity or variety, e.g.

ایران میوه‌های خوب دارد iran mivehaye xub darad, Persia has good fruit (of different kinds).

شراب‌های فرانسه معروف است farabhaye faranse ma'ruf ast, The wine (i.e. the different wines) of France is famous.

انگورهای آذربایجان شیرین است angurhaye azarbāijan firin ast, The grapes (i.e. the different kinds of grapes) of Azarbaijan are sweet.

8. Nouns denoting rational beings, when used generically, are usually put in the plural, e.g.

ایرانیها طبع شعر دارند iraniha tab'e se'r darand, The Persian is poetical.

زنهای دهاتی زیاد کار میکنند zanhaye dehati ziyad kar mikonand, The country-woman works hard (much).

Nouns denoting irrational beings and inanimate objects, when used generically, are put in the singular, e.g.

سگ تازی برای شکار خوب است sage tazi baraye sekar xub ast, Salukis are good for hunting.

خربوزه در گرگاب خوب بعمل میاید xarbuze dar gorgab xub be amal miayad, Melons grow well in Gorgab.¹

If a noun used generically forms the predicate it is put in the singular even if the subject of the sentence is plural, e.g.

ما همه بنده خدا ایم ma hame bandeye xoda im, We are all servants of God.

این مردها حیوان اند in mardha hēivan and, These men are (like) animals.

آنها دشمن ما هستند anha došmane ma hastand, They are our enemies.

If a noun used generically follows another noun which takes the ezāfe it is put in the plural, e.g.

- این کار کار بچه هاست in kar kare baccehast, This work is the work of a child.
- این مناسب حال بزرگان نیست in monasebe hale bozorgan nist, This is not in keeping with the dignity of the great.
- مردی با لباس درویشان وارد شهر شد mardi ba lebase darvisan varede fahr sod, A man in darvish's clothes entered the town.

9. If a series of nouns are united to each other by و va, o, the plural termination can be omitted, e.g.

وزیر و وکیل و صاحب منصب و آخوند همه حاضر بودند vazir o vakil o saheb mansab o axund hame hazer budand,
 Ministers, deputies, officers and mullas, all were present.

بزرگ و کوچک همه آمدند bozorg va kucek hame amadand,
 Great and small, all came.

گاو و گوسفند و الاغ و اسب در چمن بود gav o gusfand o olay o asb dar caman bud,
 Cows, sheep, asses, and horses were in the meadow.

قلم و مداد و کتاب بین بچه ها تقسیم کرد qalam o medad o ketab beine bacceha taqsim kard,
 He distributed pens, pencils and books among the children.

در باغ ما گیلان و انگور و انجیر خوب پیدا میشود dar baye ma gilas o angur o anjire xub peida misavad,
 In our garden good cherries, grapes and figs are to be had (found).

10. In certain cases a noun which is logically plural is nevertheless put in the singular, e.g.

روی دوش همه بارهای سنگین بود ruye duse hame barhaye sangin bud,
 Heavy loads were on the back(s) of all.

تغییر عقیده دادند tayyire aqide dadand, They changed their minds.

کاغذ مبادله کردیم kayaz mobadele kardim, We exchanged letters.

11. The vocative is expressed by the particle ای ei or (when addressing God or one of the Imams, etc.) یا ya preceding the noun or pronoun, e.g.

ای پادشاه ei padefah, O king!
ای تو که... ei to ke..., O thou, who....

12. An ا -a can be added to nouns and adjectives to form an interjection, e.g.

خداوندا xodavanda, O God!
خوشا بحال شما xofa be hale soma, O happy your state!
خوشا شیراز xofa firaz, O happy Shiraz!

If the noun to which this 'interjectory' alef is added ends in ا a or و u, a ی y is inserted between the final vowel and the 'interjectory' ا -a, e.g.

خدایا xodaya, O God!

Personal Pronouns, with the exception of من man 'I', do not take the 'interjectory' ا -a.

13. Certain nouns are used as adjectives, e.g.

این خانه بسیار راحت است in xane besyar rahat ast, This house is very comfortable (راحت = ease, comfort).

14. The comparative degree of adjectives is sometimes used in Persian where the superlative is used in English, e.g.

بهر شهریکه نزدیکتر است بروید be har shahri ke nazdiktar ast beravid, Go to the nearest town.

The comparative ending is also added to certain nouns, e.g.

این طرفتر بنشینید in taraf-tar beneshinid, Sit nearer this way (side).

A phrase such as 'he got better and better' is rendered روز بروز بهتر میشد ruz be ruz behtar misod, or

هی بهتر میشد hei behtar misod.

(See also Lesson XIII, para. 24.)

'The sooner the better' is translated

هر چه زودتر بهتر har ce zudtar behtar.

هر قدر har qadr can be used instead of هر چه har ce, e.g.

هر قدر برودخانه نزدیکتر میشود زمین حاصلخیزتر است har qadr be rudxane naẓdiktar mišavid ẓamin haselxiṣtar ast,
 The nearer you get to the river the more fertile the land.

'How much the more' and 'how much the less' are rendered as follows:

اگر آن وقت از او بدتان میامد بطریق اولی^۱ باید حالا از او نفرت داشته باشید

agar an vaqt az u badetan miamad be tariqe ōula bayad hala az u nefrat dasle basid,

If you disliked him then, how much the more must you dislike him now.

اگر این کتاب را دوست دارید چقدر باید آن یکی را دوست داشته باشید^۲ agar in ketabra dust darid ce qadr bayad an yakira dust dasle basid,
 If you like this book, how much the more must you like that one.

باو نمیشود اعتماد کرد تا چه رسد برادرش be u namisavad e'temad kard ta ce rasad be baradaraš,
 One cannot trust him, much less his brother.

۱۵. In Classical Persian the absolute use of the comparative and superlative is sometimes found, e.g.

قشنگترین qasfāngtarin, most beautiful (= very beautiful).

قشنگتر qasfāngtar, more beautiful (= very beautiful).

۱۶. Comparison can be expressed by که ke, e.g.

مردنت به که مردم آزاری^۳ mordanat beh ke mardom azari, Thy death is better than oppression of the people (it is better that thou shouldst die, than that thou shouldst oppress the people).

This usage is classical rather than modern.

For other methods of expressing comparison see Lesson III, para. 17.

^۱ اولی ōula is the elative of اول avval; see Part II, Lesson XVI, para. 16.

^۲ For the use of the Subjunctive Past of داشتن dashtan see Lesson XIII, para. 12 (h).

^۳ From آزریدن azordan 'to oppress'.

17. Many adjectives can be used as nouns. Their use as nouns, however, tends to be more common in the plural than the singular. The use of the plural termination -an with adjectives used as nouns denoting rational beings has already been noted (see above para. 5).

18. In Persian two nouns or two adjectives with the same or similar meanings are often used together, e.g.

گریه و زاری gerie o zari, weeping and wailing.

تک و تنها tak o tanha, single and alone.

تر و تازه tar o tazē, moist and fresh.

خوش و خرم xof o xorram, happy and cheerful.

Such combinations are not considered bad style.

19. Repetition of a word indicates:

(a) Intensity, e.g.

تند تند بیا tond tond beya, Come very quickly.

زار زار گریه میکرد zar zar gerye mikard, She was weeping bitterly.

This is also the case where an adjective is repeated with the copula و o, or with the ezafe, e.g.

تند و تند آمدم tond o tond amadam, I came very quickly.

خطرناک خطرناک xatarnake xatarnak, very dangerous.

(b) Continuation, e.g.

یواش یواش میامد yavaf yavaf miamad, He was coming along slowly.

باران نم نم میامد baran nam nam miamad, It kept on drizzling.

(c) Grouping, e.g.

کبکها دسته دسته بلند شدند kabkha daste daste boland fodand,
The partridges rose in coveys.

(See also Lesson XIII, para. 3 (b) below)

20. 'and' is derived from two different sources: namely و = va from the Arabic and و = o from Middle Persian (see p. 38, n. 2). The latter form, in addition to its use in compound numerals and in certain compounds (see Lesson x) tends to be used rather than و = va when it connects words or phrases commonly associated together, e.g.

روز و شب ruẓ o šab, day and night.

In rapid speech it tends to be used in other contexts also, and in poetry it may be necessitated by the scansion.

و 'and' is used

(a) As a copulative, e.g.

آمد و از ما خدا حافظی کرد amad va az ma xoda hafẓi kard, He came and said good-bye to us.

If a noun is qualified by several adjectives these may be united by و instead of the ezāfe, e.g.

آدم هوشیار و لایق و صبری بود adame hufyar va layeq va saburi bud, He was an intelligent, worthy and very patient man, instead of آدم هوشیار لایق صبری بود adame hufyare layeqe saburi bud.

(b) To introduce a qualifying phrase, e.g.

سر میز نشسته بود و قلمی بدستش بود sare miẓ nefaste bud va qalami be dastef bud, He was sitting at the table with a pen in his hand.

(c) To mean 'is equal to, accompanied by, is the same as', e.g.

پیری و صد عیب piri o sad ʿēib, Old age is accompanied by a hundred defects.

(d) To mean 'or', e.g.

گل همین پنج روز و شش باشد gol hamin panj ruẓ o šes basad, A flower lasts but five or six days.

(e) To indicate association, e.g.

من و شراب خوردن چه حرفها میزنید man o šarab خوردن ce harfha miẓanid, I—drink wine? What are you saying?

تابستان آینده ما و اصفهان tabestane ayande ma o esfahan, Next summer Isfahan for us.

This و is frequently used in poetry, e.g.

که گر جستم از دست این تیر زن * من و کنج ویرانه پیر زن ke gar jastam az daste in tir zan man o konje vêiraneye pir zan,
 ...saying if I escape the hand of this archer, I will be content with a corner of the old woman's ruined hut.

چو فردا برآید بلند آفتاب * من و گرز و میدان و افراسیاب
co¹ farda bar ayad boland aftab man o gorz o mēidan o afrasiab,
 When tomorrow the sun mounts high (in the heavens) there will
 I be with my club in the battlefield with Afrasiab.

آمدن برادران شرلی بایران

(بقیه از درس پیش)

با این ترتیب حکمران قزوین از او پذیرائی شایان نمود و همه قسم وسایل استراحت آن جماعترا فراهم ساخت تا آنکه خبر ورود شاه بنزدیکی قزوین بشهر رسید و برادران شرلی و همراهانشان بهمراهی ناظر و حاکم قزوین باستقبال شاه رفتند و شاه هم با آن دو برادر روبوسی کرده با احترام تمام از آنها پذیرائی نمود و تحف و هدایای زیاد (۱۴۰ اسب با لگام زرین و ۱۰۰ قاطر و ۱۰۰ شتر و مقدار زیادی پول) بآنها و همراهانشان بخشید سپس با آن جماعت بیایتخت (اصفهان) رفت و ششماه در آن شهر از آنها پذیرائی کرد و بقدری نسبت بآنها ملاطفت

¹ تعالی ta'ala is an Arabic verbal form (=he is exalted) used here as an adjective.

نمود که خودشانرا از خدمتگذاران مهمی شاه عباس دانستند و انتی هم در مدت اقامت در اصفهان شاهرا بصداقت و مهمیت خود معتقد ساخت و بدستیاری الله وردیخان سپهسالار ایران در آموختن فنون جنگی ایران رنج بسیار برد و ایرانیان فنون جنگرا از شرلی آموختند و سپاهیان مرتب و ۵۰۰ عراده توپ و ۲۰,۰۰۰ تفنگ تهیه کردند سپس انتی بشاه عباس پیشنهاد کرد که سفیری بدربار سلاطین اروپا فرستد و با ایشان بر ضد دولت عثمانی متحد شود

مرا هرک عدو جای شادمانی نیست * که زندگانی ما نیز جاودانی نیست

EXERCISE 23

1. He has gone into the bazaar to buy a book. 2. After he had been two years in the army he became an officer. 3. This story is worth hearing. 4. I do not care for this kind of book. 5. Many kinds of fruit grow in Persia. 6. The people began to assemble in the square; men, women and children were there and did not disperse until after sunset. 7. The women were carrying their children on their backs. 8. The book is both interesting and well written. 9. I am going and nobody can prevent me. 10. It has not done me much good nor any one else either (it had not much benefit for me...). 11. Facilities for rest are available for all the workmen by day and by night. 12. I never spoke or wrote to him. 13. Either he or I must go. 14. He cannot have gone out else he would have told me.

LESSON XIII

The use of the tenses. The Negative. Impersonal Constructions. Continuous Tenses formed with داشتن daftan. The particle می hi. Certain Classical usages.

1. (a) The Infinitive and Short Infinitive are used as nouns, e.g.

دانا شدن توانا شدن است dana sodan tavana sodan ast, To be learned is to be powerful.

گفتن این صلاح نیست goftane in salah nist, It is not expedient to say this.

پیشرفت او شایان تحسین است pisرافte u sayane tahsin ast, his progress is praiseworthy.

(b) The Infinitive is used to express purpose or finality with the preposition به be, e.g.

بدیدن برادر خود رفت be didane baradare xod raft, He went to see his brother.

شروع کرد بنوشتن foru' kard be neveftan, He began to write.

بخواندن پرداخت be xandan pardaxt, He set to work to read.

If the subordinate verb is a compound verb one part of which is a noun the verbal part can sometimes be omitted, e.g.

شروع کرد بگریه foru' kard be gerie (for کردن گریه gerie kardan), He began to weep.

شروع کرد بفرار foru' kard be farar (for کردن فرار farar kardan), He began to flee.

But

شروع کردند بجمع شدن foru' kardand be jam' sodan, They began to assemble.

(c) The Short Infinitive is used after impersonal verbs (see Lesson VI, para. 12), e.g.

میشود کرد misfavad kard, It can be done.

(d) In Classical Persian the Infinitive is sometimes used in final clauses where in Modern Persian the Subjunctive would be used, e.g.

لقمان گفت دریغ باشد که حکمت با ایشان گفتن loqman goft dariy basad kalameye hekmat ba isan goftan,

Loqman said it would be a pity to waste on them (to say to them) words of wisdom.

مصلحت ندیدم از این بیش ریش درونشرا بملامت خراشیدن و نمک پاشیدن

maslehat nadidam az in bis rife darunesra be malamati xarafidan va namak pasidan,

I did not consider it expedient to rub (scratch) his inner wound more than this by reproach or (and) to sprinkle salt upon it.

(e) In Classical Persian the Infinitive is sometimes used with the auxiliaries توانستن tavanestan 'to be able', خواستن xastan 'to want', and بایستن bayestan and شایستن sayestan used impersonally. E.g.

بقیه همرا از عهده شکر آن بیرون آمدن نتوانم

baqiye omra az ohdeye sokre an birun amadan natavanam,

For the rest of (my) life I shall not be able to pay the debt of gratitude I owe for that.

(f) In Classical Persian the Infinitive is sometimes used with a preposition to express the passive, e.g.

پادشاه همه را بکشتن اشارت فرمود¹ padesah hamera be koflan efarat farmud, The king gave a sign for them all to be killed.

2. The Past Participle, apart from its use in conjugating the verb, is used

(a) As an adjective, e.g.

آماده باشید amade basid, Be prepared.

The negative of the Past Participle when it is used as an adjective or a noun (see immediately below) is na-, e.g.

ناگفته نماند nagofte namanad, Let it not remain unsaid.

(b) As a noun, e.g.

گفته مرا شنید goftey mara senid, He heard what I said.

The Past Participle is widely used as a noun in the plural referring to human beings, but less frequently in the singular, e.g.

بازداشت شدگان bazdast fodegan, the internees.

کشتگان koflegan, the killed.

¹ See Lesson XIV, para. 1 (c) for this use of فرمودن farmudan (farma).

(c) In apposition in the event of the subject of two co-ordinate sentences being the same and the action of the former of the two preceding the latter, e.g.

نامه شما رسیده خوانده شد nameye soma raside xande sod, Your letter has been received and read.

If the tenses of the verbs of two or more co-ordinate sentences are the same and their actions concurrent, the Past Participle followed by و va can be used in all but the final sentence, provided the subjects are the same.

3. The Present Participle is used:

(a) As an adjective, e.g.

خواهان سلامتی شما هستم xahane salamatiye soma hastam, I am desirous of your well-being (health).

(b) As an adverb, in which case it is usually repeated, e.g.

دوان دوان جلو آمد davan davan jelou amad, He came forward running.

4. The Noun of the Agent, formed by the addition of -ande to the Present Stem, is also sometimes used as an adjective, e.g.

درخشنده daraxfande, shining (from daraxfidan 'to shine').
مرد بخشنده marde baxfandei, a liberal man (from baxfidan 'to give, bestow').

5. The Preterite is used:

(a) For a single definite action in the past, e.g.

دیروز رفت diruz raft, He went yesterday.

(b) For an action just performed, e.g.

اورا الآن دیدم ura al'an didam, I saw him just now.

(c) For the anterior of two possible future actions, e.g.

انگلستان که رفتید نامه بمن بنویسید englestan ke raftid namei be man benevisid,
When you go to England, write a letter to me.

This use is comparable with its use in Present and Future conditions (see Lesson VII, para. 5 (a) above).

(d) For an action about to be completed, e.g.

آدم amadam = I am coming (in answer to a question or implied question such as 'are you coming?' or a command such as 'hurry up').

رفتم raftam = I am going.

(e) In one or both parts of a conditional sentence to denote a foregone conclusion, e.g.

اگر رفتی بردی اگر خفتی مردی agar rafti bordi agar xofti mordi, If you go you win, if you sleep you die.

(f) In narrating past events that closely follow one another where the Pluperfect would be used in English, e.g.

وقتیکه حرف خود را تمام کرد جواب دادم vagtike harfe xodra tamam kard javab dadam,

When he had finished what he had to say, I answered.

(g) With certain compound verbs formed with شدن sodan, indicating a state which began in the past and continues into the present, or a state which has just come to pass, e.g.

حاضر شدم hazer sodam = I am ready.

تشنه شدم tesne sodam = I am thirsty.

پشیمان شدم pasiman sodam = I am sorry (repentant).

خسته شدم xaste sodam = I am tired.

In certain contexts the Preterite of such verbs can refer to the past, e.g.

دیروز گرسنه شدم diruz gorosne sodam, Yesterday I was hungry.

(h) In sentences such as the following where the Perfect or Present is used in English:

کتاب مرا فراموش کردم ketabamra faramus kardam, I have forgotten my book.

زود آمدید rud amadid, You are early.

دیر کردید dir kardid, You are late.

جستمش jostamef, I have found it.

In Colloquial Persian the Preterite bayest is sometimes used with a present meaning, e.g.

بایست رفت bayest raft = It is time to go.

6. The Imperfect is used:

(a) For a continuous action in the past, e.g.

- نامه مینوشت namei minevešt, He was writing a letter.
 باران میامد baran miamad, It was raining.
 وقتی که مرا صدا زد کتاب میخواندم vaqtike mara sada zad ketab mixandam,
 When he called me I was reading a book.
 میخواستم از شما پرسش mixastam az šoma beporsam, I wanted to ask you.
 میخواست برود mixast beravad, He wanted to go.
 شاید آنها هم دلشان میخواست
 وسایل راحتی مرا داشتند šayad anha ham delešan mixast vasa'ele rahatiye mara daštand, Perhaps they also wished they had the facilities for comfort I had.¹

(b) For habitual action in the past, e.g.

- هر سال آنجا میرفتم har sal anja miraftam, Every year I went there.

(c) For an impossible action or state referring to the past or present (see also Impossible Conditions, Lesson VII, para. 5 (b) above), e.g.

- اگر میدانست میگفت agar midanest migoft, If he had known he would have said;

and in unfulfilled wishes (see below, para. 16).

(d) Sometimes with the force of 'to be about to', e.g.

- طیاره بر زمین فرود میامد که آتش گرفت
tāiyare bar zamin forud miamad ke atef gereft,
 The aeroplane was about to land when it caught fire.

The Imperfect of خواستن xastan is sometimes used as a kind of auxiliary with this meaning, e.g.

- میخواست بنشیند که صداش کردند mixast benesinad ke sadaš kardand,
 He was about to sit down when they called him.

¹ In this example شاید šayad does not affect the tense of the main verb. See also para. 12 (e) below.

(e) In the case of خواستن xastan, sometimes in Colloquial Persian in place of the Present, e.g.

کجا میخواستید بروید koja mixastid beravid = Where do you want to go?

(f) With the force of 'to begin to', e.g.

در اثنای این حال تشنگی بر ملک مستولی شد مرکب هر طرف میتاخت dar asnaye in hal tefnegi bar malek mostouli sod markab har taraf mitaxt,
 Meanwhile thirst overcame the king; he began to gallop his horse in every direction.

This usage is literary and is more common in Classical than in Modern Persian.

7. The Perfect is used:

(a) For an action in the past the results of which continue to be effective or apparent after the action itself, e.g.

کتاب گم شده است ketab gom fode ast, The book is lost
 (i.e. has been lost and is still lost).

شاه عباس این کاروانسرا را بنا کرده است fah abbas in karevansarara bana karde ast, Shah Abbas built this caravanserai.

The Perfect is thus used when referring to the sayings or writings of famous men (on the assumption that these are still effective and have lived on), e.g.

سعدی گفته است... sa'di gofte ast, Sa'di said....

(b) To refer to some indefinite time in the past, e.g.

زمانی این سخنانرا شنیده‌ام zamani in soxanra fenide am, I heard these words at some time or other.

تشخیص داده ایم که لازم میباشد tafxis داده ایم که لازم میباشد, We decided (at some indefinite time in the past) that it was necessary.

(c) To refer to the future in the main clause after a temporal clause introduced by تا ta 'by the time that', e.g.

تا منزل بر گردید تمام پولتانرا خرج کرده اید ta manzel bar gardid tamame puletanra xarj karde id,
 By the time you return home you will have spent all your money.

(d) Occasionally with a prefixed می mi-, e.g.

کتابهای تاریخ در هر دوره ساده‌ترین طریق نوشته می‌شده است ketabhaye tarix dar har dōure be sadetarin tariq neveste misode ast,

Histories, in every period, were written in the simplest style.

8. The Pluperfect is used:

(a) To describe the anterior of two actions or states in the past which do not follow one another immediately, e.g.

وَتیکه رسید رفته بودند vaqtike rasid rafte budand, When he arrived they had gone.

نامه که نوشته بودید خواندم namei ke neveste budid xandam, I read the letter which you wrote (had written).

(b) In one or both parts of an impossible condition referring to the past (see Lesson VII, para. 5 (b) above), e.g.

اگر میدانستم گفته بودم agar midanestam gofte budam, If I had known, I would have said (so).

(c) To describe unfulfilled wishes in the past (see below, para. 16).

9. The Present is used:

(a) For a state or action taking place in the present, e.g.

کاغذ مینویسد kayaz minevisad, He is writing a letter.

باران می‌آید baran miayad, It is raining.

(b) For an action or state beginning in the past and continuing in the present, e.g.

چند وقت است که اینجا هستید cand vaqt ast ke inja hastid, How long have you been here?

دو سال است که در ایران هستم do sal ast ke dar iran hastam, I have been two years in Persia (and am still there).

از دیروز تا حالا مشغول این کار است az diruz ta hala masyule in kar ast, He has been busy with this work (affair) ever since yesterday.

چکار میکنید ce kar mikonid, What are you doing, what have you been doing?

(c) For something said by a well-known person in the past, e.g.

نویسندگان معروف میگویند... nevisandegane ma'ruf miguyand...,
Famous writers say....

It is more usual in such cases to use the Perfect (see para. 7 (a) above).

(d) For the Future, e.g.

فردا با او میگویم farda be u miguyam, I will tell him to-morrow.

In compound verbs formed with شدن šodan of the type mentioned in para. 5 (g) above, the present usually has a future meaning, e.g.

خسته میشوید xaste misavid, You will be tired.

(e) In certain cases after اگر agar 'if', e.g.

بروید و ببینید احمد درس خود را میخواند یا نه اگر میخواند خوب است و اگر نمیخواند تنبیهش بکنید

beravid va bebinid ahmad dars-e xodra mixanad ya na agar mixanad xub ast va agar namixanad tambihef bekonid,

Go and see if Ahmad is doing his lessons or not. If he is doing them it is well, but if not punish him.

It should be noted that there is a tendency in Colloquial Persian to substitute the present indicative for the present subjunctive in the protasis of Possible Conditions referring to future time.

10. The General Present (see Lesson IV, para. 1 (c) above) is used for general statements relating to the present or future, e.g.

در آنچه گویم یا نویسم خدا داند که تعصبی ندارم dar ance guyam ya nevisam xoda danad ke ta'assobi nadaram,
I have no fanaticism—God knows—in whatever I say or write.

هر جا سهوی بینند و خطائی نگرند بگویند har ja sahi binand va xatai negarand, beguyand,
Wherever they see a mistake or perceive an error, let them say (so).

هر که شاه آن کند که او گوید * حیف باشد که جز نکو گوید har ke šah an konad ke u guyad heif basad ke joz neku guyad,
It is a pity that anyone whose word the king follows should say anything but (what is) good.

* For نیکو niku 'good'.

In the case of بودن budan the general present is frequently used, e.g.

تهران که پایتخت ایران باشد شهر بزرگی است tehran ke pâitaxte iran basad shahre bozorgist,

Tehran, which is the capital of Persia, is a large town.

11. The Subjunctive Present is used:

(a) In a subordinate clause to express a state or action about which there is an element of doubt, e.g.

ممکن است که بیاید momken ast ke beyayad, It is possible that he may come.

(b) To express purpose, with or without که ke, e.g.

خواهش میکنم درخواست مرا قبول کنید

xahef mikonam darxaste mara qabul konid,

I ask you to agree to (accept) my request.

تصمیم گرفتند که بروند

tasmim gerestand ke beravand,

They decided to go.

(c) After final conjunctions, e.g.

اینرا پنهان کرد تا کسی پیدا نکند

inra panhan kard ta kasi pēida nakonad,

He hid this so that no one would find it.

تا نشان سم اسبت گم کنند * ترکمانا نعلرا وارونه زن ta nefane some asbat gom konand torkomana na'ira varune zan,

O Turkoman, put the horseshoe on back to front so that the print of thy horse's hoof will be lost!

این کار را حالا بکنید تا زودتر تمام شود in karra hala bekonid ta zudtar tamam savad,

Do this now so that it will be finished sooner.

In Classical Persian تا ta as a final conjunction can be followed by the Indicative to indicate that the action depending upon the main verb has been performed, e.g.

باو فرمود تا رفت be u farmud ta raft, He ordered him to go (and he went).

(d) After تا ta 'by the time that, until' in general statements and when referring to the present or future: e.g.

تا بیائید تاریک خواهد شد ta beyaid tarik xahad sod,
 By the time you come it will be dark.

تا اینرا نخواهید نفیهمید ta inra naxanid namifahmid,
 You will not understand this until you read it.

(e) In general relative clauses, e.g.

هر وقتیکه آنرا بخوانم یاد شما میفتم har vaqtike anra bexanam be yade soma mioftam,
 Whenever I read that I think of you.

(f) After the verbs توانستن tavanestan 'to be able' and خواستن xastan 'to want' (see Lesson VI, para. 7), e.g.

نتوانست بیاید natavanest beyayad, He could not come.
 میتوانید آنرا باز کنید mitavanid anra baz konid, Can you open that?
 میخواست برود mixast beravad, He wanted to go.
 میخواهند شما را ببینند mixahand somara bebinand, They want to see you.

(g) After باید bayad 'must, ought' referring to the present or future, e.g.

باید برویم bayad beravim, We must go.

(h) After شاید sayad 'perhaps' referring to the present or future, e.g.

شاید اینجا باشد sayad inja basad, Perhaps he is here.
 شاید بیاید sayad beyayad, Perhaps he will come.

(i) In Conditional Clauses (see Lesson VII, para. 5 (a) above), e.g.

اگر وقت بکنیم بهگردش میرویم agar vaqt bekonim be gardef miravim,
 If we have time, we will go for a walk.

(j) To refer to the 'future with doubt' in the 1st pers. sing., e.g.

بروم یا نروم beravam ya naravam, Shall I go or not?
 چه بگویم ce beguyam, What shall I say?

(k) As a Jussive in the 1st and 3rd pers. sing. and pl., e.g.

برویم beravim, Let us go.

(l) After پیش از آنکه pif az anke and قبل از آنکه qabl az anke, 'before', به جای اینکه be jaye inke and در عوض اینکه dar avaze inke, 'instead of (this that)', and جز اینکه joz inke and غیر از اینکه yeir az inke, 'except'.

12. The Subjunctive Past is used:

(a) To refer to an action or state in the past about which there is an element of doubt, e.g.

گمان میبرم که رفته باشد gaman mibaram ke rafte basad, I think he may have gone.

(b) To describe the anterior of two future actions or states, e.g.

تا دکتر برسد مریض مرده باشد ta doktor berasad mariz morde basad, By the time the doctor arrives the sick man will have died.

This usage is classical, the Perfect being used rather than the Subjunctive Past in modern usage.

(c) To refer to an action presumed to have been already performed, or a state presumed to be in existence, e.g.

میتراسم تمام شده باشد mitarsam tamam sode basad, I fear it will have finished.

تصور میکنم تا حالا رسیده باشد tasavvor mikonam ta hala raside basad, I think he will have arrived by now.

(d) After باید bayad and بایست bayest 'ought, must', referring to past time, e.g.

باید (بایست) رفته باشد bayad (bayest) rafte basad, He must have gone.

(e) After شاید sayad 'perhaps', referring to past time unless the action or state referred to is continuous (see para. 6 (a) above) or forms the apodosis of an impossible condition in the past (see Lesson VII, para. 5 (b) above). E.g.

شاید اینرا خوانده باشید sayad inra xande basid, Perhaps you have read this.

(f) After mibayest 'ought to have', e.g.

mibayest dide basid, You ought to have seen (this).

mibayest in ketabra xande basad, He ought to have read this book.

(g) In conditional clauses (see Lesson VII, para. 5 (a, iii above), e.g.

agar karde basad ce xahid kard, If he has done (it), what will you do?

(h) In the case of the verb داشتن daftan 'to have' for the Subjunctive Present, e.g.

bayad xēli hōusele daste basid, You must have great patience.

har cizi ke mēil daste basid tahie mikonam, I will obtain (prepare) whatever you want.

13. The Future is used:

(a) To refer to a future action or state, e.g.

farda xahad raft, He will go to-morrow.

(b) To indicate certainty, e.g.

in ali xahad bud = This must be 'Ali (said in reply to some such remark as کسی در میزند kasi dar mizānad 'someone is knocking at the door').

14. The Imperative is used:

To express a command, e.g.

برو borōu, go.

15. A form in -ad (3rd pers. sing.) has a precative sense. It is the sole surviving form of the old Optative.

The prefix be- is often added to it, e.g.

برسد berasad, May he arrive.

The negative is formed by the prefix ma-, e.g.

مکناد makonad, May he not do.

This form is seldom, if ever, used in Colloquial Persian.

The precative of بودن hudan is باد bad. (که) مبادا mabada (ke) used as a conjunction (=lest) is the negative precative to which the interjectory alef has been added (see Lesson XII, para. 12). It is also used in the phrase روز مبادا ruze mabada=a rainy day, or (in Classical Persian) the day of judgement.

16. Wishes are expressed by کاشکه kaske or کاشکی kaski 'would that' followed by the Subjunctive Present, e.g.

کاشکی بیاید kaski beyayad, Would that he would come.

The tense in unfulfilled wishes is the Imperfect or the Pluperfect, e.g.

کاشکی میآمد (آمده بود) kaski miamad (amade bud), Would that he had come.

17. After verbs of saying, thinking, knowing, seeing, etc., the tense of the verb is normally that of direct speech, but the pronoun is not necessarily that of direct speech. The particle که ke 'that' sometimes follows the main verb. E.g.

بمن گفت که نمیایم	be man goft ke namiayam	} He told me that he
بمن گفت که نمیاید	be man goft ke namiayad		was not coming.
گفت که اسبها حاضرند	goft ke asbha hazer and	He said the horses were ready.

باو گفتم که نمیایم	be u goftam ke namiayam	I told him I was not coming.
--------------------	--------------------------------	------------------------------

دیدیم که اینجا هستند	didim ke inja hastand	We saw they were here.
فکر کرد که این آسان است	fekr kard ke in asan ast	He thought this was easy.

افسوس میخورم که چرا آمدم	afsus mixoram ke cera amadam	I regret that I came.
--------------------------	-------------------------------------	-----------------------

پرسید کسی منزل هست	porsid kasi manzel hast	He asked if anyone was at home.
--------------------	--------------------------------	---------------------------------

از ما پرسیدند که کیستیم	az ma porsidand ke kistim	They asked us who we were.
-------------------------	----------------------------------	----------------------------

پیغام داد که فردا میایم	peiyam dad ke farda miayam	He sent a message to say he would come the next day.
-------------------------	-----------------------------------	--

فکر نمیکردم که خواهد آمد	fekr namikardam ke xahad amad	I did not think that he would come.
--------------------------	--------------------------------------	-------------------------------------

Indirect Speech is occasionally used. The last example could thus be rendered:

فکر نمیکردم که بیاید fekr namikardam ke beyayad.

دادن qōul dadan and وعده کردن va'de kardan 'to promise' are usually followed by a final clause with the Subjunctive Present, e.g.

وَعِدَه كَرْد كِه بِيَايَد va'de kard ke beyayad, He promised to come.

که ke can sometimes be translated by 'saying', e.g.

مدبران ممالك آن طرف در دفع مضرت ایشان مشورت کردند که این طایفه گروه هم بر این نسق روزگاری مداومت نمایند مقاومت ایشان ممتنع گردد modabberane mamaleke an taraf dar daf'e mazarrate isan mafvarat kardand ke in tayefe gar ham bar in nasaq ruzgari modavamat namayand moqavamate isan momtane' gardad,

The statesmen of the kingdoms of that region consulted together concerning the repelling of their evil, saying 'if this group (tribe) continues in this way for any (length of) time, it will be impossible to resist them'.

18. Although تا ta as a temporal conjunction is capable of five distinct meanings, careful observation of the tenses employed both in the تا ta clause and in the main clause will show that in Modern Persian no ambiguity arises, e.g.

(i) 'as long as'

تا باران میاید بیرون نمیرویم

ta baran miayad birun namiravim,

As long as it rains we shall not go out.

تا مدرسه میرفتم چیزی یاد نمیگرفتم ta madrase miraftam cizi yad namigereftam,

As long as I went to school I learnt nothing.

تا میتوانید آنرا تحمل کنید ta mitavanid anra tahammol konid,

Bear it as long as you can.

(ii) 'by the time that'

تا برسید دیر میشود

ta berasid dir misavad,

It will be late by the time you arrive.

اگر agar.

تا تریاق از عراق آرند مار گزیده مرده باشد ta taryaq az eraq arand mar gazide morde basad,

By the time they bring the antidote from Iraq the person bitten by the snake will have died.

In modern usage also if the verb of the clause introduced by تا ta 'as long as' is بودن budan 'to be' and refers to the present or future the Present Subjunctive is used, e.g.

تا دولتها اینطور باشند اوضاع خوب نمیشود ta doulatha in tour basand ouza' xub namisavad,

As long as the governments are like this conditions will not improve.

19. The use of a negative verb with هیچ hic and هرگز hargez has already been mentioned (see Lesson IV, para. 22 and Lesson VII, para. 1, respectively) and the use of the double negative with تا ta 'until' (see Lesson VI, para. 17 (c) above).

Certain verbs of prohibition require a negative in the subordinate clause, e.g.

منع کردم که آنجا نرود man' kardam ke anja naravad, I forbade him to go there.

But

ممنوع بود که کسی آنجا برود mamnu' bud ke kasi anja beravad, It was forbidden for anyone to go there.

The word قدغن qadayan 'forbidden' requires a negative verb, e.g.

ضمناً قدغن شد که دیگر بخانه مادرم نروم zemnan qadayan sod ke digar be xaneye madaram naravam,

Meanwhile it was forbidden for me to go any more to my mother's house.

The Arabic forms اصلاً aslan and ابداً abadan are used with a negative verb to mean 'not at all' and 'never', e.g.

ابداً آنجا نبودم abadan anja nabudam, I was never there.

اصلاً نمیخواهم aslan namixaham, I do not want (it) at all.

The use of the negative in the following idioms should be noted:

از باغ بیرون نیامده بود که مرا دید az bay birun nayamade bud ke mara did, He had barely come out of the garden when he saw me.

¹ See Part II, Lesson XXI, para. 16 (b) for Arabic Nouns in the accusative used as adverbs.

آفتاب نژده راه افتادیم aftab nazade rah oftadim, We set off before sunrise (the sun not having risen).

بمیدان نرسیده کوچه آخر دست راست be mēidan naraside kuceye axer daste rast, the last street on the right before reaching the square (not having arrived at the square).

20. Certain verbs, notably آمدن amadan 'to come' and افتادن oftadan 'to fall' are used impersonally with or without a preposition governing the logical subject, e.g.

یادم آمد yadam amad, I remembered (it came to my mind).

یادش رفت yades raft, He forgot (it went from his mind).

گیرش نیامد giref nayamad, He did not obtain (it).

پسندشان نیامد pasandesan nayamad, They did not like (it).

خوشم آمد xosam amad, I was pleased (at it).

بما خوش گذشت be ma xof gozast, We enjoyed ourselves.

21. داشتن daftan is used impersonally in the following constructions:

عیب ندارد ēib nadarad } It does not matter.
ضرر ندارد zarar nadarad }

احتمال دارد ehtemal darad, It is probable.¹

چاره ندارد care nadarad, It cannot be helped (there is no remedy).

22. خواستن xastan is sometimes equivalent to 'to need, to make necessary', e.g.

این کار وقت میخواید in kar vaqt mixahad, This affair needs time.

23. In Modern Persian the continuous past and continuous present can be expressed by the Imperfect of داشتن daftan together with the Imperfect of the main verb and by the Present of داشتن daftan together with the Present of the main verb respectively, e.g.

داشتم مینویشتم daftam minevestam, I was in the act of writing.

دارم مینویسم daram minevisam, I am in the act of writing.

¹ Also دارد (تام) کلی ehtemale kolli (tamm) darad, it is very probable, there is every probability.

24. The Particle hēi هی is also used to express repeated action, e.g.

هی میگفت hēi migoft, He kept on saying.

هی میگوید hēi miguyad, He keeps on saying.

25. In Classical Persian the Habitual Past is sometimes rendered by the prefix hami- همی in place of mi- می, e.g.

همیکردم hamikardam, I was doing, used to do, etc., or by the suffix -i ی added to the Preterite, e.g.

کردمی kardami, I was doing, used to do, etc.

This latter form is defective and is only used in the 1st pers. sing. and the 3rd pers. sing. and pl.

26. In Classical Persian a prefix be- بـ is sometimes added to the Preterite to give a sense of completion or finality, e.g.

برفت beraft, he went.

بگفت begoft, he said.

27. In Classical Persian a Conditional Past was formed by adding -i ی to the Imperfect or Preterite and a Conditional Present by adding -i ی to the Subjunctive Present. These tenses, like the Habitual Past with suffix -i (see above, para. 25), are defective, e.g.

تا بدانستی ز¹ دشمن دوست * زندگانی دو بار بایستی ta bedanestami ze došman dost zendegani do bar bayesti,

Life would be needed twice over to know friend from foe.

گر آنها که میگفتی کردمی * نکو سیرت و پارسا بودمی gar anha ke migoftami kardami neku sirat o parsa budami,

If I had done those things which I used to say, I would have been of good character and pious.

درخت اگر متحرک شدی ز جای بجای * نه جوراره کشیدی و نی جفای تبر daraxt agar motaharrek šodi ze jāi be jāi na jōure arre kasidi o nei jafaye tabar,

If a tree could move from place to place it would not suffer the tyranny of the saw and the oppression of the axe.

دهقانی ناشکر بر خدای تعالی خرده میگرفت که چرا کدوی بزرگرا بر بوته نازکی سبز نموده و بلوط کوچکرا بر درختی بلند رویانیده است من اگر خالق مخلوقات بودم بر خلاف این کار میکردم دهقان در این اندیشه بود که بلوطی از فراز درخت چنان بر دماغش خورد که خون جاری شد دهقان با خود گفت ضعف رای و مستی تدبیر من بنگر اگر این بلوط کدو میشد مرا کشته بود پس از جسارت خویش پوزش خواست و استغفار کرد

^۱ Literally 'he became situated (in) the place of favour'. مورد moured, originally drinking-place, is used in Persian in certain stereotyped phrases to mean 'place, site' in general.

EXERCISE 25

1. I do not understand how it occurred. 2. Not even his enemies were unkind to him, let alone his friends. 3. The house is uninhabitable in summer let alone in winter. 4. Seize the chance, else you will regret it. 5. I miss him, yet I am glad he went (although I miss him...). 6. He is always ill; nevertheless he is always cheerful. 7. He is living in great hardship; meanwhile his brother on the contrary is living in the greatest comfort. 8. The factory caught fire last night; it was completely destroyed and on that account many workmen will be unemployed. 9. The work had to be done; accordingly we did it. 10. There was no one there so I went away. 11. It is best that he should go. 12. His best friends will not deny that he was in error. 13. My only terror is that my father should follow (come after) me. 14. It is probable that he will come to-day. 15. It is not known which road he took (by which road he went). 16. It is immaterial whether he comes or goes. 17. Such books as this and such men as he are rare.

LESSON XIV

Polite Conversation. Some discrepancies between the spoken and the written word. دیگر digar and که ke.

1. Politeness requires the use of certain honorifics and phrases in formal conversation.

(a) Personal Pronouns. The 1st pers. sing. من man is sparingly used. بنده bande (lit. 'slave') is used in place of من man 'I' if the speaker wishes to indicate humility towards a person of equal or higher rank. بنده منزل bande manzel means 'my house'. Politeness does not require that mention of oneself should be made last if more than one pronoun is used, or a noun or nouns and the pronoun. The 1st pers. usually comes first, e.g.

من و شما man o شما, you and I.

من و برادر man o baradaram, my brother and I.

The use of the 3rd pers. pl. for the 3rd pers. sing. is common when reference is being made to a person of equal or superior rank.¹

¹ It is probably due to this custom that آنها anha has come to be used in Modern Persian for the 3rd pers. pl. of the Personal Pronoun ایشان ishan.

The 2nd pers. sing. is used only to children, intimate friends and servants.

sarkar سرکار is often used in place of šoma شما in referring to an equal or superior.

(b) Formerly many honorific titles were in use and strict rules governed their employment. Most of these have fallen into disuse. The only officially recognized honorific title is janab جناب, which is accorded to ministers and high officials, e.g.

janabe naxost vaẓir, H.E. the Prime Minister. جناب نخست وزیر

The term janabe ali جناب عالی or haẓrate ali حضرت عالی is sometimes used to address a person of superior (or equal) rank.

The Shah is referred to as a'la haẓrat اعلیحضرت and the Queen as olia haẓrat علیاحضرت.

(c) When referring to what a person of equal or higher rank has said it is customary to use the verb farmudan فرمودن 'to command' rather than goftan گفتن 'to say', e.g.

ce farmudid, چه فرمودید ce farmudid, What did you say?

farmudan فرمودن is substituted for kardan کردن and certain other verbs used to form compound verbs when reference is to a person of equal or higher rank, e.g.

xahef mikonam vaqtra ta'yin be-farmaid, خواهش میکنم وقترا تعیین بفرمائید, Please (I request you) appoint the time.

nameira ke marqum farmude budid rasid, نامه را که مرقوم فرموده بودید رسید, The letter you wrote arrived.

farmayef daflan فرماییش داشتن is similarly used for 'to want, desire', e.g.

ce farmayef darid (daflid), چه فرماییش دارید (داشتید), What do you want?

ce farmayefi darid (daflid), چه فرماییشی دارید (داشتید).

When referring to oneself, if speaking to a person of equal or higher rank, it is customary to use the verb arẓ kardan عرض کردن 'to make a petition' instead of گفتن, e.g.

arẓ kardam, عرض کردم, I said . . .

* Usually pronounced ala haẓrat.

arʔ misavad عرض میشود is similarly prefixed to an expression of opinion or statement.

The following compounds are used when reference is to a person of equal or higher rank. They must never be used when referring to oneself:

تشریف داشتن taʃrif daʃtan, to be in, be present.

تشریف بردن taʃrif bordan, to go, depart.

تشریف آوردن taʃrif avardan, to come, arrive.

E.g.

آقا تشریف دارند aga taʃrif darand, Is (your) master in?

فردا تشریف میاورند farda taʃrif miavarand, He (they) will come to-morrow.

بشهر تشریف بردند be šahr taʃrif bordand, He has (they have) gone to the town.

When accepting an invitation on one's own behalf from a person of equal or higher rank or arranging to call upon such a person, the verb šarafyab sodan 'to become a recipient of honour' is used or xedmat rasidan 'to arrive at the service of', e.g.

فردا شرفیاب میشوم farda šarafyab mišavam, I will come to-morrow.

خدمت شما میرسم xedmate šoma mirasam, I will come to see you.

These expressions must not be used when referring to anyone other than oneself.

xedmat is also used in place of be 'to' and piš = with, and dar xedmat = ba 'with', when referring to a person of equal or superior rank, e.g.

خدمت شما عرض میکنم xedmate šoma arʔ mikonam, I will tell you.

خدمت وزیر بودم xedmate vaʔir budam, I was with the minister.

در خدمت ایشان باصفهان رفتم dar xedmate išan be esfahan raftam, I went with him to Isfahan.

marhamat kardan is used in place of دادن dadān 'to give' when reference is to a person of equal or higher rank. It must never be used with reference to oneself.

کتاب را مرحمت کنید ketabra marhamat konid, Give (me) the book.

moltaʃet sodan is used rather than fahmidan for 'to understand'.

(d) The most usual formula of greeting is سلام علیکم salam aleikom 'peace be upon you', which is repeated in answer by the person to whom the greeting is given.

ahvale soma ce tōur ast 'how are you' is a common formula used when inquiring after someone's health. شریف šarif 'noble, noble person' can be substituted for شما soma and مزاج mezaj 'disposition', وجود vojūd 'existence', or حال hal 'state' for احوال ahval. The answer to such an inquiry is الحمد لله al hamdo lellah 'Praise be to God'.

sobhe soma be xēir '(may) your morning (be) good' is an alternative greeting which can be used in the morning. عاقبت شما بخیر aqebate soma be xēir '(may) your end (be) good' is sometimes said in reply to this.

On a feast-day or holiday, such as New Year's Day, the usual greeting is عید شما مبارک ide soma mobarak 'may your feast be blessed'.

(e) The phrase خوش آمدید xoš amadid 'welcome' is used to welcome someone to one's house. If a long time has elapsed since the previous visit of the visitor the phrase چه عجب ce ajab 'what a wonder (that you have at last honoured me)' is sometimes used. The phrase عجب بجمال شما ajab be jamale soma 'the marvel is at your kindness' may be said in reply.

(f) A variety of expressions are used on taking leave. On wishing to terminate a meeting or visit it is customary to ask one's host's permission to leave by some such phrase as مرخص میفرمائید moraxxas misfarmaid, or اجازه میفرمائید ejaze misfarmaid 'do you give me permission to depart' or by indicating that one has troubled one's host long enough by a phrase such as زحمت کم کنم zahmat kam konam 'let me make the trouble (given by me) less'.

If one's host then deprecates such an intention by saying زود است zud ast, it is customary to stay a few more minutes and then once more ask permission to depart. As a guest leaves he can say زحمت دادم zahmat dadam 'I have given (you) trouble' to which his host replies زحمت کشیدید zahmat kasidid 'you have taken trouble (in coming)'; if one's host says first زحمت کشیدید zahmat kasidid the answer is زحمت دادم zahmat dadam. As the guest departs the host may say to him, if he (the guest) is of equal or higher rank, مشرف فرمودید mosarraḥ farmudid 'you have conferred honour (on me).'

On parting from someone it is usual to use some phrase such as التفات شما زیاد eltefate soma ziyad, لطف شما زیاد lotfe soma ziyad 'your favour (was) great', لطف فرمودید lotf farmudid 'you have conferred honour on me', لطف عالی کم نشود lotfe ali kam našavad 'may the high favour not grow less', or سایه شما کم نشود sayeye soma kam nasavad 'may your shadow never grow less'. مبارك mobarak can be substituted for شما soma in the last phrase but is more formal.

خدا حافظ شما xoda hafez or خدا حافظ شما xoda hafeze soma 'may God be your protector' is also used, especially when the person to whom it is said is going on a journey. The answer to this is بامن خدا be amane xoda 'in the protection of God'.

شب بخیر fab be xêir 'good-night' or شب شما خوش fab be soma xos is used, but not widely.

بفرمائید befarmaid is used for 'please do, please come in, please sit down', etc.

چه عرض کنم ce arz konam is an expression used when the speaker does not know the answer to a question or wishes to give a non-committal reply.

بی زحمت bi zahmat 'without trouble' is an expression prefixed to a request asking someone to do something, e.g.

بی زحمت اینجا تشریف بیاورید bi zahmat inja tafrif beyavarid, Please come here.

بی زحمت آنرا بمن بدهید bi zahmat anra be man bedehid, Please give that to me.

دست شما درد نکند daste soma dard nakonad 'may your hand not pain you' is said to someone who has, for example, fetched something or done something for one involving some degree, however slight, of physical effort. In answer to this is sometimes heard سر شما درد نکند sare soma dard nakonad 'may your head not pain you'.

چشم cafm '(upon my) eye' is said in answer to a request or command and signifies an intention to comply with the request.

'Excuse me (=forgive me)' is translated by ببخشید bebaxsid, to which the answer خدا ببخشاد xoda bebaxsad 'may God forgive (you)' is sometimes given.

'Please (=I pray you)' can be translated by خواهش میکنم xahef mikonam 'I request (you)' or استدعا میکنم ested'a mikonam 'I beseech (you)'.

اختیار دارید exteyar darid 'you have the choice (=you are free to make such a statement, but...)' is said by way of remonstrance or protest at a remark.

(e) زیارت کردن ziarat kardan 'to make a pilgrimage' is used for 'to visit' (an equal or person of higher rank), e.g.

میل دارم سرکار را زیارت کنم mēil daram sarkarra ziarat konam, I should like to visit you.

(u) زیارت رفتن ziarat raftan means 'to go on a pilgrimage'.
 موفاراف شدن mofarraḡ sodan 'to be the recipient of honour' means to have performed a pilgrimage, i.e. to have visited a shrine and carried out the necessary rites. On meeting someone on the road returning, or who has returned, from a pilgrimage the phrase زیارت قبول ziarat qabul '(may your) pilgrimage (be) acceptable' is used, to which the answer is شما خدا حافظ xoda hafeze soma '(may) God (be) your protector'.¹
 On meeting someone who is going to perform a pilgrimage the phrase التماس دعا eltemase do'a '(I) beseech (your) prayer' may be said, to which the reply is محتاج دعا mohtaje do'a '(I) need (your) prayer'.

2. In the Introduction the vowel system and its relation to the written word was described. Although this relation is remarkably constant certain discrepancies are found. Some of these have already been noted in the Introduction and in Lesson v, para. 2. Certain other tendencies in Colloquial Persian should be noted:

(a) a followed by ن n tends to become u, e.g.

نان nan 'bread' becomes nun.

آن an 'that, it' becomes un.

(b) In certain words a followed by ن n tends to become a relatively short vowel intermediate between a and o.² It has this quality in the word خانم xanom 'lady' (see also Lesson v, para. 2) and دنگ dang (see Lesson v, para. 17). This 'shortened' a is frequently nasalized.

In certain Turkish words the written a has a similar quality, even when not followed by ن n, e.g. the first a of باتلاق batlaq 'swamp'.

را -ra sometimes becomes -ro, the o of -ro being somewhat prolonged, and approximating to ou.

(c) است ast 'is' is often replaced by e, e.g. خوب است xub ast 'it is good' becomes xub e.

(d) Certain verbs, notably دادن dadan 'to give' and گفتن goftan 'to say' and گذاشتن gozāstān 'to place, put, allow', tend to contract, the

¹ شما جای خالی jaye soma xali 'your place (was) empty' is also said.

² This modified a is also used in the recitation of poetry.

EXERCISE 26

1. He often becomes angry; for all that we like him and he has some good qualities. 2. There was no doubt that his life would be aimed at. 3. Whatever he talks about will be interesting. 4. It is immaterial whether he comes himself or he sends a substitute. 5. I always considered him my best friend. 6. The cholera scare has produced (been the cause of) a severe quarantine that has upset all commercial relations, to say nothing of the interruption of passenger traffic. 7. I have not nearly finished my work; on the contrary I have only just begun. 8. The expression is contrary to the rules of grammar; all the same it is part of the common tongue. 9. In every society, however seemingly corrupt, there are those who have not submitted to the evil elements. 10. Since its formation some years ago, this company has made large profits. 11. I wish you had come yesterday; then you would have seen my brother before he set out.

PART II
THE ARABIC ELEMENT

Introduction¹

1. There is a large Arabic element in Persian. This element is an indispensable part of the spoken and written word. The student will have already come across many Arabic words in the vocabularies—nouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions and conjunctions. The Arabic words incorporated into the Persian language have become Persianized. Many of them have acquired a meaning other than their present-day meaning in Arabic-speaking countries or have retained the meaning which they held at the time when they were incorporated into the Persian language. Not only have a large number of Arabic words been incorporated into Persian, but many Arabic phrases also. Persian literature abounds in quotations from Arabic writings, especially from the Qor'an and religious works such as the Nahj ol-Balaghe.

2. In the following lessons an attempt will be made to describe the formation of the main derivative Arabic forms which are used in Persian. The Arabic language is built up on trilateral and quadrilateral roots, of which the former are the more common. By addition to the root of one or more of the letters ا, ت, س, م, ن, و or ي (known as servile letters) or by altering the vowel pattern the full conjugation of the verb can be formed. The servile letters are also found in their own right, as it were, forming one or more of the letters of the trilateral or quadrilateral root.

3. The letters ط, ظ, ث, ض, ص, ش, س, ز, ر, ذ, د, ت and ن are known as 'sun letters' (الْحُرُوفُ الشَّمْسِيَّة). When the Arabic definite article ال is prefixed to a word beginning with one of the sun letters, the / is assimilated to the sun letter, e.g.

السُّلْطَانُ as-soltan, the Sultan.

4. The other letters of the alphabet are known as 'moon letters' (الْحُرُوفُ الْقَمَرِيَّة) and the / of the article is not assimilated to them.

5. The value of the consonants and vowels in Arabic differs from their value in Persian, but Arabic words and phrases, when used in Persian, are usually Persianized and hence no attempt will be made in the following pages to differentiate between Arabic and Persian values (see also para. 12 below). The long vowels i, a, and u are indicated by placing the kasre, fathe and zamme before the letters ی, ا, and و respectively; in which case these letters are called 'letters of prolongation' (حُرُوفُ الْمَدِّ). In some common words a is indicated merely by fathe or by a stroke written perpendicularly to resemble a small alef, e.g. الله God, لكن but.

6. ا alef, و vav and ی ye are 'weak letters' (حُرُوفُ أَلِفْلَةٍ) so called because they undergo certain changes according to their phonetic context.

7. Tanvin (nutation). At the end of nouns and adjectives when these are indefinite, the vowel signs َ (o) and ِ (e) are written double, thus ً and ٍ, and pronounced on and en respectively. The vowel sign ِ (a) is also written double and pronounced an. It then takes an alef unless the word ends in ِ (i)¹ or hamze, in which case it is written ً and ٍ respectively. E.g.

وَالِدٌ valedon, father (nom.).

وَالِدٍ valeden, father (gen.).

وَالِدًا valedan, father (acc.).

دَفْعَةً daf'atan, once.

أَبْتَدَأَ ebteda'an, in the beginning.

8. َ hamze in Arabic is of two kinds; هَمْزَةُ الْقَطْع and هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ respectively. The former cannot be dropped, whereas the latter is omitted under certain circumstances.

The following rules govern the writing of the هَمْزَةُ الْقَطْع:

(a) At the beginning of a word it is always written with alef, e.g.

أَمْرٌ order. إِبِلٌ camel. أَفُقٌ horizon.

In Persian the sign َ in an initial position is omitted: thus امر.

¹ The feminine ending (see Lesson XVI, para. 5 et seq.) is written ِة.

Otherwise it follows the same rules as the hamze in a medial position. In a final position the sign َ is often omitted in Persian.

هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ occurs at the beginning of some words but does not represent an essential part of the word itself. When such a word follows another word the هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ with its vowel is dropped and the sign َ known as وَصْلَةٌ replaces the hamze, and the alef which supported the hamze, while preserved in writing, is not represented in pronunciation, e.g.

عَبْدُ الْقَادِرِ Abd ol-Qader (a proper name).

The hamze of the definite article ال, the Imperative of the I form of the verb and of the Perfect, Imperative and Verbal Noun of the VII, VIII, IX and X forms of the verb is a هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ, as also is the hamze of the following words:

ابْنٌ son.	ابْنَةٌ daughter.
إِثْنَانِ two (m.).	إِثْنَتَانِ two (f.).
إِمْرَأٌ man.	إِمْرَأَةٌ woman.

If the word preceding a هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ does not end in a vowel, the final consonant generally receives a kasre (e) except مِنْ 'from' which takes a fathe (a) before the article, e.g.

مِنْ الْوَلَدِ from the boy.

The Personal Pronouns هُمْ 'they', كُمْ 'you' and أَنْتُمْ 'ye', the personal ending تُمْ of the 2nd pers. pl. of the Perfect and the preposition مُذ 'since' take a zamme (o) before a هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ, e.g.

لَعَنَهُمُ اللَّهُ may God curse them.

If the word preceding a هَمْزَةُ الْوَصْلِ ends in ا (a) و (u) or ي (i) the vowels a, u and i become short. In Persian they are pronounced a, o and e respectively, e.g.

أَبُو الْبَشَرِ abol-basar, the father of humanity (a proper name).

فِي الْفَوْرِ fel-four, immediately.

In the expression عَيْنَهُ (in Persian) 'exactly like', the zame also preserves its Arabic value, that is it approximates to the Persian vowel u but its articulation time is less. These differences are not shown in the transcription.

يَ in Arabic words is represented in the transcription as iy,¹ e.g.

رَعِيَّة (for رَعِيَّة) ra'iyat, peasant.

بَلَدِيَّة (for بَلَدِيَّة) baladiye, municipality.

يَ becomes aiy, e.g. مَهْيَا mohaiya, prepared.

يَ followed by ا or ا in some Arabic words (notably the Verbal Noun of the VII and VIII form of Hollow Verbs, see Lesson XVIII, para. 4) is represented in the transcription by ey, but this e approximates to the vowel in the English word 'bit' (and not to the e in the English word 'bed'), e.g.

اِمْتِيَاز emteyaz.

This does not apply to يَ followed by ا in Persian words, e.g.

شِيرَازِيَان shirazian, people of Shiraz.

LESSON XV

The Triliteral Root.

1. The Arabic verbal root contains three radical letters or four,² e.g.

فَعَلَ to do (of which the radical letters are ف, ع and ل).

تَرَجَّمَ to translate (of which the radical letters are ت, ر, ج and م).

2. The triliteral root is the more common of the two. In the 3rd pers. sing. Perfect Active the first and third radicals always have an a as their vowel. The medial radical may have a, e or o, e.g.

فَعَلَ to do. حَزَنَ to be sad. حَسَنَ to be beautiful.

¹ It is thus differentiated from يَ (يه) is in the form تَفَعَّلَ when the third radical is يَ.

² Arabic dictionaries give the verb under the 3rd pers. sing. masc. of the Perfect Active of the root form. This is given in Arabic-English dictionaries as the infinitive, thus فَعَلَ 'to do' and تَرَجَّمَ 'to translate'; the real meaning of these forms is 'he did' and 'he translated' respectively. The derived forms must be looked up in Arabic dictionaries under the root form.

3. From the simple or root form are derived fourteen forms. Only nine of these are in common use and only these will be given in this and the following lessons. All ten forms seldom occur in one root. The Arabic dictionaries give only those forms which are in use.

4. The Active and Passive Participles and the Verbal Noun of the Arabic verb are used in Persian. Only these forms together with the 3rd pers. masc. sing. of the Perfect Active will be given in the tables in this and the following lessons.¹ The verb فَعَلَ is commonly used by Arabic grammarians as a paradigm. The derivative forms are formed by the addition of servile letters (see p. 181, para. 2 above), vowel permutations and the doubling of the 2nd and 3rd radical letters, as follows:

Form	3rd pers. sing. Perfect Active	Active Participle	Passive Participle
I	فَعَلَ	فَاعِلٌ	مَفْعُولٌ

E.g.

كَتَبَ he wrote. كَاتِبٌ scribe. مَكْتُوبٌ written; letter.

There are some forty forms of the Verbal Noun of the root form of the verb. Only those in more frequent use will be given here:

فَعْلٌ e.g.:

فَهْمٌ understanding from فَهَمٌ to understand.

فَعْلٌ e.g.:

فَرَحٌ joy „ فَرِحَ to be glad.

فُعُولٌ e.g.:

جُلُوسٌ accession „ جَلَسَ to sit.

فُعُولَةٌ e.g.:

سُهُولَتٌ ease „ سَهَّلَ to be easy.

¹ There are a few cases in Persian of other Arabic verbal forms, e.g. يَعْنِي, used in Persian to mean 'namely', is the 3rd pers. sing. of the Imperfect Active of عَنِ 'to mean'. أَعْنِي, also used to mean 'namely', is the 1st pers. sing. of the Imperfect Active of the same verb.

² Usually written with ت in Persian.

فَعِيل e.g.:

رَحِيل departure, journey from رَحَلَ to depart (from).

فَعَالِيَّة¹ e.g.:

صَلَاحِيَّة competence „ صَلَح to be honest.

مَفْعَلَةٌ e.g.:

مَقَالَةٌ treatise „ قَالَ³ to say.

5. The meanings of the derived forms are modifications of the meaning of the root form as follows:

- II. فَعَّلَ intensive; makes intransitive verbs transitive. E.g. ضَرَبَ to beat, ضَرَبَ to beat violently; فَرَّقَ to separate (intrans.), فَرَّقَ to disperse (trans.).
- III. فَاعَلَ the relation of the action of I to another person, e.g. قَتَلَ to kill, قَاتَلَ to fight with.
- IV. أَفْعَلَ causative; brings about the condition or action implied in I, e.g. عَلِمَ to know, أَعْلَمَ to inform (someone of something); بَلَغَ to be eloquent, أَبْلَغَ to speak eloquently.
- V. تَفَعَّلَ Reflexive of II; describes the consequences of II, especially with reference to oneself, e.g. فَرَّقَ to disperse (trans.), تَفَرَّقَ to be dispersed; خَوَّفَ to terrify, تَخَوَّفَ to be afraid.
- VI. تَفَاعَلَ Reflexive of III; expresses the consequences of III; reciprocal. E.g. رَامَى to throw (at the same time as another), تَرَامَى to throw oneself down; خَادَعَ to try to outwit, تَخَادَعَ to pretend to be deceived; قَاتَلَ to fight with, تَقَاتَلَ to fight with one another.

² Usually written with ه in Persian, the ه being then treated like the 'silent' ه.

³ For the rules governing the formation of the derived forms of weak verbs see Lesson XVIII.

- VII. إِنْفَعَلَ Passive; being affected by I especially from the point of view of the person initiating action for his own ends, e.g. كَسَرَ to break off, انْكَسَرَ to be broken; هَزَمَ to put to flight, انْهَزَمَ to let oneself be put to flight, to flee.
- VIII. إِنْفَعَلَ Reflexive of I; reciprocal, e.g. ضَرَبَ to beat, اضْطَرَبَ¹ to move oneself to and fro, to be agitated; قَتَلَ to kill, اقْتَتَلَ to fight with one another.
- IX. إِنْفَعَلَ used for colours and physical defects, e.g. إِسْوَدَّ to be black, إِحْوَلَّ to squint.
- X. إِسْتَفْعَلَ Reflexive of IV; desiring, seeking, asking for, considering or thinking a thing possesses the qualities expressed by I, e.g. أَوْجَبَ to make it necessary for others, اسْتَوْجَبَ to make something necessary for oneself; غَفَرَ to pardon, اسْتَغْفَرَ to ask pardon, نَحَا to help, اسْتَغَاثَ to call for help, حَسَنَ to be comely, اسْتَحْسَنَ to think beautiful.

6. Arabic Verbal Nouns are abstract and denote the state, action or feeling indicated by the verb.

7. The Active Participle is used as an adjective or noun referring to a continuous action, habitual state or permanent quality, e.g.

عَالِمٌ learned, a learned man.

مُعَلِّمٌ teacher.

The tendency in Persian is for the Active Participle of the I form to be used as an adjective in the singular rather than as a noun, but to be widely used as a noun in the plural.

8. The Passive Participle is used as an adjective or noun, e.g.

مَعْلُومٌ known.

مَكْتُوبٌ letter (what is written).

Form	3rd pers. sing. Perfect Active	Active Participle	Passive Participle	Verbal Noun
II	فَعَّلَ	مُفَعِّلٌ	مُفَعَّلٌ	تَفْعِيلٌ or تَفْعَلَةٌ
E.g.	عَلَّمَ to teach	مُعَلِّمٌ teacher		تَعْلِيمٌ teaching
	فَرَّقَ to separate	مُفَرِّقٌ discriminative	مُفَرَّقٌ dispersed	تَفْرِيقٌ separation, disunity
III	فَاعَلَ	مُفَاعِلٌ	مُفَاعَلٌ	مُفَاعَلَةٌ or فَعَالٌ
E.g.	كَاتَبَ to correspond	مُكَاتِبٌ correspondent		مُكَاتَبَةٌ correspondence
	حَافَظَ to observe carefully	مُحَافِظٌ guardian		مُحَافَظَةٌ preservation, defence
	قَاتَلَ to wage war against	مُقَاتِلٌ fighter, warrior		قِتَالٌ battle
IV	أَفْعَلَ	مُفْعِلٌ	مُفْعَلٌ	إِفْعَالٌ
E.g.	أَحْسَنَ to do good	مُحْسِنٌ beneficent		إِحْسَانٌ beneficence
V	تَفَعَّلَ	مُتَفَعِّلٌ	مُتَفَعَّلٌ	تَفَعُّلٌ
E.g.	تَكَبَّرَ to magnify oneself	مُتَكَبِّرٌ proud		تَكَبُّرٌ pride

VI	تَفَاعَلَ	مُتَفَاعَلٌ	مُتَفَاعِلٌ	contracting party	مُتَفَاعِلٌ	تَفَاعُلٌ	xv]
E.g.	تَعَاهَدَ	مُتَعَاهِدٌ	مُتَعَاهِدٌ	to make a mutual compact	مُتَعَاهِدٌ	تَعَاهُدٌ	a mutual agreement
VII	انْقَلَبَ	مُنْقَلِبٌ	مُنْقَلِبٌ		مُنْقَلِبٌ	انْقِلَابٌ
E.g.	انْكَسَرَ	مُنْكَسِرٌ	مُنْكَسِرٌ	broken	مُنْكَسِرٌ	انْكَسَارٌ	fracture, rupture
VIII	اِفْتَعَلَ	مُفْتَعِلٌ	مُفْتَعِلٌ		مُفْتَعِلٌ	اِفْتِعَالٌ
E.g.	اِسْتَعَى	مُسْتَعِيعٌ	مُسْتَعِيعٌ	impossible	مُسْتَعِيعٌ	اِسْتِنَاعٌ	abstention
IX	اِفْعَلَّ	مُفْعَلٌ	مُفْعَلٌ		مُفْعَلٌ	اِفْعِلَالٌ
E.g.	اِحْمَرَّ	مَحْمَرٌ	مَحْمَرٌ	red	مَحْمَرٌ	اِحْمِرَارٌ	redness
X	اِسْتَفْعَلَ	مُسْتَفْعِلٌ	مُسْتَفْعِلٌ		مُسْتَفْعِلٌ	اِسْتِفْعَالٌ
E.g.	اِسْتَقْبَلَ	مُسْتَقْبِلٌ	مُسْتَقْبِلٌ	one who goes to meet (someone)	مُسْتَقْبِلٌ	اِسْتِقْبَالٌ	going to meet

Usually written with e in Persian.

* In Persian this usually becomes e and the f of the ع frequently becomes a k, thus مُتَفَاعِلٌ becomes mutafake but مُتَعَاهِدٌ mutahade.

† The Passive Participle of this form where the latter is Passive in meaning (see above, para. 5) does not occur.

9. The inserted ت of the VIII form undergoes the following changes:

(a) If the first radical of the root is ت this unites with the inserted ت, e.g.

اتَّبَعَ submission, obedience (from تَبَعَ).

(b) If the first radical is د or ز the inserted ت changes into د which unites with the radical د, e.g.

اِدْرَاكَ attainment (from دَرَكَ).

اِزْدْحَام crowding (from زَحَمَ).

(c) If the first radical is ذ the inserted ت changes into ذ and unites with the radical ذ, e.g.

اِذْخَار hoarding (from ذَخَرَ).

(d) If the first radical is ط, ض, or ص the inserted ت is changed into ط, which unites with the radical ط, e.g.

اطَّلَاع information (from طَلَعَ).

اِصْطِلَاح expression (from صَلَحَ).

اضْطِرَاب anxiety (from ضَرَبَ).

10. Arabic forms are used in Persian not only standing alone, but also combined with Persian words and particles to form compounds. Many examples of Compound Verbs thus formed have been given in Lesson IX, para. 2. Persian particles and suffixes are also added to Arabic forms to form compounds, e.g.

حاجتمند hajatmand, needy (حاجت need).

شعله‌ور so'levar, blazing (شعله flame).

اولین avvalin, first (اول first).

نامعلوم nama'lum, unknown (معلوم known).

ناصالح nasaleh, dishonest (صالح good, just).

عقلانه aqelane, wise; wisely (عقل wise, reasonable).

This form is used to denote the abstract idea of the thing as distinguished from the concrete thing itself; and also to represent the thing or things signified by the primitive noun as a whole or totality, e.g.

إِنْسَانِيَّةٌ humanity (in Persian انسانیت ensaniyat; إِنْسَان human being).

نَصْرَانِيَّةٌ what constitutes being a Christian (in Persian نصرانیت nasraniyat; نَصْرَانِيّ a Christian).

This termination is occasionally added to Persian nouns, e.g.

خَرِيَّتْ xariyat stupidity (from خَر xar ass, donkey).

This form is also occasionally used in Persian to denote a dynasty; in this case the ة becomes the 'silent' h, e.g.

قَاجَارِيَّةٌ qajariye, the Qajar Dynasty.

صَفَوِيَّةٌ safaviye, the Safavid Dynasty.

14. Diminutives are formed on the measure فُعَيْلٌ, e.g.

طُفَيْلٌ a little child (from طِفْلٌ child).¹

حُسَيْنٌ Hosein (diminutive of Hasan).

If the noun has a feminine ending this is attached to the diminutive, e.g.

قَلْعَةٌ a small fortress (from قَلْعَةٌ).

15. Adjectives are formed on a variety of measures. Among them are:

(a) فُعَيْلٌ e.g.

شَرِيفٌ noble.

مَرِيضٌ sick.

When derived from transitive verbs this form has a passive meaning, e.g.

أَسِيرٌ captive.

(b) فُعْلَانٌ, fem. فُعْلَى, e.g.

مَسْكُرَانٌ drunk (m.); مَسْكُرَى (f.).

(c) فُعْلٌ e.g.

صَعْبٌ difficult.

17. Adjectives denoting a colour or physical defect are also formed on the measure أَفْعَل. The feminine is formed on the measure فَعْلَاءَة; the alternate form فَعْلَى is rare, e.g.

أَصْفَر yellow (m.). صَفْرَاء (f.).

18. Relative Adjectives are formed by the addition of ی to the noun. In Arabic this ی has a tafsid, but in Persian it becomes i, e.g.

دِمَشْقِي an inhabitant of Damascus or person born in Damascus (دِمَشْق).

Certain nouns to which this ی is added undergo various changes:

(a) The feminine ending ة is omitted, e.g.

حَقِيقِي real, true (from حَقِيقَة truth, reality).

طَبِيعِي natural (from طَبِيعَة nature).

صَنَاعِي industrial (from صَنَاعَة industry).

(b) The feminine termination ی (or ا) of the form فَعْلَى is omitted or changed into و, e.g.

دُنْيَوِي worldly (from دُنْيَا = world, fem. of the elative أَدْنَى lower, lowest).

(c) The termination ة falls away if the word ends in یَة, e.g.

إِسْكَندَرِي a native of Alexandria (from إِسْكَندَرِيَّة).

(d) If the final radical is a ی, و or alef hamze, this is changed into و, e.g.

مَعْنَوِي spiritual (from مَعْنَى meaning).

عَلَوِي an Alid (from عَلِي Ali).

سَمَاوِي heavenly (from سَمَاء heaven).

(e) If the noun contains more than four letters (radicals together with servile letters), the final being ی, the latter is omitted, e.g.

مُصْطَفَوِي pertaining to the chosen (from مُصْطَفَى chosen).

راه‌ها و راه‌آهن در حدود استطاعت کشور— (۱۰) اصلاح قانون تقسیمات کشور و توجه باینکه اهالی در اداره امور محلی خود شرکت داشته باشند— (۱۱) تکمیل و ترقی تأسیسات فرهنگی و اهتمام در اصلاح اخلاق عمومی— (۱۲) توسعه سازمان بهداری و توجه مخصوص ببهداشت عمومی

آمیزش زبانها^۱

در عالم هیچ زبانی نیست که بتواند از آمیختگی با زبان دیگر خود را برکنار دارد مگر زبان مردمی که هرگز با مردم دیگر آمیزش نکنند و این نیز محال است چه بوسیله تجارت و سفر و معاشرت و حتی بوسیله شنیدن افسانه‌ها و روایات ملل دیگر لغاتی از آن مردم در این مردم نفوذ میکند و همه زبانهای عالم از این رو دارای لغت‌های دخیل است باید دید از آمیختن زبانی با زبان دیگر چه نتایجی حاصل میشود آمیختن زبانها بر چند قسم است یکی اینکه زبانی هر چه را ندارد بالطبع از همسایه یا جای دورتر بستاند و ملایم بلهجه و سلیقه خویش نماید یعنی آن لغت را فرو برده و نشخوار کرده و قابل هضم سازد و از حالات و اختصاصات اصلی آنرا بیندازد و حتی بمیل خود آنرا گاهی قلب کند گاهی تصحیف کند گاهی مفهوم آنرا تغییر دهد اگر جامد است مشتق کند و اگر مشتق است جامد کند الی آخر چنانکه عربان بلغات بیگانه همین کار را کرده و میکنند و ما هم با برخی از لغات عربی و لغات ترکی و فرنگی این عمل را نموده‌ایم ولی این کار در میان ما عمومیت نداشته است

1. What changes we make in our plans will be announced later.
2. The enemy devastated the country as they retreated.
3. You ought to have told me instead of I you.
4. The more money he makes the more he wants.
5. So long as the nation retains its vigour its language never grows old.
6. I doubt whether he was there.
7. I do not know whether he (his condition) is better or worse.
8. I asked him whether he would come himself or send a substitute.
9. Little did she foresee what a difference this would make.
10. I insist upon it that he should go.
11. I came as soon as I heard of it.
12. I shall come as soon as ever I can.
13. When your work is done let me know.
14. I shall be ready by the time you get back.

LESSON XVII

Doubled Verbs. Hamzated Verbs.

1. In Lesson xv an example of the 'sound' Triliteral Verb was given. Certain additional rules have to be borne in mind in the formation of the derived forms of 'doubled' verbs, i.e. verbs whose second and third radical is the same, 'hamzated' verbs, i.e. verbs one of whose radicals is a hamze, and 'weak' verbs, i.e. verbs one of whose radicals is و or ي.

2. The following rules will enable the reader to find the Verbal Nouns and Participles of 'doubled' verbs and their derived forms.

(a) If the first and third radicals are vowelless, the second radical rejects its vowel (unless it is itself doubled), unites with the third and forms a doubled letter.

(b) If the first radical is vowelless and the third vowelless, the second radical gives up its vowel to the first, combines with the third and forms a doubled letter.

(c) When the second radical is separated from the third by a long vowel no contraction takes place.

Form	مدّ to stretch out
	3rd pers. sing. masc. Perfect Active	Active Participle	Passive Participle	Verbal Noun
I	مَدَّ	مَادٌّ	مَمْدُودٌ	مَدٌّ
II	مَدَّدَ	مَمْدِدٌ	مَمْدُودٌ	تَمْدِيدٌ
III	مَادَّ	مَمَادٌّ	مَمَادٌّ	يَمْدَادٌ
IV	أَمَدَّ	مَمْدٌ	مَمْدٌ	إِمْدَادٌ
V	تَمَدَّدَ	مَتَمِدِدٌ	مَتَمْدُودٌ	تَمَدُّدٌ
VI	تَمَادَّدَ	مَتَمَادٌّ	مَتَمَادٌّ	تَمَادُّدٌ (or تَمَادٌّ)
VII	إِنْفَلَّ	مُنْفَلٌّ		إِنْفِلَالٌ

IX	Seldom occurs	—	—	—
X	إِسْتَمَدَّ	مُسْتَمِدٌّ	مُسْتَمْدٌ	إِسْتِمْدَادٌ

* إِنْفَلَّ to be notched (a sword), broken (a tooth). The VII form of مَدَّ does not occur.

3. The following rules, in conjunction with those given in the Introduction to Part II for the writing of hamze, will enable the reader to form the Verbal Nouns and Participles of 'hamzated' verbs and their derived forms. It should be remembered that the hamze is a consonant and like other consonants may be vowelised or vowelless.

(a) If a hamze with a is prefixed, as in the IV form, to the first radical and this is a hamze, the two come together and are written آ.

(b) If a hamze with e or o is prefixed to the first radical and this is a hamze, the hamze of the radical is changed to ي (i) or و (u) respectively. Exceptionally the VIII form of أَخَذَ 'to take' is اِخْتَذَ.

(c) The Verbal Noun of the II form is formed on the measure تَفْعِلَة if the third radical is a hamze.

Form	3rd pers. sing. masc. Perfect Active	Active Participle	Passive Participle	Verbal Noun

innocent man should be hanged. 9. She is better than when I last wrote to you. 10. The English love their liberty even more than their kings. 11. He dared not stir lest he should be seen. 12. Of course, if I were rich, I would travel. 13. We should have arrived sooner but that we had a collision.

LESSON XVIII

Weak Verbs. Assimilated Verbs. Hollow Verbs. Defective Verbs.

1. 'Weak' verbs can be divided into three classes: 'Assimilated' verbs, i.e. those the first radical of which is و or ی, 'Hollow' verbs, i.e. those the second radical of which is و or ی, and 'Defective' verbs, i.e. those the third radical of which is و or ی.

2. The following changes are undergone by a verb the first radical of which is و:

(a) If the first radical is vowelless and preceded by e, the و of the first radical is changed into ی; thus the Verbal Noun of the IV form of وَجَدَ 'to find' is إِيجَاد and the Verbal Noun of the X form of وَجِبَ 'to become binding, obligatory' is اسْتِيجَاب.

(b) If the first radical is vowelless and preceded by o, the و of the first radical is assimilated to the o and becomes u.

(c) In the VIII form the و is assimilated to the inserted ت. The Verbal Noun of the VIII form of وَصَلَ 'to arrive' is thus اِتِّصَال and the Active Participle مُتَّصِل.

3. The following changes are undergone by a verb the first radical of which is ی:

(a) If the first radical is vowelless and follows o, it is changed into u; thus the Active Participle of the IV form of يَسَّرَ 'to become gentle, tractable' is مُوسِّر.

(b) In the VIII form the ی is assimilated to the inserted ت; thus the Verbal Noun of the VIII form of يَسَّرَ is اِتِّسَار and the Active Participle مُتَّسِر.

4. The 3rd pers. sing. masc. past tense of 'Hollow' verbs is usually written with alef as the medial letter. This alef may represent a radical و or ى.

(a) The forms II, III, V, VI and IX are conjugated like the strong verb. In the remaining forms

(b) If the و or ى is vowelised and the first radical is vowelless the vowel of the و or ى is given to the first radical and becomes a or i respectively.

(c) If the first and third radicals are vowelised, the former with an a, this with the radical و or ى becomes a.

(d) If the first and third radicals are vowelised, the former with an o, this with the radical و or ى becomes i.

(e) The Verbal Nouns of the IV and X forms drop the second radical and add ā after the third radical.

(f) In the Active Participle of the I form the و or ى is changed to hamze.

(g) In the Passive Participle of the I form, if the second radical is و, one of the two و's is usually dropped.

(h) In the Passive Participle of the I form, if the second radical is ى, the و is usually dropped.

(i) 'Hollow' verbs denoting colours and physical defects retain the و or ى in the IX form.

قَالَ to speak; سَارَ to go, travel

Form	3rd pers. sing. masc. Perfect Active	Active Participle	Passive Participle	Verbal Noun
I	سَارَ; قَالَ	سَائِر; قَائِل	مَسْبُوع; مَقُول	سَيْر; قَوْل

5. The following rules will enable the reader to find the Verbal Nouns and Participles of 'Defective' verbs and their derived forms. In the Infinitive the final radical is sometimes written ا, which represents an original ي.

(a) If the second and third radicals are vowelised with an a and no letter is added after the last radical, this combination is reduced to ا (-a).

(b) If the second radical is vowelised with an e and the third is و and vowelised with an a and no letter is added after the last radical this combination becomes ي.

(c) In the derived forms the third radical of 'Defective' verbs always appears as ي.

(d) In the Active Participles the final و or ي unites with tanvin and is written ـٍ. If the article precedes the Participle the final radical reappears as ي; this is also the case with the Verbal Nouns of the V and VI forms.

(e) In the Passive Participles the third radical appears as ي and the tanvin is written ـُ over the medial radical, e.g. مُنْقَضِي monqazan. In Persian this is written منقضى monqaza, i.e. the form used in Arabic with the article.

(f) In the Passive Participle of the I form, if the third radical is و, the و of the third radical and the inserted و coalesce and are written with a tafdid.

¹ أَنْشَالَ to be lifted.

² أَسْوَدَ to be black.

³ أَبْيَضَ to be white.

⁴ أَسْتَقَامَ to be straight; to rise.

EXERCISE 30

1. I have stood it as long as I can; my patience is now exhausted.
2. He spends his money as fast as he gets it.
3. Nothing could be more distasteful to me than that I should have to go.
4. I do not say that he has been in any way negligent or that he has been dishonest.
5. He is speaking so loudly that I hear him even from here.
6. He is so badly injured that he must die.
7. He is so badly injured he will probably die.
8. He is so badly injured that he may die.
9. The crops failed because it was a dry year.
10. He cannot be tired since he has walked only a short way.

5. The sound plural masculine of nouns and adjectives is formed by adding وْنَ in the nominative and يْنَ in the oblique cases, e.g.

Nom.	مَلِكُونَ	} kings.	كَبِيرُونَ	} great.
Gen. and Acc.	مَلِكِينَ		كَبِيرِينَ

6. The sound plural masculine is used for:

- (a) Masculine proper names, except those ending in ة.
- (b) Diminutives denoting rational beings.
- (c) Participles.
- (d) Nouns of the measure فُعَال (denoting workers in a trade or profession).
- (e) Relative Adjectives.
- (f) Adjectives of the form أَفْعَل denoting elatives.

7. The sound plural of feminine nouns and adjectives is formed by changing ة into َات in the nominative and َات in the oblique cases, e.g.

Nom.	مَلَكَاتُ	} queens.	كَبِيرَاتُ	} great.
Gen. and Acc.	مَلَكَاتٍ		كَبِيرَاتٍ

8. The main types of word for which the sound feminine plural is used are:

- (a) Feminine proper names.
- (b) Class names ending in ة.
- (c) The feminine of adjectives the masculine of which takes the sound masculine plural.
- (d) Verbal Nouns of the derived forms.²
- (e) Diminutives denoting irrational beings and things.
- (f) Foreign words.
- (g) Certain masculine nouns, e.g.

حَيَوَانُ animal. حَيَوَانَاتُ animals.

² In Persian this may be ت or ه. In either case the plural is ات, e.g. ملاحظه molahaze 'consideration, view, etc.' pl. ملاحظات molahazat.

³ The Verbal Nouns of the II and IV forms also have Broken Plurals (see Lesson xx).

9. The sound feminine plural is sometimes added to Persian nouns, e.g.

فرمایشات farmayefat, orders, commands.

نگارشات negarefat, writings.

باغات bayat, gardens.

dehat (from deh 'village') is used as a singular to mean 'country (as opposed to town)'.

A plural on the analogy of the sound feminine plural is also sometimes formed from Persian and Arabic words ending in -e, this being changed into ج before the termination of the sound feminine plural, e.g.

میوجات mivejat, fruits.

نوشتجات nevestejat, writings.

کارخانجات karxanejat, factories.

روزنامجات ruznamejat, newspapers.

حوالجات havalejat, transfers.

قبالجات qabalejat, title-deeds.

Whether he succeeds or fails, we shall have to do our part.

LESSON XX

Broken Plurals.

1. In addition to the sound plurals, which are used for certain forms only, there are the so-called Broken Plurals, of which there are some thirty measures. Broken plurals maintain the radicals of the singular in their original order but change the vowel pattern. They may in addition add a consonant at the beginning or end or both. The consonants so used are ل at the beginning and ن, ة or ة at the end. The following table gives the plural measures from triliteral roots and the singular measures from which they are derived. Those forms which are more commonly used in Persian are marked with an asterisk.

2. Measures for Broken Plurals from triliteral roots.

*1. فُعْل from

*(a) فُعْلَة

(b) فُعْلَى¹

(c) فُعْلَة

2. فُعْل from

(a) أَفْعَل²

(b) فُعْلَاء

² Not the elative.

³ The feminine of أَفْعَل, not the elative.

*10. فُعْلَةٌ from

فَاعِلٌ¹

11. فُعْلَةٌ from

(a) فَعْلٌ

(b) فَعَلٌ

 (b) صَاحِبٌ, friend, owner; صَاحِبَةٌ
26. حَرَسٌ, guard; حَارِسٌ; خَدَمٌ, servant; خَادِمٌ

3. Broken plurals from quadriliteral roots are formed on the following measures. Nouns formed from triliteral roots by prefixing م, ت or ا form their plurals on the same measures as nouns from quadriliteral roots.

* (i) فَعَالِلٌ e.g.

كَوَاكِبٌ	star	كَوْكَبٌ
جَوَاهِرٌ	jewel	جَوْهَرٌ

* Sometimes pronounced ro'ayw.

تَجَارِبُ	experience	(in Persian تجربه)
مَنَازِلُ	stage, resting-place	(in Persian منزلت)
مَدَارِسُ	school	(in Persian مدرسه)
أَقْرَبُ	nearest
أَقْرَبُ	relations, relatives
أَكْبَرُ	greatest

* (ii) قَوَاعِلُ and قَعَالِيلُ from nouns which have a long vowel before the last radical, e.g.

تَصَاوِيرُ	picture	تَصْوِيرُ
مَفَاتِيحُ	key	مِفْتَاحُ
أَرْجَافُ	rumour ¹	إِرْجَافُ
جَوَامِيسُ	buffalo	جَامُوسُ
قَوَانِينُ	law	قَانُونُ
دَنَانِيرُ	dinar (a coin)	دِينَارُ
دَوَاوِينُ	divan (a collection of poems, etc.)	دِيَوَانُ
تَوَارِيخُ	history	تَارِيخُ
أَسَاتِيدُ	master, teacher	أُسْتَاذُ

* (iii) قَعَالِلَةُ

from (a) relative adjectives, e.g.

أَرْمَنِ (in Persian ارمنه) Armenian أَرْمَنِي

(b) from certain quadriliteral nouns (especially foreign ones) denoting persons, e.g.

تَلَامِيذُ student (of a school where religious sciences are taught) تَلَامِذَةُ (in Persian تلامذه).

² See para. 10 below.

أَفْوَاه	mouth	فَم
مِيَاه	water	مَاء
سَمَاوَات	sky, heaven	سَمَاء
حَوَائِج	need (in Persian حاجت)	حَاجَة

A broken plural خوانین xavanin is irregularly formed in Persian from خان xan 'khan' (a courtesy title).

7. A few Arabic broken plurals are used in Persian with a singular meaning, e.g.

عَمَلِجَات	workman (pl. of عَامِل)	عَمَلَة	(for عَمَلَة, pl. of عَمَلَة)
اَرَبَاهَان	master; owner of a landed estate (pl. of رَبّ)	اَرَبَاب
	country, region.	بِلَاد	(pl. of بَلَد)
اَدْوِيحَات	spice (pl. of دَوَاء)	اَدْوِيَة	(for اَدْوِيَة, pl. of اَدْوِيَة)
	fire.	نِيران	(pl. of نَار)
قُتُوحَات	conquest (pl. of قُتْح)	قُتُوح	(pl. of قُتْح)

8. In addition to the above plurals of plurals, certain Arabic nouns are used with a double plural in Persian, a sound feminine plural being made of the broken plural, or a broken plural of a broken plural, e.g.

جَوَاهِرَات	جَوَاهِر jewel	جَوْهَر
بُيُوتَات = an office in charge of Crown property, etc.	بُيُوت house	بَيْت
أَمَاكِن	(in Persian امكنه) أَمَكْنَة place	مَكَان
لَوَازِمَات	لَوَازِم necessities	لَازِم necessary

9. Broken plurals are extensively used in Persian. The Persian plural terminations ان -an and ها -ha are also added to the singular of Arabic nouns to form the plural.

10. Certain Arabic words are used in the plural in Persian but are rare in the singular. Among them are:

مزخرفات moṣaxrafat, nonsense (the singular مزخرف moṣaxraf is used only as an adjective 'nonsensical, absurd').

مهمات mohmalat, nonsense (the singular مهمل mohmal is used only as an adjective 'absurd').

موهومات mōuhumat, superstition(s) (the singular موهوم mōuhum is used only as an adjective 'fanciful, imaginary').

اراجیف arajif (pl. of ارجاف erjaf), rumours.

اولاد ōulad (pl. of ولد valad), children.

حشرات hasarat (pl. of حشرة ḥashrah), insects.

اسباب asbab means 'utensils, goods, chattels, luggage' in the plural; the singular سبب sabab means 'cause'.

حکومت مرکزی

هیچ کشور و هیچ جماعتی اداره نمیشود مگر اینکه نقطه اتکاء مرکزی مقتدری داشته باشد يك معنى امنیت همین است که حکومت مرکزی قدرت داشته باشد مفهوم مخالف این اصل نیز مؤید و مثبت همین اصل است یعنی در هر کشور و هر جماعتی که قدرت مرکزی ضعیف گردد و آن نقطه اتکاء سست و متزلزل شود آن کشور و آن جماعت اداره نمیشود معنى اداره نشدن يك کشور یا زندگی يك جماعت و قوم هرج و مرج و عدم امنیت است و بزرگترین وظیفه سیاسی هر دولتی در داخله حفظ انتظامات است عدالت و دادگستری محض حفظ امنیت است و امنیت باعتبار وجود عدالت دوام و استقرار پیدا میکند

EXERCISE 32

1. In spite of his youth he was not only fit to benefit from university education, but carried to the university a literary taste and stock of learning which would have done honour to a graduate. 2. There is not only conciseness in these lines but also elegance. 3. It will be my endeavour to relate the history of the people as well as the history of the government. 4. The wolf is hard and strong and withal one of the cleverest of animals. 5. Take a few of them, say a dozen or so. 6. How strong is the influence which universities and schools together have upon

Masculine & Feminine	Numbers	Masculine & Feminine	Numbers
ثَلَاثُونَ	30	مِائَتَانِ	200
أَرْبَعُونَ	40	ثَلَاثُ مِائَةٍ (مِئَةٍ)	300
خَمْسُونَ	50	أَلْفٌ	1000
سِتُونَ	60	أَلْفَانِ	2000
سَبْعُونَ	70	ثَلَاثَةُ آلَافٍ	3000
ثَمَانُونَ	80	أَحَدَ عَشَرَ أَلْفًا	11,000
تِسْعُونَ	90	مِائَةٌ (مِئَةٍ) أَلْفٌ	100,000
مِائَةٌ; مِئَةٌ	100	أَلْفٌ أَلْفٌ	1,000,000

2. In the case of the cardinals 3-10 Arabic uses the masculine form with a feminine noun and vice versa. The numerals 20-90 are declined as sound plurals. The oblique form is usually used in Persian, e.g.

عِشْرِينَ twenty.

3. 'thousand' has two plurals آلَاف and أُلُوف; the latter is used for 'thousands' in an indefinite sense.

4. Compound numbers from twenty onwards are formed by joining the units, tens and hundreds by وَ. The largest number is put first, but the units are put before the tens, e.g.

1945. أَلْفٌ وَتِسْعُ مِئَةٍ وَخَمْسَةٌ وَأَرْبَعُونَ

5. The ordinals are formed from the cardinals on the form فاعِل except (m.) 'first' and (f.), e.g.

ثَانِ (m.)	ثَانِيَّةٌ (f.)	second.
ثَالِثٌ	ثَالِثَةٌ	third.
حَادِي عَشَرَ	حَادِيَّةٌ عَشْرَةٌ	eleventh.

For the higher numbers the cardinals only are used; the ordinals of the units are joined to the cardinal of the tens to express the compound ordinals. If defined both parts of compound numbers take the article.

عِشْرُونَ (m. and f.) twentieth. الْعِشْرُونَ the twentieth.

حَادٍ وَ عِشْرُونَ (m.) حَادِيَّةٌ وَ عِشْرُونَ (f.)	} twenty-first.	الْخَادِي وَ الْعِشْرُونَ الْخَادِيَّةُ وَ الْعِشْرُونَ	} the twenty-first.
---	-----------------	--	---------------------

6. The numeral adverbs 'first, secondly, etc.' are expressed by the accusative of the ordinals, e.g.

أَوَّلًا first. ثَانِيًا secondly. ثَالِثًا thirdly.

These are frequently used in Persian.

7. The denominator of fractions when it lies between 3 and 10 inclusive is formed on the measure فُئْل except 'half' which is نِصْف, e.g.

ثُلُث a third. رُبُع a quarter.

The plural of fractions is formed on the measure أَفْعَال, e.g.

أَثْلَاث thirds.

The Arabic fractions are used in conjunction with Persian cardinals, e.g.

دو ثلث do sols, two-thirds.

سه ربع se rob', three-quarters.

8. The multiplicative adjectives 'twofold, threefold, etc.' are formed on the measure مَفْعَل, e.g.

مُتْنِي (in Persian مَتْنِي) twofold.

مُثَلَّث threefold; a triangle.

مُرَبَّع fourfold, square; a square.

9. Numeral adjectives expressing the number of parts of which anything is made are formed on the measure ثُعَالِيّ, e.g.

ثَنَائِيّ biliteral.

ثَلَاثِيّ trilateral; three cubits high or long.

رَبَاعِيّ quadrilateral; four cubits high or long; quatrain.

10. The Arabic Pronominal Suffixes are:

1st pers. sing. ـِي		pl. نَا
2nd pers. sing. (m.) كَ	dual (m. and f.) كُمَا	pl. (m.) كُم
2nd pers. sing. (f.) كِ		pl. (f.) كُنَّ
3rd pers. sing. (m.) هُ ¹	dual (m. and f.) هُمَا ²	pl. (m.) هُمْ ³
3rd pers. sing. (f.) هَا		pl. (f.) هُنَّ ³

e.g.

اللّٰهِي my God.

مَوْلَانَا our master, lord.

Occasionally an Arabic Pronominal Suffix is added to a Persian word, e.g.

نور چشمی nure casmi, light of my eye (= my son).

استادی ostadi, my master.

Note also the following expressions:

عَيْنُهُ himself (from عَيْن 'self, substance') used in Persian to mean 'exactly like', e.g.

شکل برادرم عینه شکل خواهرم است sekle baradaram âinaho³ sekle xaharam ast, My brother's appearance is exactly like my sister's.

این مملکت عینه مملکت ماست in mamlakat âinaho³ mamlakate mast, This country is exactly like our country.

¹ The zamme of هُ, هُمَا, هُمْ and هُنَّ is changed after ـِي, ـِي and ـِي into kasra.

² This is the title usually given to the poet Jalal od-Din Rumi.

³ See Introduction to Part II, para. 12 for the pronunciation of this word.

مُشار إليه¹ above mentioned, aforesaid (from أَشَارَ إِلَى to indicate).

مُدْعَى عَلَيْهِ the defendant in a lawsuit (from ادْعَى عَلَى to enter an action against).

11. The word ذُو is used with a following noun to denote 'possessed of' the quality indicated by the noun. It is declined as follows:

Nom. sing. m.	ذُو	f.	ذَات	dual m.	ذَوَا	f.	ذَوَاتَا	pl. m.	ذَوُو	f.	ذَوَات
Gen. sing. m.	ذِي	f.	ذَات	dual m.	ذَوَى	f.	ذَوَاتَى	pl. m.	ذَوِي	f.	ذَوَات
Acc. sing. m.	ذَا	f.	ذَات	dual m.	ذَوَى	f.	ذَوَاتَى	pl. m.	ذَوِي	f.	ذَوَات

An alternative masculine plural is أُولُو or أُولُ (nom.) and أُولَى (gen. and acc.). The first vowel of أُولُو and أُولَى is short. The vowel of ذُو and ذِي before the definite article is also short. E.g.

ذُو حَيَاتَيْن	amphibious.
ذِي رُوح	animate.
ذِي هُوش	intelligent.
ذِي نَفَع	interested in (an interested party).
أُولُو الْأَمْرِ	commanders.
أُولُو الْأَلْبَاب	intelligent, prudent (persons).

12. صَاحِب is also used to mean 'possessed of', e.g.

صَاحِب مَال sahebmal, rich.

صَاحِب خَانِه sahebxane, owner of the house, landlord.

In the above examples صَاحِب saheb forms part of a compound. In the following example it does not form part of a compound and takes the etafe, e.g.

صَاحِب تَالِيفَات زِيَاد اَسْت sahebe talifate ziyad ast, He is the author of many works.

13. اهل is used to denote 'capable of, possessed of, belonging to'. It takes the exafe, e.g.

اهل این کار نیستم ahle in kar nistam, I am not capable of doing this, I am not prepared to do this.

اهل فن ahle fann
اهل خبره ahle xebre } an expert, technician.

اهل کجائید ahle koja id, Where do you come from?

اهل انگلستان هستیم ahle englestan hastim, We are English.

14. Arabic prepositions are of two kinds: separable, i.e. those which can be written alone except when followed by a pronominal suffix, and inseparable, i.e. those which consist of one letter which is always attached to the following word.

(a) Inseparable prepositions:

ب in, by, with, e.g.

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ in the name of God (for بِاسْمِ).

بِاللَّهِ by God.

و by, e.g.

وَاللَّهِ by God.

لِ for, to, because of, e.g.

لِهَذَا therefore (for this).

لِ also means 'for the benefit of' (in opposition to عَلَى 'against') and the phrases بَرَّ لَهُ and بَرَّ عَلَيْهِ (عَلَى compounded with the Arabic 3rd pers. sing. masc. pronominal suffix and the Persian preposition بِر bar) are used in Persian to mean 'for' or 'in favour of' and 'against' respectively, and take the exafe, e.g.

قاضی بر له او حکم داد qazi bar lahe u hokm dad, The judge made an order in his favour.

كَه like, as, e.g.

كَذَا such like (like this).

This is also the case with the majority of prepositions in para. 14 (a) and (b) above, in so far as these carry the stress, but مَعْدُوكٌ and مَعْهُدَا, حَتَّى carry the stress on the initial or the final syllable.

16. Arabic adverbs are of two main kinds, inseparable particles, which are not used in Persian, and separate particles and nouns in the nominative or accusative.

(a) Separate particles:

بَل usually compounded in Persian with که, thus becoming بلکه balke, but, rather, on the contrary.

بَلَى yes.¹

فَقَط only.

لَا not. This is only used in Persian in compounds, e.g.

بَلَا شَرْطَ unconditionally.

بَلَا تَرْدِيدَ undoubtedly.

لَا أَقَلَّ at least.

لَا بُدَّ of necessity.

لَا يَنْقَطِعُ unceasingly (lit. it does not cease).

لَمْ not. This also is only used in compounds, e.g.

لَمْ يَزْرَعْ uncultivated (lit. he did not sow).

bal and balke are used after a negative expressed or implied, e.g.

نه تنها فردا (خواهد آمد) بلکه پس فردا هم خواهد آمد na tanha farda (xahad amad) balke pasfarda ham xahad amad,
 Not only will he come to-morrow, but he will come the day after tomorrow also.

نه فقط ما بلکه همه مردم بر اثر این پیش آمد متاسف شدند na faqat ma balke hameye mardom bar asare in pifamad mota'assef sodand.

Not only we but all the people were grieved at this event.

بلکه balke is also used after a rhetorical question to mean 'on the contrary', e.g.

اشتباه یعنی چه بلکه فی الواقع همدا این کار را کرده‌اید estebah ya'ni ce balke fel-vaqe' amdan in karra karde id,
 What do you mean? A mistake? On the contrary, you did it on purpose.

With an affirmative verb بلکه balke means 'nay rather', e.g.

این کتاب چهل ریال می‌ارزد بلکه پنجاه ریال in ketab cehel rial miarزد balke panjah rial,
 This book is worth forty rials, nay rather fifty rials.

In Colloquial Persian بلکه balke is sometimes used in the sense of 'perhaps', e.g.

بلکه آمده باشد balke amade basad, Perhaps he has come (after all).

(b) Many nouns can be used in the accusative as adverbs, e.g.

أَحْيَانًا	perchance, at times.	إِتْفَاقًا	by chance.
جَمْعًا	together.	نِسْبَةً	relatively.
أَلَّانَ	immediately, now.	فِعْلًا	at present.

(c) Certain prepositional phrases are also used as adverbs, e.g.

فِي الْفَوْرِ	immediately.	حَتَّى الْمَقْدُورِ	as far as possible.
بِأَخْرَةٍ (for)	finally, at last.	مِنْ غَيْرِ رَسْمٍ	unofficially.

17. Stress is carried on the final syllable of the forms given in para. 16 above, except بلکه balke which carries it on the initial syllable, e.g.

فَقَطْ fa'qat, only.
 دَائِمًا da'e'man, continually.

18. Certain phrases compounded of Arabic and Persian words are used as adverbs, e.g.

بِتَدْرِيجٍ be tadrij, gradually.

Stress in such compounds is carried on the final syllable.

¹ See Introduction to Part II, para. 8(d) for the pronunciation of this word.

22. Various Arabic phrases are used as interjections. Among them are the following:

- يَا اللَّهُ O God!
- الْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ Praise be to God.
- إِنْ شَاءَ اللَّهُ if God wills.
- مَا شَاءَ اللَّهُ what God wills.
- أَعُوذُ بِاللَّهِ I take refuge in God.
- إِسْتَغْفِرُ اللَّهَ I ask pardon of God.
- بَارَكَ اللَّهُ God bless (you); bravo.

معنی آزادی^۱

برادران و هم میهنان عزیزم

بحمد الله بفضل خداوند در سایه توجه شاهنشاه جوان جوانبخت بار دیگر با بدایره آزادی گذاشتید و میتوانید از این نعمت بر خوردار شوید البته باید قدر این نعمت را بدانید و شکر خداوند را بجا آورید از رنج و محنتی که در ظرف سی و چهار سال گذشته بشما رسیده است امیدوارم تجربه آموخته و عبرت گرفته متوجه شده باشید که قدر نعمت آزادی را چگونه باید دانست و معنی آزادی را در یافته باشید در این صورت میدانید که معنی آزادی این نیست که مردم خودسر باشند و هرکس هر چه میخواهد بکند در عین آزادی قیود و حدود لازم است اگر حدودی در کار نباشد و همه خودسر باشند هیچکس آزاد نخواهد بود و هرکس از دیگران قویتر باشد آنانرا اسیر و بنده خود خواهد کرد قیود و حدودی که برای خودسری هست همان است که قانون مینامند پس مردم وقتی آزاد خواهند بود که قانون در کار باشد و هر کس حدود اختیارات خود را بداند و از آن تجاوز نکند پس کشوری که قانون ندارد یا قانون در آن مجری و محترم نیست مردمش آزاد نخواهند بود و آسوده زیست نخواهند کرد این حقیقتی است بسیار ساده و روشن و هیچکس منکر آن نمیشود اما متأسفانه کتر کسی باین حقیقت ایمان دارد زیرا که غالباً می بینیم مردم حدود یعنی قانون را برای دیگران لازم میدانند اما رعایتش را برای خودشان واجب نمیشمارند اگر هرکس معتقد بود که رعایت حدود قانون تنها نسبت بدیگران واجب نیست بلکه نسبت بخود او هم واجب است تخلف از قانون واقع نمیشد و حال آنکه ما هر روز می بینیم بسیاری از اشخاص از قانون تخلف میکنند و کتر کسی است که متوجه باشد که اگر من تخلف از قانون را از طرف خود جائز بدانم دلیلی ندارد که دیگران هم تخلف از قانون را از طرف خودشان جائز ندانند در این صورت تخلف از قانون امری رایج و شایع خواهد بود و همان نتیجه دست میدهد که گفتیم یعنی آسایش از همه سلب میشود متأسفانه بسیاری از مردم چنین اند که هر وقت بتوانند زور بگویند میگویند غافل از اینکه اگر بنا بزورگوئی باشد امروز من میتوانم بزبردست خود زور بگویم اما فردا زبردستی پیدا میشود که بمن زور بگوید پس همین کس

APPENDIX II

Interjections.

The following is a list of some of the interjections in common use:

آفرین	afarin , bravo!
افسوس	afsus , alas!
به به	bah bah , bravo!
حیف	heif , what a pity!
خوش بحال او	xof be hale u , lucky fellow!
راستی	rasti , really!
اینک	inak , lo! behold!
زنها	zenhar , beware! have a care! mind!

The two last are used in Classical rather than in Modern Persian.

APPENDIX III

The Calendar.

The Muslim era is used in Persia. It dates from the morning after the flight (or hejre) of the Prophet Mohammad from Mecca to Medina on the 16th of July, A.D. 622. For civil purposes a solar year is in use. It begins with the 1st of Farvardin, which falls on the 20th, 21st, or 22nd of March. There are twelve months, the names of which are:

فروردین	farvardin .	مهر	mehr .
اردی بهشت	ordi beheft .	آبان (آبان)	aban (aban) .
خرداد	xordad .	آذر	azar .
تیر	tir .	دی	dei .
مرداد	mordad .	بهمن	bahman .
شهریور	fahrivar .	اسفند	esfand .

The first six months have thirty-one days and the last six thirty days, except Esfand, which has twenty-nine days. Every fourth year is a leap-year (کبیسه kabise) in which Esfand has thirty days.

The civil day begins at sunset.

The present year (1952) is, according to the Persian solar year, 1330/31.

The Muslim lunar year, by which religious holidays are reckoned, consists of six months of thirty days and six months of twenty-nine days as follows:

محرم	moharram.
صفر	safar.
ربيع الاول	rabi' ol-avval.
ربيع الاخر (ربيع الثانى)	rabi' ol-axer (rabi' os-sani).
جمادى الاولى (جمادى الاول)	jomadi ol-ula (jomadi ol-avval).
جمادى الاخرى (جمادى الثانى)	jomadi ol-oxra (jomadi os-sani).
رجب	rajab.
شعبان	sa'ban.
رمضان	ramazan.
شوال	favval.
ذو القعدة (ذى القعدة)	zol-qa'da (zel-qa'da).
ذو الحجة (ذى الحجة)	zol-hejja (zel-hejja).

In a period of thirty years an intercalary day is added to the last week of the year eleven times.

The following formula¹ gives the A.H. lunar year (= Anno Hegirae, or year of the Hejre) equivalent to the A.D. year:

$$(A.D. - 621.54) \div .970225.$$

The following formula gives the A.D. year equivalent to the A.H. lunar year:

$$(A.H. \times .970225) + 621.54.$$

The present year (1952) is, according to the lunar year, 1371/2.

Popularly the year is divided into a number of periods, which include forty days known as the چله بزرگ celleye bozorg at the summer solstice when the heat is at its height, and forty days at the winter solstice when the cold is at its maximum. The celleye bozorg is followed by the چله كوچك celleye kucek, a period of twenty days when the heat and cold respectively are still considerable. There is also a period at the end of the winter known as the سرماى پيرزن sarmaye pire zan.

¹ This formula is given by Duncan Forbes, Grammar of the Persian Language (Calcutta, 1876), p. 60.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS

The weekly holiday is celebrated on Friday.

A period of three to five days' holiday is observed at the New Year. The 13th of Farvardin, known as سیزده بدر sizdah be dar, is also observed as a public holiday. The anniversary of the Constitution, to commemorate the Grant of the Constitution by Mozaffar od-Din Shah in 1906, is a public holiday; it falls on the 14th Mordad.

The official religion is the Ja'fari or the Ithna 'Ashari rite of Shi'ism.

The chief religious holidays are the 10th Moharram, known as عاشورا afura or روز قتل ruze qatl, the day on which the Imam Hosein was killed¹; the 20th Safar, forty days after afura, and hence known as اربعین arba'in; the 27th Safar, in commemoration of the martyrdom of the Imam Reza; the 28th Safar, in commemoration of the martyrdom of the Imam Hasan; the 29th Safar, in commemoration of the death of Mohammad, known as رحلت حضرت رسول rehlate hazrate rasul; the 17th Rabi' I, in honour of the birthday of Mohammad; the 13th Jomadi I, in commemoration of the death of Fatima, the daughter of Mohammad, and the 20th Jomadi II, in celebration of her birthday; the 27th Rajab, known as عيد مبعث ide mab'as, the anniversary of the day Mohammad began his mission; the 15th Sha'ban, the anniversary of the birthday of the twelfth Imam, Hazrate Hojjat; the 19th Ramazan, in commemoration of the day on which Ali was fatally wounded, and the 21st and 23rd Ramazan, in commemoration of the death of Ali; the 1st Shavval, known as عيد الفطر id ol-fetr, when the fast of Ramazan is broken; the 10th Zol-Hejja, known as the عيد قربان ide qorban, the day on which pilgrims to Mecca make a sacrifice; and the 18th Zol-Hejja, known as the عيد غدیر ide yadir, the anniversary of the day when Ali became Caliph.

APPENDIX IV

Currency, Weights and Measures.

I. CURRENCY

The monetary unit is the rial (ریال).¹ A rial is equal to 100 dinars (دینار). The following terms are also used:

1 shahi (شاهی) = 5 dinars.

1 sannar (سنار) = 10 dinars.

1 abbasi (عباسی) = 20 dinars.

yak hazar (یک هزار) = 1 geran (which was formerly equal to 1000 dinars).

1 geran (قران) = 1 rial or 1.25 rials.

1 toman (تومان) = 10 rials.

Thus dah toman va se abbasi means 100 rs. 60 dinars; haft rial sannar kam means 6 rs. 90 dinars.

2. WEIGHTS

16 mesqals (مقال) = 1 sir (سیر).

10 sirs = 1 carak (چارک).

4 caraks = 1 mane tabriz (من تبریز).

100 mane tabriz = 1 xarvar (خروار).

1 mesqal is equal to 71.6 grains or 4.64 grams.

1 sir is equal to 2 oz. 185 grains or 74.24 grams.

1 mane tabriz is equal to 6.5464 lb. or 2.97 kilos.

1 xarvar is equal to 654.64 lb. or 297 kilos.

The man varies from town to town. The one most commonly used in North Persia is the mane tabriz. The mane sah is equal to two mane tabriz. The mane rei is equal to four mane tabriz. The mane noh abbasi is equal to 7 lb. 5½ oz.

¹ In 1959 the rate of exchange to the pound sterling was 210 rs.

3. MEASURES

4 gerehs (گره) = 1 carak (چارک).

4 caraks = 1 zar' (ذرع).

6000 zars = 1 farsax (فرسخ).¹

1 gereh is approximately 2½ ins.

1 zar' is approximately 41 ins.

1 gaz (گز) is approximately 1 metre.

The term angost (انگشت) is used for a finger's breadth.

1 jarib (جریب) is, in some areas, approximately 1 hectare but it varies considerably in different parts of the country.

In certain parts of the country land is measured in qafiz (قفیز), approximately ¼ of a jarib; the qafiz, like the jarib, varies in extent in different parts of the country. sang سنگ, taq طاق, zorre جره, sareje سرجه and sabu سبو are terms used in different parts of the country in measuring water. The quantity of water represented by these terms varies from district to district.

The metric system is also used, and is tending to supersede the local measures.

APPENDIX V

Abjad.

Certain numerical values are assigned to the letters of the alphabet. The arrangement of the letters of the alphabet in numerical order is known as abjad, so called from the first of a series of meaningless words, which act as a mnemonic to the numerical order:

⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈	⋈ ⋈ ⋈
ا	ب	ج	د	هـ	و	ز	ح
۱	۲	۳	۴	۵	۶	۷	۸
اَبْجَدْ	هَوَزْ	حُطَيْ	كَلِمَنْ	سَعْفَضْ	قَرِشَتْ	تَعَدْ	ضَطْنُ

¹ The length of the farsax, however, tends to vary in different parts of the country. It approximates in some parts to 3½ miles. It tends to be used to express the distance normally covered by a mule or on foot in an hour. In certain parts of the country the distance of the farsax is double the normal farsax, i.e. some 7 miles, in the same way as the mane sah is double a mane tabriz.

A doubled letter (i.e. a letter with a tafđid) has the value of a single letter only.

پ has the value of پ.

ژ has the value of ز.

چ has the value of ج.

ك has the value of ك.

Thus, the death of the poet Ahli which took place in A.H. 942 is recorded as follows:

پادشاه شعرا بود اهلی Ahli was the king of poets (= A.H. 942).¹

APPENDIX VI

Intonation.

1. Rules for word stress have been given in the relevant sections in the Grammar. Word stress is, however, usually subsidiary to sentence stress, as will be shown in the following examples. The sentence can be divided into a series of Intonation Groups, which conform acoustically to certain patterns. It is not unusual to find these groups composed, on the one hand, of a single word, or, on the other, of several words. Each Intonation Group contains one prominent syllable, which is differentiated from the other syllables of the Intonation Group by breath-force or stress. This breath-force or stress is also accompanied by tonal prominence due to a change of intonation direction or glide.

2. If the sense of an Intonation Group is not complete it conforms to a certain tone pattern which indicates that there is more to follow. This can be called a Suspensive Intonation Group. If the sense is complete the Intonation Group conforms to another type which can be called a Final Intonation Group.

3. The intonation of Persian falls between two principal tone levels. There is a rise to the high tone level on a syllable on which there is breath-force or stress, and if the stress is final either there is a downward glide on it to the low tone level or a gradual descent to the low tone level begun on the final stress and continued on the remaining words or syllables in the Intonation Group.

4. Sometimes, in order to break the monotony of an Intonation Group, a glide from the high tone level to the low tone level is introduced; this is usually unaccompanied by breath-force and is thereby differentiated

in dokkan'dar | aj'nase xodra | be qeī'mate monaseb | 'miforufad ||

This shopkeeper sells his goods at a reasonable price.

dar tabes'tan | 'namisavad inja zendagi kard ||

In summer it is impossible to live here.

If the finite verb is not in a final position there tends to be only a slight rise of tone in the final Intonation Group followed by a downward glide on the final stress, e.g.

fo'ru' kardand | be xandi'dan ||

They began to laugh.

8. Suspensive Intonation Groups. The unstressed syllables preceding the stressed syllable are on the low tone level. There is a rise to the high tone level on the stress and the high tone level is then maintained to the end of the group, e.g.

vasa'ele tahsil | dar ta'mame fahrhaye bozorge iran | fara'ham mibafad ||

Facilities for study are available in all the large cities of Persia.

sha'liye esfahan | dar saxtane anva' va aqsame zorufe noqre'i | os'tad and ||

The people of Isfahan are masters in making different kinds of silver vessels.

The following would be a possible alternative version if the internal glides in the second suspensive Intonation Group were omitted:

sha'liye esfahan | dar sax'tane anva' va aqsame zorufe noqrei | os'tad and ||

If a subordinate clause precedes the principal sentence, there tends to be a rise to the high tone level on the last syllable of the final word of the subordinate clause and this is accompanied by breath-force, which, even if it would normally fall elsewhere, is moved to the final syllable of the clause, e.g.

har ce az godrat va qorveye dōulate markazi mika'had | dar at'raf va aknase
 As the power of the central government decreases people in the distant mamlekat | mar'dom | gar'dan az eta'at | bi'run kaside | toyi'an mikonand || parts of the country, having thrown off its allegiance, rebel.

In the above example the stress in the word mikahad is shifted from the first syllable to the final syllable.

If a subordinate clause follows the principle sentence, it sometimes begins on the low tone level and gradually descends below that level, e.g.

efle'ha | 'nadaram | ke cixi 'bexoram ||
 I have no appetite to eat anything.

In the case of auxiliary verbs such as tavanestan 'to be able' and xastan 'to want' there is usually a rise to the high tone level on the auxiliary verb while the following dependent subjunctive clause or clauses descend gradually to the low tone level. If the initial syllable of the auxiliary carries the stress, the descent begins on the immediately following unstressed syllables of the auxiliary, e.g.

'namitavanad | tasmim 'begirad | ke 'beravad ||
 He cannot make up his mind to go.

az inke ba adab va rosume mamlekat afna na'bud | natavanest jehate
 Because he was unacquainted with the customs of the country, he could not dōulate matbu'e 'xod | ahdnameye tejara'ti | mon'a'qed namayad || conclude a commercial agreement for his sovereign government.

9. Interrogative Sentences.

(a) Sentences containing an interrogative word such as ce 'what'. Stress is usually carried on the interrogative word, which rises to the high tone level. There is either a downward glide on the interrogative word to the low tone level or a gradual descent beginning on the syllable carrying the stress and continuing throughout the remaining words or syllables of the Intonation Group. The tonal pattern of interrogative sentences of this type does not, therefore, materially differ from that of statements, e.g.

ko'ja mixahid beravid ||

Where do you want to go?

esme in aba'di | cist ||

What is the name of this village?

If the emphasis is not on the interrogative word but on some other word in the sentence, the stress will be carried on this word and not the interrogative, thus

esme 'in abadi cist ||

What is the name of this village?

(b) Sentences without an interrogative word. In sentences of this kind, the interrogation is marked by an upward glide to the high tone level on the final syllable of the last word in the sentence, or by a rise to the high pitch level on the final stress; the remaining words or syllables continue on the high tone level or there is a very slight fall on the final stress, e.g.

aqabe 'kasi | 'migardid ||

Are you looking for someone?

az 'in | 'meil | 'mifarmaid ||

Would you like some of this?

az' in | baraye so'ma | 'beyavaram ||

Shall I bring you some of this?

Questions introduced by the particle aya are treated in the same way as questions which contain no interrogative word, e.g.

— — — —
 'aya | in | māle sōmast ||
 Is this yours?

— — — —
 'aya | far'da | 'miravid ||
 Are you going to-morrow?

The Mongol Conquest of Persia (p. 95)

The two hundred years' period of history of the Mongols, the conquest of Tamerlane and other events which happened in Persia before the Safavids, each in their own turn, were the cause of murder, plunder, bloodshed and innumerable acts of destruction in Islamic countries generally and in the country of Persia in particular. In these attacks Persia suffered injury more than any other and having entered upon a period of extraordinary decline (having fallen into a precipice of strange decline) trod a descending arc. Another thing which contributed to (aided) the decline and decay of Persia and which day by day closed the doors of progress upon her was, in addition to the superstitions and fancies which resulted from the conquest of the Mongols and Turks, the ignorant fanaticism of the people and the fixing of the centre of civilization in Western Europe and America. In view of the internal obstacles which prevented her relations with foreign countries, Persia was unable to adopt civilization easily from Europe or, like European countries, to advance along the road of progress.

*Persia's Relations with Europe (p. 109)

In the time of Shah Tahmasp an Englishman called Antony Jenkinson set out for Persia in A.H. 969 (A.D. 1561-2) on a mission on behalf of Elizabeth, the queen of England. He brought a letter for Tahmasp I, the Safavid king, from the aforementioned queen relating to the creation of friendly relations and the preservation of the well-being (lit. interests) of humanity and the interests of the two parties. The aforementioned envoy came to Qazvin, the capital of Shah Tahmasp, in the month of Zol-Hejja 969 (August 1562); but since he was not acquainted with the manners and customs of Persia he was not able to conclude a commercial treaty on behalf of his sovereign government. Having no alternative (lit. remedy) he returned. The same envoy (representative) came once more to Persia in the year A.H. 970 (A.D. 1562-3) on behalf of the Russian government; and (but) on this occasion also he returned without obtaining any result. In the year A.H. 972 (A.D. 1564-5) another group came to Persia on behalf of the Moscow Company and the shah treated this group also with kindness. He gave permission for English and Russian merchants to trade and travel freely in Persia.

The Coming of the Sherley Brothers to Persia (p. 122)

The Sherleys were two brothers, called Antony and Robert, who in A.D. 1597 (A.H. lunar 1007), coming through Ottoman territory and with Persia against the Ottoman government and the opening of commercial relations for the sale of Persian silk together with the presents which Shah Abbas had given. A quarrel broke out between Hosein Ali Bak Bayat and Antony Sherley in Italy; Antony separated from him and went to Spain. He did not return to Persia. But Robert Sherley, Antony's brother, who had remained in the service of Shah Abbas, became the object of his favour, but, when there was no news of the coming of Antony, Shah Abbas' favour towards him ceased. Robert Sherley, however, since he was a young man of determination and good conduct, again attracted the love of the shah towards himself. The first charge which was given by Shah Abbas to Robert Sherley was his choice as the leader of a group of the army and his despatch to make war on the Ottoman government. Similarly he took part in the wars which Shah Abbas undertook in the years A.H. 1013 (A.D. 1604-5) and A.H. 1014 (A.D. 1605-6) with the Ottoman government. He was wounded three times. In one engagement he killed a large number of the Ottoman army and took their leaders prisoner. And in one battle when he came face to face with the Ottomans, after drawing up his own force, when he saw that his soldiers were in fear at the large number of the enemy, he turned towards them, addressed some words [to them] and then himself first attacked the enemy. Having given courage to his soldiers and in this way defeated the Ottomans, he became the object of Shah Abbas' favour. Subsequently he was sent by Shah Abbas in A.H. 1016 (A.D. 1608) from Isfahan to Europe. After a long journey and the carrying out of his mission he went to England in A.H. 1020 (A.D. 1611-12) and finally after eight years' travelling he returned to Persia in A.H. 1024 (A.D. 1615). (The end)

EXERCISE 24 (p. 165)

An ungrateful peasant was criticizing God most high saying, 'Why has He made a marrow to grow (lit. become green) on a slender bush and made the small acorn to grow on a tall tree? If I were the Creator of created things I would act differently to this.' The peasant was thinking thus when an acorn from the top of the tree hit his nose so that blood flowed. The peasant said to himself, 'See the weakness of my judgement and counsel. If this acorn had been a marrow it would have killed me.' Then he asked forgiveness and pardon for his boldness.

Persia and England (p. 175)

After [the reign of] Shah Abbas the Great the English East India Company received in A.H. 1038 (A.D. 1628-9) a new farman concerning the silk trade from Shah Safi, his successor. But they could not obtain again all the concessions and rights which they had acquired in the time of Shah Abbas. Although an envoy from Charles I of England came in the month of Sha'ban 1039 (April-May 1630) with a letter to Shah Safi [asking] for help and assistance to English merchants and nationals in Persia, which expression of love and friendship was well received by the ruler of Persia, in the time of this king the most important part of the Persian trade was in fact (lit. essentially) in the hands of Dutch merchants. On a second occasion Charles I sent another letter to Shah Safi [asking] for help for the British East India Company. This letter was also well received by the Safavid ruler and he sent a friendly letter to the king of England. Finally in A.H. 1053 (A.D. 1643) the English East India Company founded a factory for themselves in Basra. Meanwhile, the trade of the Dutch in Persia daily increased and they engaged in rivalry with the English.

A General Amnesty for the Tribes (p. 176)

In accordance with the proposal of the [chief of] staff of the southern division, approved by his Imperial Majesty, an order for a general amnesty for all the tribes of Fars has been issued. This order has been transmitted by the commander of the division to the chiefs of the tribes. According to information [received] from the general staff it was announced in the course of the transmission of this order that the tribes could keep their arms with them and remain armed provided that they received a special permit. In addition to the transmission of the general amnesty to all the tribes, assurances on every account were given by the government [to the tribes] and they were encouraged to hope for the necessary measures of assistance from the government.

*Desire (p. 176)

I was a child. We had gone in summer to summer quarters. Every day in the afternoon, the children used to come down from the mountain behind the sheep and goats. They used to say that there was a green meadow near the top which had much water and that from that high place one could see the town and the [whole] world, and that unless one saw it one could not describe it. I wished (lit. my heart wished) that I was as fearless and strong as they were. Perhaps they also wished that they had the facilities for being lazy which I had. One day I said to the village headman, 'I am going with the children tomorrow to the meadow. How far is it to there?' He laughed and said, 'You have to go a long way to get there and you will get very tired.' I said, 'If the meadow is behind this mountain its no distance for me. How far is it really?' He said, 'One has to go up for five hours.' My heart sank in fear but there was nothing for it. The next day I set out with firm steps for my objective with the village headman and the children. I said to myself that as long as I had life in me I would not show I was tired. I was still in the full ardour of my determination when the village headman said, 'We have arrived. Here is the meadow.' Out of happiness I ran a few steps and said, 'I am ready to go to the summit. But you said it was five hours' walk. It is only two and a half hours since we set out.' He said, 'If I had said it was two hours' walk you would have arrived here tired. I said five hours so that you would do the two hours' walk easily.'

Persia and England (p. 195)

During the reign of Shah Abbas II the influence of the English became appreciably less than formerly whereas (lit. but on the contrary) the domination and influence of the Dutch in Persia and the Persian Gulf was increasing, and they had become so emboldened by the progress of their affairs in Persia that their warships even destroyed the factories of the English in Basra. But subsequently as a result of a war which took place in Europe between the two aforementioned governments their commercial relations in India and Persia were interrupted and the Persian government benefited from the opportunity to lessen the influence and concessions of the two governments in Persia. Among other things the Persian government refrained from paying the sum which was paid annually to the English on account of the customs' revenue of Bandar Abbas. The East India Company had recourse to the English king, who at that time was Charles II; and he wrote a letter to Shah Soleiman on this matter in the year A.H. 1081 (A.D. 1671-2). Until towards the end of the twelfth century A.H. the influence of the Dutch was appreciably greater than that of the English in the Gulf; but towards the end of this century certain new events which occurred in Europe weakened (lit. were the cause of weakness to) the Dutch. At the same time also the English government, because of differences which had broken out between the East India Company shareholders, united all the old companies in the year A.H. 1120 (A.D. 1708) and founded a big company called the Company of English Merchants for Trade with the East Indies. The king of England also meanwhile gave the factors (lit. heads) of the company consular and diplomatic rank at the courts of the rulers of India and their influence increased. (The end)

Tehran (p. 195)

Tehran had not yet become as large as it is today; and most of the avenues which are the glory of the capital and the names of which everyone in the city knows had not yet come into existence; and at the time of the sunset call to prayer the gates of the city would be shut. Traffic from inside the city to outside and within the city itself would be stopped

*The Mixing of Tongues (p. 203)

There is no language in the world which can keep itself free from an admixture of other languages, except the language of a people who never mix with other people. But this is impossible because words from one people penetrate into [the language of] another people through trade, travel and intercourse and even through the hearing of the fables and traditions of other peoples. All the languages of the world in this way have loan words. One must consider what are the results achieved through the mixing of one language with another. The mixing of languages comes about in several ways (lit. is of several kinds). One way is that a language naturally takes whatever it has not got from its neighbour or from further afield and adapts it to its own pronunciation and taste, i.e. it swallows the word, chews and digests it, and divests it of its original forms and peculiarities; and even according to its own inclination sometimes inverts the letters, alters them, or changes the meaning. If the word is primitive it makes it derivative and if derivative primitive and so on ad infinitum, just as the Arabs did and still do with foreign words. We also have done this with some Arabic, Turkish and European words; but with us this was not general practice.

The Railway Health Service (p. 207)

In construction works as in every other great or small work attention must be paid from the beginning to the health and physical well-being of the workers. After much experience (lit. many tests) it has been realized that if all the tools and implements for work are available but the engineers, master-craftsmen, supervisors, foremen and workmen are weak and sick matters will not progress. For this very reason the question of the health of the workers is regarded as one of the effective factors in the progress of construction work. Large construction concerns which are engaged in work in towns are perhaps not greatly in need of health organizations because municipal health organizations and others watch over the physical well-being of the townspeople; but workmen who are engaged in road construction work on the roads and in locations far from inhabited places have no access to medicines and treatment. For this reason if there is the slightest negligence concerning the health of such workers, affairs cease to progress in an orderly fashion and the physical well-being of thousands of persons is endangered. The health department of the railway construction department, which was founded for the comfort of the railway workers, guarantees their physical well-being. The administration of this department, with the help of special branches which it has for the preservation of the physical well-being of the workers, takes action along three lines: (i) precautionary measures for the prevention of the spread of infectious diseases, (ii) the care (treatment) of sick workers, and (iii) help to the injured. Since contractors for constructional work are bound by the contents of their undertakings to make available (ready) for the workers houses, drinking water and foodstuffs in accordance with the principles of hygiene, the department of health watches over the performance of these undertakings to protect the workers from contagious diseases and carries out at the proper time the necessary inspections by means of technical officials and inspectors. In addition in time of necessity it inoculates with serums workers who are engaged in operations near [pumping water] from the Karun in order that the trees shall be watered. Different kinds of date palms, pomegranates, olives, and bananas, etc., have been planted in that garden; and even tropical grasses and cuttings have also been sown in the cultivated part (lit. sown fields) of the above-mentioned garden by way of experiment (lit. examples). Millions of tumans have been spent on the garden, the purchase of necessities and implements for agriculture and the import of saplings from abroad.

Some Observations concerning Literature during the Period of the Constitution (p. 217)*

A series of political, scientific and literary events, to describe and expand on which a separate book would be necessary, prepared the way for the appearance of the constitution, the imperial rescript for which was issued in A.H. lunar 1324 (A.D. 1906). In brief it can be said that Persian literature, as well as carrying on the old themes and styles, also acquired in this period certain new features. It is possible to summarize them as follows: (i) foreign languages, especially French, which had begun to spread in Persia from the beginning of the Qajar period, became current and intercourse between Persia and Western Europe became greater than it had been formerly. The literary compositions of those regions, poetry and prose, stories and novels, became well known in this country. As a result of this mixing not only were a number of foreign books translated and a number of foreign words incorporated into the Persian language but also some modern writers, both in concept and form, adopted to a certain extent the style and method of thought of the west. Sometimes they went [even] further in this course and departed from the style of Persian. (ii) Liberal thoughts, social and political ideas, the idea of equality of political rights, the problem of freedom of thought and the freedom of the press, and patriotic sentiments, were among the new subjects which came into [Persian] literature, and had in truth, in poetry and prose a special éclat. Able and talented poets and skilful writers appeared and occupied themselves in interpreting these thoughts in the best possible words. Ideas of this sort were even spread among the common people in the form of popular ballads by the grace of poetical talent such as [that possessed by] Aref of Qazvin. Among the poets of this period one can mention, by way of example, Adib al-Mamalek Farahani and Adib Pishvari among the deceased and Parvin E'tesami in the world of women; and among the living Mr Mohammad Taqi Bahar (Malek osh-Sho'ara), who is a master in the qasideh (a kind of ode) and in historical and literary research. In truth, many eloquent and skilful poets and writers have appeared in our age, who have indeed kept Persian poetry and prose alive, made it more eloquent and expressive, breathed into it new meanings, and shown themselves to be the true successors of the great men of ancient times. (iii) Poetry and prose have abandoned something of their ancient lofty, literary status, which was usually far removed from the life of the people and separated from the tastes and needs of the common people and come nearer to the mind and life of the masses. In keeping with the needs of society new features (lit. freshness) have appeared in its subject matter and poetry and prose have become occupied with (lit. turned towards) social subjects, and writers, in developing these subjects, have paid attention more to the subject matter and to expressing their meaning than to verbal ornament and the use of long sentences. The Central Government (p. 231)

No country and no community can be administered unless it has a strong central point of support. One meaning of security is just this that the central government should have power. The meaning of the opposite to this also confirms and substantiates this same principle: that is to say no country and community in which the central power is weak and whose point of support is unstable and tottering, will be [properly] administered. A failure to administer a country or the life of a community or people [properly] means anarchy and lack of security. The greatest internal his rank and worth will indeed be great in the eyes of men, his position in society will be high, and his words will have the greatest possible effect on the ears and hearts [of men]. It must be realized that several conditions are necessary [of fulfilment] for a writer and unless these conditions are fulfilled in the person of the writer, the title of writer cannot be applied to him, and he cannot carry out the responsibilities imposed by the work of a writer.

*The Meaning of Freedom (p. 246)

My dear brothers and fellow-countrymen:

Praise be to God you have once more by the grace of God under the shadow of the care of [our] young and auspicious sovereign stepped into the ring of freedom and you can enjoy this gift (lit. bounty). Of course you must realize the value of this gift and give thanks to God for it. I hope that you have learnt and taken warning from the trouble and toil which you have suffered during the last thirty or forty years and that you know how to recognize the value of the gift of freedom and have understood its meaning. If this is so you know that the meaning of freedom is not that men should be self-willed and that everyone should do whatever he wants. Constraints and limits are necessary to the essence of freedom. If there are no limits set and everyone is self-willed, no one will be free and whoever is the strongest will make others his captives and slaves. The constraints and limits which are set to self-will are what is called the law. Thus, men will be free when the law is operative and everyone knows the limits to his authority and does not transgress them. A country, therefore, which has no law, or in which the law is not put into execution and respected, its people will not be free and will not live at ease. This is a very simple and obvious truth; and nobody denies it. But unfortunately few people believe this truth because usually we see that people consider limits, i.e. the law, necessary for others but do not hold the observation of the law incumbent upon themselves. If everyone believed that the observation of the limits set by the law was not only incumbent with reference to others but also with reference to himself, transgression of the law would not occur, whereas every day we see many people transgressing the law. Few people understand that if they consider it permissible for themselves to transgress the law, there is no reason why others also should not consider transgression of the law permissible for themselves. In this event transgression of the law will become common and widespread and the result will be as we said, namely all will be deprived of ease. Unfortunately it is the nature of many people to exert undue force whenever sometimes in a limited number of persons; and there were and are some peoples among whom responsibility for the legislative and executive power is accepted by the whole people. The first type of government is called autocratic and despotic government; the second aristocratic government and the third popular government which Europeans call democracy. Each of these three types had and have different forms, into a discussion of which I shall not enter, since it is not my purpose to give you a lesson in political science. I shall merely say this that peoples as they become more learned and mature incline more towards the third type, namely popular government, except that since usually large populations and extensive countries are involved, peoples cannot every day assemble in one place and exercise legislative and executive duties directly. Accordingly the best way which they have devised is for the people to make a group of persons their representatives to legislate in their name. We call the collectivity of such representatives the national consultative assembly. The assembly also chooses a few people to execute the law, who are called the council of ministers. Both these two groups are under the supreme leadership of one person who, if he is elected, is called the president of the republic and, if he is permanent and hereditary, the king. You, the Persian people, by virtue of the fundamental laws which were established about thirty-five years ago have a representative monarchical government. But if you consider [the matter] carefully you will agree that during these thirty-five years you seldom enjoyed the gift of true freedom, namely [a state of affairs in which] the law was executed and respected. Several times representative government, i.e. the basis of your constitution, was disrupted. Have you ever thought what was the reason for this? I will tell you. The fundamental reason was this that you did not rightly know the value of this gift and you did not exert yourselves to perform the duties imposed by it, and many out of ignorance and some because of ulterior motives and personal desires transgressed those conditions which must be observed in representative government. What are the conditions which must be observed in representative government? Do not forget that the meaning of representative government is that authority over the affairs of the country rests with the people. And of course you know that whoever has powers also has in return for those powers a responsibility. Therefore, if he does not act according to the exigencies imposed by his powers as his conscience dictates, he will be answerable; and to be answerable does not always mean that some one will call him to account. To be answerable usually amounts to this that a person suffers a terrible end: if there is no creature who will call him to account, the Creator will do so. Being called to account by the Creator cannot always be deferred until the day of resurrection. Usually being called to account by the Creator takes place in the life of this world and a person receives the reward of his actions. As has been said:

Do not be careless concerning the retribution [which you will receive] for your actions.

Wheat grows from the wheat [seed] and barley from the barley [seed].

Now let us see how does a people become answerable if it does not act with regard to its powers in accordance with its legal duties and the demands of its conscience? A people consists of different classes. Each one has a special duty in the matter of representative government. It is the duty of the common people to exercise care in the election of their representatives to the national consultative assembly, to elect honest representatives, to watch over their conduct after their election, to give evidence of sound thoughts, that is liberal beliefs, which mean law-abidingness, that is patriotism; and to believe that to desire the well-being of the public takes precedence over the pursuit of selfish personal interests. It is incumbent upon every individual of the community to choose a respectable and lawful occupation and craft in accordance with his talents and to strive to carry that out. It is the duty of the representatives of the people to exercise care in passing laws and supervising their execution and not to consider the function of representative of the people as a means for the furtherance of selfish interests and desires or ambition. The duty of ministers is to consider themselves the executors of the law and the servants of the people and always to have in mind the well-being and interests of the people when proposing laws to the assembly and when carrying out the laws. The duty of government servants, in executing the laws with integrity and uprightness, is to facilitate the work of the ministers and to bring about the ease of their fellow-men, whose servants they are. The duty of pressmen is to guide the thoughts of the people and to lead the nation and the government along the path of well-being. The duty of the king is to defend the fundamental laws, to watch over the actions of the government, to consider all individuals among the nation his children, to treat them in accordance with fatherly love and to make his words and actions an example for the people. Altogether, the duty of all classes of the nation is to make their words and actions compatible with the principles of honour and reputation because, as one of the wise men of Europe said, if despotic government is founded on fear, representative government is based on the honour of the individuals of the nation. And it is especially the case that if those who are in charge of the affairs of the common people do not in their actions make honourable conduct their aim, representative government will not progress. Finally, all classes must co-operate with each other and be united in bringing about

I handed the money over to him and I asked him to give me a receipt. 6. If he had had greater experience he would not have made this mistake. 7. Although the style of Persian writers of earlier centuries differs from the style of writers of the present day, it is not difficult to understand their works. 8. I forgot to tell him that I was not coming. 9. I shall finish the work before you return. 10. By the time you finish this it will be dark. 11. Take him into the next room and give him a seat until the minister is ready to receive him.

EXERCISE 17a

1. It would have been better if you had gone to see him instead of writing to him. 2. Instead of visiting Shiraz this spring as I had planned

I shall stay at home. 3. I went straight home from the office yesterday instead of going for a walk as is my custom. 4. I shall not go without telling you. 5. When he had finished his work he went home without telling his brother. 6. It is difficult to find the way without a map. 7. He suddenly got angry without the slightest reason. 8. Other than him I knew no one there. 9. I do not know what to do other than to tell him. 10. If I had thought that it was possible to do other than pay his fine I would not have paid it. 11. I wrote the letter before I knew that he was coming. 12. The cost of living was not so high before the war as it is now. 13. Will you buy some cheese on the way home if you go before me? 14. He looked so happy that I knew before he began to speak that he had good news. 15. There was no one there but him. 16. They will not come unless you invite them. 17. After he had read the letter he gave it to me to read. 18. I would have told him what you told me if I had seen him after I had seen you. 19. If you still want to see me after you have seen him, let me know.

EXERCISE 18a

1. Please tell your brother to come here as quickly as possible. 2. If we go now perhaps we shall get to the station before the train starts. 3. The building of the factory was finished the year before last and it began production last year. 4. We were listening to the radio when suddenly the telephone bell rang. 5. If you had listened to what I said you would not have made so many mistakes in your work. 6. If you listen carefully to what I say the matter will be clear to you. 7. He asked me to come for a walk with him. 8. While we were going for a walk yesterday it began to rain. 9. When I saw him he was bargaining with a draper in the bazaar. 10. I do not know whether he has returned or not. 11. I went to see my brother yesterday afternoon; if you had returned yesterday I would have asked you to come with me to see him. 12. If he has returned from the village I will give him your message. 13. We shall return before it gets dark. 14. I do not know whether he can help me or not.

1. My object in asking you to come to see me today was to transmit to you the new orders which have arrived from Tehran. 2. You cannot go without obtaining his permission first. 3. If he has not already decided to come, I shall try to persuade him to come. 4. As soon as the battle began it was clear that the enemy would be defeated. 5. I shall not only write a letter to him but I shall also go to see him. 6. As I was going home I suddenly remembered that I had forgotten to lock the door of my office; I returned and as I was going up the steps I saw that I had not only left the door open but had also left the light on. 7. As I told you yesterday what you suggest is impossible. 8. As I crossed the bridge it began to snow. 9. This morning as I was going along the street I saw a man selling apples. I went up to him and asked how much the mann. He said 7 rials. I said that was too dear and asked what his lowest price was. He replied that he would not sell for less than 7 rials. Finally after much argument I persuaded him to let me have them at 5 rials the mann.

EXERCISE 23 a

As I was crossing the bridge over the river I met one of my former colleagues. I had not seen him for years and wondered (thought to myself) whether he would recognize me, let alone speak to me. When he saw me he stopped and greeted me warmly. It was impossible for us to exchange¹ more than a few words because I was on the way to my work and it was growing late and he had business in the city. Accordingly we parted having first arranged² to meet on the following evening when we hoped that we would both have more leisure.

EXERCISE 25 a

I pushed back³ the crowds and passing from the rear, walked down the living avenue of people until I came in front of a group of Arabs where stood the white man with the grey beard. I would have run to him only I was a coward⁴ in the presence of such a mob, and would have embraced him, only being an Englishman, I did not know how he would receive me, so I did what cowardice and false pride suggested,⁵ walked up to him, took off my hat and said, 'Dr Livingstone, I presume?'

EXERCISE 26 a

1. If the man from whom I bought the horse had not been so ready to sell it for such a low price I should never have bought it. I wish I had not bought it so hastily; if I had waited a little I might have found a much better horse to buy. 2. Why the Jackals Howl Outside the Town

And now, just outside the walls surrounding the telegraph office, rose a prolonged and dismal¹ howl,² followed by another and yet another; while from the city, like an answer, came back the barking³ of the dogs. 'Are those jackals howling outside?' I asked, 'and do they come so close to the town?' 'Yes,' answered the Khán, 'they always do so, and the dogs always answer them thus. Do you know why? Once upon a time the jackals used to live in the towns, just as the dogs do now, while the latter dwelt outside in the desert. Now, the dogs thought it would be much nicer to be in the town, where they would be sheltered from the inclemency of the weather, and would have plenty to eat instead of often having to go without food for a long time. So they sent one of their number to the jackals with the following message: "Some amongst us," they said, "are ill, and our physicians say that what they need is a change of air, and that they ought if possible, to spend three days in the town. Now, it is clearly impossible for us dogs and you jackals to be in one place at the same time, so we would ask you to change places with us for three days only, and to let us take up our quarters in the city, while you retire into the desert, the air of which will doubtless prove very beneficial⁴ to you also." To this proposition the jackals agreed, and during the following night the exchange was effected.⁵ In the morning, when the people of the city woke up, they found a dog wherever there had been a jackal on the previous night. On the third night the jackals, being quite tired of the desert, came back to the gates of the town filled with pleasant anticipations⁶ of resuming their luxurious city life. But the dogs, being very comfortable in their new quarters, were in no hurry to quit them. So after waiting some time, the jackals called out to the dogs, "naxofha-ye soma xub fode", ending up with a whine, just such as you heard a minute ago and (as Mírzá 'Abdu'lláh, who is a native of Işfahán, will tell you) just such as you may hear any day in the mouth⁷ of an Işfahání or a Yezdí. But the dogs, who are Turks and speak Turkish, only answered "Yokh! yokh!" ("No! no!"), and so the poor jackals had to go back into the desert. And ever since then they come back at night and hail the dogs with the same question, as you heard them do just now; and the dogs always give the same reply, for they have no wish to go back to the Villages cluster round the foothills,² wherever water exists, or can be found, but are seldom less than five miles apart. Towns of importance are anything from one to two hundred miles distant from each other. Mountain ranges are never far distant: salt marshes, and a few large expanses of salt water lie at their feet.³ Such wild vegetable and animal life as exists is that of the desert, though wherever man has settled the mulberry, walnut and other fruit trees thrive. The heat in summer is very great, rising to 140 degrees in the sun; in winter the thermometer may fall below zero, the cold being more formidable⁴ because it is ushered in⁵ by freezing⁶ sand-storms, lashing tiny pebbles like hail into the traveller's face, thereby increasing his misery and that of his mount.⁷ But when the traveller is fortunate enough to be able to travel by caravan and not by car the desert has its compensations: in summer the long, cool night is the best time to travel. At dusk⁸ the sky is illumined with rainbow tints along the unbroken horizon: within an hour of sunset it is dark; the blue turns to lapis lazuli, till it merges⁹ into the deeper purple of the dark horizon and the Milky Way¹⁰ appears overhead.

Shiraz

The capital of the province of Fars is Shiraz, famous for its wine and honey, the home and the grave of the two most famous poets of Persia, Hafiz, the contemporary of Dante, and Sa'di. It has been laid in ruins more than once by earthquakes, but can still show noble¹¹ mosques and fine bazaars. The city lies in the midst of a long plain, some twelve miles across, terminating towards the east in a salt lake, the home¹² of countless water fowl. In spring the plain is green with heavy crops of cereals and

The Beginning of the Movement for Constitutional Reform in Persia

The Persian constitutional movement of the early twentieth century was the result of a process which had been going on in Persia, largely silently, throughout the nineteenth century. Up to this time the basic theories of the state and of life generally were set in the frame¹ of Islam. The intrusion² of the West into Persia in the nineteenth century perhaps more than any other single event led Persian thinkers³ to question the old theories and bases of the state and to seek some new or additional base for it. The disastrous⁴ wars with Russia in the early part of the century concluded by the Treaty of Turkomanчай in 1828 convinced⁵ Persians of the need of reform, military and otherwise. Further, it was through the various military missions which came to Persia from 1807 onwards that Persians had first become acquainted with modern military and scientific techniques and with the political changes⁶ which were taking place in Europe. Mīrzā Šāleḥ, the first Persian known to have written an account of British parliamentary institutions, was sent to England in 1815 in pursuance of plans for military reform. He also visited Turkey and Russia. Writing in his diary of the tanẓīmāt he castigates obscurantist⁷ mullas who opposed them. He gives in his diary what is probably the first account by a Persian of the French revolution. Diplomatic travel also played an important role in the dissemination⁸ of knowledge of western institutions. Abu'l-Ḥasan Shīrāzī, who was sent on a mission to England by Fath 'Alī Shāh, wrote in his Ḥayrat-nāmeḥ an account of the justice and security which he found in England, comparing it with the tyranny which prevailed in his own country. Nāṣir al-Dīn himself made three journeys to Europe, the first in 1873. The Persian merchant communities, both inside and outside Persia, were another important channel through which modern ideas spread. The Persian press published by members of the Persian communities in Istanbul, Calcutta and elsewhere also did much in the latter part of the nineteenth century to encourage reform.

The Evolution of the Landowning Class in Persia

With the rise of Islām and the incorporation of Persia into the Islamic empire, land ownership was of two main kinds: on the one hand was private property, and on the other was land which had no private owner, the ultimate ownership of which came to be vested in the Muslim community and in the imām as its representative. With the division of the dār ul-islām into a number of semi-independent and independent kingdoms, at times at war with each other, there was inevitably a modification in the theory that all land which had no private owner was held by the imām for the people, and the tendency was for the rights of the imām in this respect to pass to the temporal ruler. Under the Seljūqs there was a re-integration of the eastern part of the Abbasid Caliphate. Ultimate ownership of such land which had no private owner came to be vested in the Seljūq people and the sultān as their representative. The imām, meanwhile, played an uneasy part in the background. He no longer delegated his temporal power to the sultān, but was required merely to give legal and religious sanction to the activities of the 'ruling khān'. The conception of 'the people' was never very strong and tended to be overshadowed by the elements of absolutism which gained ground as the traditions of the steppe weakened. The Mongol position was broadly similar, but the element of consultation was weaker and the break-up on the fall of the Mongol Ilkhān dynasty greater because of the weakening and ultimate disappearance of the caliphate. With the disintegration of the Ilkhān kingdom and its break-up into constantly warring principalities, the emphasis came to be laid on the individual ruler. Under the Ṣafavids there was to some extent a reaffirmation of the idea of 'the people', not as a conquering horde who were the owners in common of their conquests, one group of whom or one of whose number was by common consent their leader, but as a national group ruled over by the shāh. Ultimate ownership and all rights vested in him, not as the representative of the people, but as a divinely appointed ruler, or, according to his more extreme followers, as an emanation of the Godhead. His rule, therefore, could not be other than absolute, and submission to his government could not involve any measure of consultation with the ruled, nor did it require their freely accorded consent. Under the Qājārs the religious element was considerably weakened, but the element of absolutism remained and was untempered by any element of responsibility. This increase in the element of absolutism ran right through society and affected the general attitude to land and also the position of the peasants on the land.

In so far as the landowning classes were concerned, the feudal landed with neighbouring princes or landowners, while the need to maintain economic well-being broadly speaking set a limit to the exactions of the landowners and government officials upon the peasants, though many instances of places being ruined by over-taxation can be cited. With the rise of the Mongols the restraint afforded by Islām was temporarily at least removed, nor was there any longer a limit set to taxation by considerations of economic self-interest. Local communities were further subject to a greater degree of interference by the civil and military officials than heretofore, and this involved a corresponding weakening in local self-government. Further, certain practices, which had formerly been customary only, received the sanction of law through imperial decrees. The peasant as a result, became more effectively tied to the land than was the case before. This dependence was further increased when military service under the Qājārs became a charge on the land and not on the individual.

As long as the peasant could appeal to a court presided over by the qāḏī which was independent of, or, at least not entirely subordinate to, the landowner, muqṭa', or tuyūldār, he had some possibility of redress. This was to some extent the case under the Seljūqs. The religious institution, it is true, had been virtually incorporated into the general structure of the state, but there was still some balance between the various organs of the administration. Under the Mongols land disputes in some cases were still referred to courts presided over by qāḏīs. Under the Šafavids a change occurred. On the one hand, the independence of the qāḏīs was reduced, while, on the other, in so far as they tended to become assimilated to the landowning class, they were less likely to support the claims of the peasants against their lords. Moreover, both the tuyūldārs and the holders of hereditary soyūrghāls were in many cases given full powers to decide all cases in the area granted to them, to the exclusion of the officials of the central or provincial government. This tendency to extend the jurisdiction of the local landowner and tuyūldār and to concentrate all power in their hands continued in Qājār times. The result was a further weakening in the element of local self-government and an increase in the dependence of the peasant.

Meanwhile, however, other influences began to be felt. Contact with foreign countries was increasing. Military reverses, especially at the hands of Russia in the early part of the nineteenth century, had already shown that some change was needed if Persia was not to be left behind by the technical superiority of certain European countries; in the latter part of the nineteenth century the Young Turk movement and the movement for reform headed by Jamāl ud-Dīn Asadābādī (Afghānī) had a profound influence. Further, the ever-growing financial stringency was exercising the minds of both the ruling classes and the intellectuals: but whereas the former were looking for ways to provide themselves with better military forces and more money to pay for the extravagances of the royal courts, the latter resented the tendency of their rulers to attempt to solve financial difficulties by the grant of commercial concessions to foreigners, on the grounds that such grants would reduce Persia to the economic and political tutelage of foreign powers. They sought rather a larger share in the government of the country, and looked to the acquisition of the technical knowledge of western European countries to provide them with greater material ease. These various and conflicting movements and tendencies came to a head in the Constitutional Revolution of 1905-6 and resulted in the grant of the Constitution by Muẓaffar ud-Dīn Shāh in 1906. With this began a new period in the history of Persia. In so far as land tenure is concerned, the break in legal theory was perhaps greater than the change in practice and in the general attitude to land, which in some ways remained essentially medieval. Power, moreover, still largely remained in the hands of the landowners and tribal khāns, and it was not till the reign of Riẓā Shāh that this was materially altered.

'With her unrivalled knowledge of the Persian language, Professor Lambton has produced a work that will long remain the standard textbook. As was to be expected, the treatment of pronunciation and the spoken language is particularly excellent...an extremely useful work for which teacher and student will be equally grateful.'

Journal of The Royal Asiatic Society

'The need for a new graded grammar of modern Persian has long been felt. Hitherto we have been fobbed off with exiguous and sketchy products, sometimes not even accurate. Professor Lambton's new Persian Grammar therefore answers a real need; and it is profoundly gratifying that the void has been filled by one whose knowledge of modern Persian, both written and spoken, is unique... This grammar is comprehensive, and contains all that is necessary for the student to become thoroughly familiar with the language. We now have a Persian grammar which is accurate, complete and scholarly, and which at the same time contains sufficient reading matter to enable the student to handle the language for himself. Teachers of Persian will be particularly grateful for this book.'

Oxford Magazine

'It is a pleasure to recommend this grammar to students of Persian, for I believe it is the best we have in English. One can admire the authoress for undertaking such a difficult task, and she has accomplished it with distinction. Although it is primarily for the contemporary Persian language, the book also serves as an excellent introduction to the classical language.'
